Governor, Attorney General, Tax Commissioner and Comptroller General Will Consider Situation.

TAX EQUALIZATION ACT AMENDMENT IS NEEDED

County Arbitration Clause Rendered Practically Unenforceable by Court Decision, States Fullbright.

Whether Georgia will have an extraordinary session of the legislature will rest in the hands of Governor Hugh M. Dorsey, Attorney General R. A. Denny, Comptroller General William A. Wright and Tax Commissioner Henry J. Fullbright at an important conference, to be held on November 30, when all petitions and matters demanding such a proclamation will be discussed and a definite decision reached. It was announced Saturday night, following the receipt of the supreme court ruling on the tax equalization act by capitol officials.

For the past three months there has been a constant discussion of the probability of the governor calling an extra session of the legislature to provide financial relief for the state's educational institutions, while of late the supreme court of the United States decision relative to section 6 of the equalization act and charges of graft and corrupt practices on the part of lobbyists during the last session of legislators have added weight to the situation.

Readers' Service

Since the announcement of the decision on section 6 of the equalization act there has been considerable confusion as to the real effect it would have on the entire body of the legislation, but this was cleared yesterday when Commissioner Fullbright announced, after a careful study of the complete rulings that county arbitration was rendered practically unenforceable because it fails to provide due process under the constitution of the United States. It is not specifically stated by the opinion of the supreme court that the section is unconstitutional, but when it was ruled that the plaintiff in the Brooks county case had a right to a final hearing, which section 6 does not provide, before the tax assessment was definitely fixed, this was considered as rendering the section without any legality.

The sixth section requires an examination of returns of the taxpayers of the county by the board of tax assessors, and it is made their duty to assess and fix a just and fair valuation to be placed on the property returned. When any change is made in the valuation of the property as fixed by the taxpayer in his return, he must be informed of the board's action.

Readers' Service

Should he be dissatisfied, he may demand an arbitration and have a hearing before the arbitrators as provided in the act. These arbitrators are required to render their decision in ten days, or else the valuation as fixed by the county board shall stand affirmed and be binding in the premises.

S. Morton Turner and Henry Morton, executors of the estate of the late J. C. Morton, returned the property for a valuation of $40,000. The Brooks county board of assessors rejected the return and made an assessment of $80,000 on the estate. A hearing was demanded and arbitrators and an umpire appointed. One arbitrator fixed the assessment at $50,000, another at $65,000 and the umpire at $65,000.

With this disagreement the property was held to be assessed at $65,000.

General Wrangel Decorates Atlanta Red Cross Worker

Constantinople, November 13.—Sixteen American Red Cross workers have been decorated by General Wrangel for services rendered the civilian population of the Crimea and south Russia. They include Dr. Livingston Farrand, of Washington, D. C., order of St. Anna, the highest civilian order of the old Russian government; Howard L. Bridges, Atlanta, Ga., order of St. Stanislaw of the second class; Wilfred H. Day, Richmond, Va., order of St. Anna of the third class.

Major Howard L. Bridges has been with the American Red Cross since July, 1917, serving in practically every capital of Europe as an executive officer. During the war he was stationed in the London and Paris headquarters. Since that time he has been assigned at Rome, Athens, Venice, Sebastopol and in various towns of the Crimea.

Mr. Bridges' brother, Russell Bridges, of Atlanta, recently received a letter from the former telling of a water voyage taken in company with General Wrangel and wife.

Prior to his entry into the Red Cross Mr. Bridges was secretary and treasurer of the Alkhest Insurance system of Atlanta.

Unique Tactics Used to Prevent Auto Accidents

Dual Role Ordered for New York Policemen.
Also Hoped to Recover Stolen Cars.

New York, November 13.—New York city today decided upon unique tactics to prevent automobile accidents. By the plan every patrolman in the city will be obliged to play the dual role of expert mechanic and distributor of "tracts." For three weeks he will remain cast in this double part.

The plan, outlined this afternoon by Police Commissioner Enright to all inspectors and captains, is as follows:

Policemen will stop every automobile they meet and inspect mechanically for defective parts. If serious faults are found the chauffeur will be directed to drive to a garage for repairs. If the defects are only minor, the owner's name will be taken and an inspector sent from headquarters to order such repairs as he considers necessary for public welfare. Each blue card will be armed with "police motor inspection certificate" which he will paste on the machines to prevent re-inspection.

Policemen also will hand to every chauffeur they stop a book containing traffic regulations, bearing on the cover the commandment, "Thou shalt not kill." The pamphlet contains also a list of "don'ts for motorists," including one which reads: "Parking your car for hours means a summons and the loss of time and money."

As a by-product the police expect to identify stolen cars in their campaign.

Hunger Strikers Fed Like Infants Six Months Old

Doctors Think They Will Be Able to Save Lives of
Prison.

Cork, November 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—"Not out of danger, but there is no reason why we should not pull them through," said the fall doctors in a report on the condition of the nine hunger strikers in Cork jail, who yesterday broke their fast of ninety-four days.

Every three hours the prisoners are given liquid nourishment. This diet will be continued until Monday when the first solid food in the shape of boiled fish, prepared with milk, will be served them. With one exception they were able to read the newspapers this morning. All of them drank large quantities of very sweet lemonade with much enjoyment. Their first food yesterday was such as is given to infants less than six months old. Their appetites are returning rapidly. John Crowley said this morning: "I could eat anything."

AUGUSTA MAKING EFFORT TO SECURE M. E. CONFERENCE

Wesley Memorial Also Extends Invitation, and Prominent Pastors Believe That Atlanta Will Win.

CONFERENCE DIVISION WILL BE CONSIDERED

Body Is Too Large at the Present Time, and Some Methodists Believe That Better Results Could Be Secured.

BY DR. THOMAS M. ELLIOTT.
A real fight is now going on in the North Georgia conference between Augusta and Atlanta in an effort to secure the 1921 session of the north Georgia Methodists.

The conference has not met in Augusta since 1911. St. John's church, of that city, has sent an invitation asking for the next year's meeting, and offering to entertain two members on the Harvard plan, giving them lodging and breakfast. Every Methodist pastor in that city is backing up the invitation, and most of the preachers from that section of the state are in sympathy with it.

Now Atlanta likes for the preachers to come here in a body also, and has entered her invitation to meet here again in Wesley Memorial church next year. And the preachers like to come to Atlanta. But as to how this matter will be settled remains to be seen Monday morning, when it will be fought out to a decision.

Signs Favor Atlanta.
The conference entertainment committee brought back to conference the Augusta invitation, asking for an expression of sentiment. Wesley Memorial folk then got busy. The signs now point to the conference meeting here again next November.

The committee on entertainment is composed of Revs. J. P. Yarbrough, W. W. Carroll and C. M. Baker and J. A. Mangor and Miller B. Bell.

Another matter to receive attention in the conference Saturday was the notice served that a paper will be introduced Monday morning asking that a commission of seven men be appointed from this body to confer with a like number from the South Georgia conference, with instructions to form, if possible, some plan whereby the two conferences may unite and divide the entire state into three conferences.

Whatever plan they may evolve is to be confirmed by the two conferences, and become operative at the next annual meeting after the confirmation. Should the joint commission fail in arriving at a plan of making three conferences, the paper to be introduced then will ask that the commission be authorized to formulate some scheme of dividing this conference into two separate bodies.

Another paper referring to something of a similar nature will be introduced Monday asking that the time for the conference be changed so as to allow seven days for each annual sitting.

Why Change Is Sought.
The conference has become so large in membership that it is difficult to entertain it with any success. But it is believed by the majority of members that greater growth would be experienced should the division be made.

The Wesley Memorial hospital received much attention in the conference Saturday. The report of the board of trustees was read by Major R. J. Quinn and received the hearty attention of the ministers and laymen.

The report showed that the institution was founded in 1905, during which year it cared for 355 patients, while in the present year it has cared for 1,768. The first year's income was $7,316, while that of this year is $48,461, and the first Christmas was offering to care for charity work amounted to $2,340, while that of the past Christmas reached the sum of $14,269. Only $14,500 has been spent by the institution in construction work and the rates are as low as possible, no profit being sought or desired.

Among the patients treated at the Wesley Memorial hospital this year the denominations were represented as follows: Methodists, 624; Baptists, 268; Presbyterians, 141; Catholics, 139; Unitarians, 107; Jews, 85; Episcopalians, 49; Church of Christ, 45; Lutherans, 3; Christian Scientists, 1; no denominational connection, 484.

States Represented.
The states were represented in the following order: Georgia, 1,665; Alabama, 27; Florida, 12; Tennessee, 3; South Carolina, 19; North Carolina, 3; Virginia, 21; Louisiana, 1; New Jersey, 1; Mississippi, 1; the District of Columbia, 1.

GREECE TO PASS ON CONSTANTINE AND VENIZELLOS

Election Today Will Decide Whether Premier Is to Be Replaced by the

VENIZELLOS ADHERENTS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

While Country Is Outwardly Calm, Trouble Is Expected After Election
No Matter Which Side Wins.

Athens, November 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—All Greece is deeply absorbed in tomorrow's election, the outcome of which is generally expected to be the return of Premier Venizelos and the liberal party to power by a large majority. The election is regarded as having the greatest influence on the country's future.

Although he has expressed himself as confident of victory, Premier Venizelos has been conducting a most active campaign. He returned to Athens on Thursday in time to address an armistice gathering, where he was given an ovation by more than 100,000 persons.

For several days, Greece has been full of rumors, charges and counter charges and claims and denials of victory by royalists and Venizelists, while the country outwardly is calm, trouble is forecast after the election, no matter which side wins. If Venizelos gets the majority of 270 of a total of 365, which his supporters claim, it is expected royalists will denounce the elections as fraudulent. Should the royalists win, the Venizelists have announced they will not accept the political detestment of their chief, King George and Constantine.

King George and Constantine.
Earl Granville, the British minister, in a statement denies that King George ever corresponded with former King Constantine, except on one occasion—a non-political reply to a letter from Constantine. The minister says that the British policy toward the non-return of Constantine has been clearly outlined. DeMott's Gleaner, former premier and leader of the element supporting the return of former King Constantine to the throne of Greece, who is the opponent of Premier Venizelos in the elections, has requested passports to Italy. If he fails to be elected his parliamentary immunity expires.

Nationalities were ranked as follows: Americans, 1,732; Greeks, 6; French, 2; Russians, 2; Germans, 3; Canadians, 1; Scottish, 1; Cubans, 1; Hungarians, 1.

Ground for the new Wesley Memorial hospital was broken on October 5, this year, and work will be continued on the new plant until it is completed.

FRATERNAL ORDER MEN FAVOR FAIR

BY M. D. GLEASON.
(Mr. Gleason was asked by Councilman R. A. Gordon, who started the world exposition movement in Atlanta, to interview leaders of fraternal organizations and learn their attitude in regard to the fair.)

A world's exposition for Atlanta in 1925 would prove an immense asset to the city, the state and to the whole south, and the results of such an exposition would be apparent long after the actual event has become history, according to statements given out by leaders of various fraternal orders throughout the south Saturday.

Colonel George Napier, past imperial potentate of the Mystic Shrine and attorney general-elect, said: "I think it would be a grand thing for the state of Georgia, if a world's fair could be held in Atlanta in 1925, and I am heartily in favor of it if the time is right financially to hold it."

Irish Republic Building.
H. G. Keeney, recording secretary of the Friends of Irish Freedom: "Our organization has gone on record as endorsing this movement, and one of our leading members, an eminent physician of Atlanta, has told us that he would give the site for a large building for the Irish republic. I took an active part in the Cotton States exposition, and, having seen some of the great benefits derived from that fair, I would expect still greater results from this one."

Sam Greenberg, delegate to the National Federal Directors' convention next year at San Antonio, Texas: "It will be a great thing for this section, and I feel sure would help me in landing the convention for 1925 for Atlanta. I have been meeting these men for years, and I want to show them that Georgia is the greatest state in the union."

J. T. Dabney, past sachem of Comanche tribe of the Redmen: "You can say for us that our 1,100 members will back the movement, and we will inaugurate a movement looking toward kindling the fire of the great council in Atlanta that year."

J. E. Bodenhamer, past grand master Independent Order of Odd Fellows of the State of Georgia: "A world's fair held in Atlanta would keep the different lodges throughout the state, and they in return would help make the fair a great success. We can be counted on to help, and we will immediately launch a movement to hold our international world's convention in Atlanta that year."

George Winters, one of the most popular ball players who ever played with Atlanta: "I used to live in St. Louis and saw the benefits derived from that world fair. I believe Atlanta would, on account of her location, derive even greater results than did St. Louis."

$40,000 IS GIVEN TO GEORGIA TECH

General Education Board's Donation Indicates High Standing School Holds
Among Rivals.

Acknowledgment of a donation of $40,000 to the Georgia School of Technology by the general education board of New York city, to help the institution in its present financial straits, was made Saturday by K. G. Matheson, president of Tech.

Tech is said to be the first state educational institution ever to receive aid from the board. Moreover, it has long been an established custom of the board to make its donations in the form of general endowments. Very rarely has the board given funds toward the maintenance of any institution.

Dr. Matheson, in announcing the gift Saturday, stated that the sum will go a long way toward solving the crisis Tech faced at the adjournment of the legislature, when its request for $125,000 emergency appropriation was defeated in the final hours of the session, after having unanimously passed the house.

On the pledge of the Rotary club to help the institution, Dr. Matheson obtained the largest and probably the best faculty in the history of the school—a faculty made necessary by the remarkable growth of the school. Although the Rotary club, it is understood, has met with some success in securing the Tech fund, the $40,000 appropriation from the general educational board, state Tech officials, comes as a godsend and will probably enable Tech to maintain a high standard throughout the current year, at least.

A high tribute was paid by Dr. Matheson to Dr. Wallace Bullrich, president of the board, and widely-known patron of the cause of education. "He is recognized throughout the country as one of the great educational administrators of today," said Dr. Matheson.

Tech is glad to receive this magnificent gift," Dr. Matheson said, "first, because we need it sorely; and, second, because it is such inspiring recognition of Tech's standing and work from such high sources."

In giving the $40,000, the board made it understood that it is only for one year, by the following paragraph in its resolution:

"Resolved, That the executive officers of the general educational board be, and are hereby, authorized, within their discretion, to contribute to the Georgia School of Technology a sum not to exceed $40,000, to be expended during the year 1920-1921, toward the amount needed for increase in teachers' salaries within the period mentioned, it being expressly stipulated that this appropriation be made for one year only."

In the $40,000, the board made it understood that it is only for one year, by the following paragraph in its resolution:

"Resolved, That the executive officers of the general educational board be, and are hereby, authorized, within their discretion, to contribute to the Georgia School of Technology a sum not to exceed $40,000, to be expended during the year 1920-1921, toward the amount needed for increase in teachers' salaries within the period mentioned, it being expressly stipulated that this appropriation be made for one year only."

Approximate receipts of $12,000 and an approximate enrollment of 9,500 members had been reported up to Saturday night. It was announced by Julian V. Boehm, chairman of the fourth annual Red Cross roll call who closed his desk at the end of the week a very tired man, not altogether satisfied with the response of the people to the appeal of the world's greatest organization of relief and human service, but still not discouraged.

Monday, he announced, will be a clean-up day with the women's booths running in full blast in the lobby downtown, with picked committees canvassing the downtown business district and various industries where the workers can be seen without interfering with their duties, and with committees in outlying territory making "final" "clips and whistles" canvases.

City Is Being Evacuated
as Rapidly as Possible.
All Reports Indicate That the Overthrow of the Wrangel Army Is Complete.

Sebastopol, November 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—The forces of General Wrangel in the Crimea are in a most desperate situation, the bolsheviki having broken through all the lines of defense, are now attacking the Wrangel army in the rear.

The evacuation of Sebastopol probably will be effected by Sunday, according to quarters close to General Wrangel, quoting him to that effect.

Thousands of refugees, panic-stricken, filled the streets and wharves of Sebastopol. Ships of many nations are hurriedly taking refugees aboard and the American Red Cross is loading its supplies. Rear Admiral Newton A. McCully, commander of the American naval forces in Russian waters, will stay at Sebastopol until the last minute with a small guard on the American destroyer Overton. The American colony has been taken aboard the Overton.

It is reported the bolsheviki have sent an ultimatum to General Wrangel demanding unconditional surrender of the "white" army.

ALLIED FLEETS PREPARE TO AID

Paris, November 13.—The Russian soviet forces have won control of the Tethyan of Perekop, leading to the Crimean peninsula, and the allied fleet is preparing to aid the anti-bolshevik commander in the Crimea, it is extremely bad, according to dispatches received today by the French foreign office. The allied fleets, it is stated, are preparing to aid in the evacuation of certain districts in the Crimea.

The bolsheviki have advanced beyond Perekop, the advance guard, and have captured twelve million cartridges, eighteen cannons, one tank, three armored trains, ten thousand shells and much transportation material.

PEOPLE IN FLIGHT FROM SEBASTOPOL

London, November 13.—Sebastopol is being evacuated and British authorities are loading up the ships in Constantinople to take refugees from that city, says a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from the Turkish capital.

Eighty thousand persons in Sebastopol seek transportation from the city, says a Constantinople dispatch to Reuters, Ltd. The dispatch, which was filed yesterday, says the number of ships available is limited, and that it is probable it will be impossible for more than 20,000 to embark. The first boat loads of refugees have arrived at Constantinople, it is said, but were not permitted to land, as housing facilities are limited and food is scarce. Their plight is declared to be very grave.

GREECE TO PASS ON CONSTANTINE

Whether the opposition as headed by Gounaris will win the elections, making possible the restoration of power to former King Constantine, is a matter of opinion.

Representatives of the allies in Greece are watching the election with keenest interest, both England and France having strongly indicated their opposition to any government which would favor the return of Constantine.

It is the belief in allied circles that the defeat of Premier Venizelos would probably result in assumption of the throne by Constantine. The Gounaris party is making a determined fight for success and the Venizelos adherents charge that Gounaris has the full support of all pro-German influences.

The election of Gounaris in the opinion of the allied observers, would mean the return of Greece to German domination, but these same observers regard the re-election of Venizelos as almost certain.

M. Venizelos' action in permitting his opponent to return to Greece, although called, has caused an agreeable impression throughout Greece. The opposition, however, accuses the premier of entirely disregarding the constitution by the step. It says that Venizelos should facilitate the arrival in Greece of Prince Paul and resign immediately.

Newspapers favorable to M. Venizelos point out his achievements, one of them saying his policy "has led our small kingdom to a big one" and that "he has saved Greece from Germany's clutches."

PANAMA CANAL REPORTED PAYING OPERATING COST

Washington, November 13.—The Panama canal is now fully self-sustaining, and had there been no change in the rules of measurement such as recently made, would show a comfortable surplus over cost of production, according to the current Canal Record, official publication of the zone. The statement does not show the exact proportion of tolls paid by American ships, nor does it indicate the deficiency, if any, that would have to be met from the national treasury, if America's share were exempted.

During the last fiscal year total operating expenses were $6,548,272, and receipts $6,835,871, leaving a profit of $287,599. This does not take into account interest on capital invested, amounting to $267,151,696, representing the entire cost of the canal.

The total cost of operation of the canal since it was opened has been $26,657,766, and total revenues to the end of the past fiscal year, $26,657,766, less certain deductions on account of refunds of tolls which would make the deficit on that score $2,221,091. Instead of a surplus of $2,878,312, had the original rules of measurement been adhered to.

HARDING UNABLE TO FISH OR PLAY

Storm Interferes With Plans of President-Elect. Point Isabel Party Begins to Break Up.

Point Isabel, Texas, November 13. Cut off by an unseasonable storm from recreation on land or sea, President-elect Harding spent today in Point Isabel reading and making preliminary preparation for the speech he will deliver next Thursday at New Orleans.

The president-elect and his party virtually were marooned for the day, the cold norther, which blew up yesterday still holding sway on the fishing grounds off Laguna Madre and a downpour of rain making the winding dirt road into Brownsville practically impassable. He had hoped at least to go in for a golf game at the Brownsville Country club, but automobile drivers pronounced the trip impracticable.

Wants Another Try at Tarpon. Unless the weather moderates by tomorrow the Harding party may be moved to a Brownsville hotel. Local weather forecasts, however, indicate that the storm would be over in a few hours, and that warmer weather would follow. Mr. Harding wants to remain here and get one more try at tarpon fishing off Point Isabel if possible. It is about 20 miles to Brownsville along a road that is little more than a trail through cactus and mesquite and for 15 miles of the way there are no houses visible from the roadway. An old style narrow gauge railroad train of two cars hauled by gasoline engines makes the trip each way once a week. Mr. Harding's party, consisting of his two fishing trips here, also left for his home.

Harry M. Daugherty, close adviser of the president-elect, was one of those who disappeared, having been called to Columbus, Ohio, by the death of a sister-in-law. Senator Elkins, of West Virginia, who has been Mr. Harding's companion on his two fishing trips here, also left for his home. It is expected that Edward B. McLean, the Washington publisher, will leave the party on Thursday at New Orleans before the departure for Panama. Mr. Harding has invited Will H. Hays, the republican national chairman, to make the Panama voyage as his guest, but no definite acceptance has been received.

Unable to Fish or Play. Unable to either fish or play golf today, Senator Harding visited for the first time the office set up in the Point Isabel hotel by his secretary, George B. Christian, Jr. He also called on a number of other members of his party in the heated rooms of the hotel, which was erected for summer accommodations and not shelter guests against a norther such as that which blew the coast last two days. He found most of his fellow adventurers clustered about a small stove that had been erected hastily in the large room that serves as a hotel lobby.

During his call at Mr. Christian's room the president-elect gave instructions for disposition of the most urgent letters and telegrams that have come to him here. He decided that most of the communications be filed away, however, until his vacation trip is over.

One of the messages that has reached Mr. Harding here is an invitation to visit the city and republic of Panama during his week's stay in the canal zone. Despite his hesitancy in his present position to enter the territory of any foreign nation, he is understood to have replied that he would be glad to receive a delegation to formally present the invitation and to have promised that he would make the visit if he found it possible.

BUSINESS IS SOUND IN SOUTH AMERICA

Washington, November 13.—Despite the falling off of South America's favorable trade balance with the United States, conditions in most Latin-American countries seem to be fundamentally sound, according to Acting Director Charles E. Herring, of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

"As the normal market for raw materials on which the economic prosperity of Latin-America depends is re-established, conditions there will right themselves," Mr. Herring declared in a survey of trade conditions. "It is to be expected that prices are definitely reaching a level and consumers in the United States and elsewhere resume their normal purchases. Furthermore, the present slump in the market for South American raw materials will be relieved by heavy purchases in the United States, Canada and other non-European countries."

Anticipation of further price reductions in the United States, Mr. Herring said, is an awkward factor in the situation. Furthermore, he added, the Latin-American importer in many cases is obliged to pay a premium of from 20 to 30 per cent on account of his depreciated currency.

The decreasing purchasing power of a large part of continental Europe no doubt contributes to the difficulties of Latin-American exporters, Mr. Herring stated. "This is particularly true in the cases of semi-luxury products, like coffee, cocoa and sugar. It seems likely, therefore, that the commercial position of Latin-America will be greatly improved as soon as the present wave of deflation and price-cutting in the United States has spent itself, but that complete stability can hardly be restored until important European countries are in a better position to make their normal purchases abroad."

EXODUS COMING AT WASHINGTON, SAYS COOLIDGE

Boston, November 13.—Dispatches from Washington to the effect that legislation may be introduced to provide for a home for the vice president in view of the house short of members, were called to the attention of Governor Coolidge, the vice president-elect today. The governor's manner indicated that he was not greatly interested.

"While the housing situation may be acute there just now," he remarked, "I understand a number of persons will be leaving the city shortly."

Chattanooga, November 13.—A. P. ## HOUSE INCREASES MEMBERS TO 206

More Representatives From Several Counties Provided For by New Amendment and Census.

As a result of the passage of the state constitutional amendment relating to house of representative membership, in the general election of November 3, the membership of the 1921-24 house of representatives will be 206, according to an announcement Saturday by Secretary of State S. Guyt McLeod.

The eight largest counties of the state, as shown by the preceding census, will have three representatives each, according to the provisions of the amendment, while the next thirty largest counties will have two members, and the remaining, including Brantley, Long, Lanier, Lamar and Seminole, will have one member each.

This amendment names Fulton, Chatham, Bibb, Muscogee, Floyd and Richmond as the six largest counties which shall have three representatives each, DeKalb and Laurens probably will have two each, and the remaining counties will have one each.

Chairman Boehm on Saturday gave out the following statement summing up the results of the campaign and expressing the special thanks of the executive committee to various workers:

$50,000 as fixed by the board. The execution was contested by the plaintiffs on the grounds that the act requires the arbitration to be made within ten days from the time of the selection of the tax assessors' arbitrator, without making any allowance for inability to agree upon a third assessor or arbitrator, or adequate time for an examination of properties and the ascertainment of their values, and any other cause that might interfere to render such arbitration impossible within the specified time.

In upholding this contention, although the constitutionality of the act was not considered, according to Mr. Fulbright, means a property owner may return his property at valuation lower than its real value and their equalizers may then raise the return, after which the owner may attempt to enforce their ruling but will be without power since the whole section has been invalidated by the decision.

"While the housing situation may be acute there just now," he remarked, "I understand a number of persons will be leaving the city shortly."

GRANT CHARGES

Regarding the question of an extra session of the legislature to the charges of graft and corruption in the practices of lobbyists during the past session of the lawmakers, the possibility of such a proclamation being issued for this purpose is now crowded out of the minds of various state house officials and leaders in the house and senate.

The proper course to pursue in investigation, it is pointed out, would be through the solicitor general of the Atlanta circuit. In the event of an extraordinary session being called to aid the educational institutions and revise the tax equalization law, however, it is possible that the probe will also be included in the proclamation.

In considering the various advanced reasons for an extra session, it is understood the governor ranks the condition of the state educational institutions above all others, and it is very probable that the statement of authorities that one of the schools will have to close its doors early next year and the others reduced to almost impossible scale of financing will be the main cause of the proclamation being issued, should he decide to take this action.

An announcement is expected during the next week that will have considerable influence with the governor in deciding about the matter. It was stated by one state house official last night, who preferred that both his name and the nature of the surprise be withheld until a later date. It is understood, however, that the announcement would tend to lessen the possibility of an extra session.

$12,000 COLLECTED IN RED CROSS DRIVE

Paris, East Point, Hapeville, Bolton, Chamblee, Buckhead and the country precincts. It is expected that their enrollment will substantially swell Atlanta's total, in view of the fact that Decatur is included in Atlanta this year.

With the clean-up campaign downtown, with the church enrollment, and with outlying territory yet to report, Chairman Boehm expected that the total of 9,500 members enrolled up to Saturday night would be very substantially increased by the middle of the coming week.

Chairman Boehm, in a statement summing up results, said an enrollment of 9,500 members was not nearly so much as Atlanta ought to do with her population of 200,000, considering her past record of leading all southern cities by a wide margin in the three other annual roll calls.

Though Monday has been designated as "clean-up day," the drive will not be ended then. Headquarters will remain open throughout the week to furnish supplies to workers who have special territory they wish to canvass, to receive late reports, and to make a final audit of the results of the campaign.

Summa up Results. Chairman Boehm on Saturday gave out the following statement summing up the results of the campaign and expressing the special thanks of the executive committee to various workers:

The total results of $12,000 do not represent a total enrollment of 12,000 members at a dollar each, for the reason that many people have paid $5 and $10 memberships. We estimate an actual enrollment of about 9,500 people out of Atlanta's total population of 200,000. This is small, I am convinced it is not as much as Atlanta ought to do, but I am not complaining or criticizing.

"I wish to say that the roll call itself would have been a failure without the help of the women. They not only served with magnificent spirit as workers in all departments of the roll call, but they outlasted the men when it came to paying the dollars for membership in the Red Cross. They have stood on their feet for hours in spite of raw weather, and in some cases, raw treatment, and worked with the most beautiful and cheerful enthusiasm. The girls and women in stores, offices, factories and homes who were solicited for membership did not turn us down with excuses, but they did have a dollar—like hundreds of men who had all appearances of prosperity, but it had not been for the work and the generosity of the women, the roll call would have failed. I can assure you that truthfully without paragoning the men in the least."

After girls go to college is re-visited by statistics dealing with the career of Barnard graduates. Of 2,095 living alumnae 88 per cent are holding paid positions, 38 per cent have married and only 12 per cent are neither married nor at work. As to the kind of occupation preferred, teaching, once the favorite pursuit of college bred women, has lost caste. Since 1915 the percentage of graduates of Barnard engaged in teaching has dropped from 38 to 27. The figures show that girls go to college for serious purposes; that higher education is not a thing to be sought for practical use as much as for ornament, and that considerably more than half of all the graduates of this college are self-supporting.

Extra Fine Work. There are several cases of specially fine work that deserve special mention, as follows:

"The first life membership to be obtained in the roll call came from S. P. Richards company, which was not content with an ordinary membership, but gave $50 for a life membership. We hope other business firms will follow this example, which was like a ray of sunshine."

"Mrs. George Brown and her committee of women have done splendid work in the Austel building. They have worked and worked, hour after hour, and day after day, refusing to take 'no' for an answer, following up their prospects with indefatigable persistence. They have made one of the best showings of the entire roll call."

"Eight nurses from Fort McPherson, whose request for a leave of absence to work in the roll call was granted by Colonel Bratton and Miss Agnew, did splendid work Saturday at the Fourth National bank under the direction of Mrs. Buford Goodwin. They wore their uniforms and made an appeal which was irresistible. I wish they could have worked four days instead of half a day."

"Mr. Louis Prosterman, a student at the Atlanta Southern Dental college, volunteered his services to canvass the student body. He was given a batch of buttons and supplies and made a clean sweep. He turned in ninety memberships Saturday and had assurances of sixty more, which will make the dental college 100 per cent Red Cross."

Good Results Had. "L. J. Levitas took a committee composed of Jake Abel, Misses Hannah Ellman, Annie Goldstein, Beale Boorstein and Mrs. Bloomie Saul, and did fine work in out-of-the-way places which certainly would have been overlooked. It was wonderful to see the memberships they turned in from such places, and from territory where others had worked, and from new territory which they picked out themselves."

"Messrs. Carroll Smith and Bruce Hall constituted themselves a committee to work territory where others had got a few memberships and many refusals. They handled their prospects as thoroughly and effectively as if they had been working a business deal of their own. They secured a number of members that nobody else could get."

"Mrs. B. J. Fox, owner of a small hotel on Forsyth street, was so content to take a dollar membership, which was all she was asked to take, that she has a son who was in the service and is just out of the hospital. She knows what the Red Cross has done for him. Her son, still crippled, insisted on buying his dollar, too, for a membership, and then she turned the committee turn him down."

from a sick bed, and to work in the downtown district Saturday as a committee of one. Everybody seemed to be going to the footbath game in the afternoon, but still he got results."

MRS. ELMER WILL ATTEND INQUEST

Tests to Learn if F. E. Shepard Was Poisoned Completed, But Results Are Withheld for the Present.

Mrs. F. Eugene Elmer, former wife of Frederick E. Shepard, millionaire peach grower of Houston county, whose body was exhumed a week ago yesterday to determine whether his death last May was the result of poisoning, will be requested to attend the coroner's inquest at Fort Valley on Friday, where Dr. Edgar Everhart, state geological chemist, will make a full report of his analysis of the Shepard viscera, announced Solicitor General Charles H. Garrett in Macon Saturday night. The meeting of the coroner's jury called for Tuesday was postponed late Saturday night to enable the attendance of Dr. Garrett and Mrs. Elmer. Should the report of Dr. Everhart show the presence of poison, it is understood by dispatches from Macon that arrests will follow immediately. If no poison has been found, the solicitor general added that the matter will be dropped pending further tests of the vital organs.

Ready to Assist. The solicitor general's statement that he would request the presence of Mrs. Elmer followed the receipt of a telegram from Charles M. Duran, Jacksonville attorney for Dr. and Mrs. Elmer, stating that the latter would be willing to come to Macon or elsewhere with her husband to assist in the investigation, and that the couple are anxious to clear up all details concerning the case.

Mr. Garrett, who had ordered the coroner's jury to reconvene at 2 o'clock on Tuesday, let it be known Saturday that should it prove impossible for the Elmers to reach Fort Valley by that time, the jury hearing would be postponed for their convenience.

Dr. M. S. Brown, of Fort Valley, stated last Saturday night that the coroner's jury had been postponed until Friday, presumably to permit the attendance of the Elmers.

The tests conducted by Dr. Everhart, with the purpose of determining whether or not poison caused his death last May, were concluded Saturday afternoon. The report, which has not been given out for publication, was phoned to Dr. Brown, of Fort Valley, for whom the analyses were made.

Declines to Make Statement. Dr. Everhart declined to make any statement relative to his findings, since he is acting in his private capacity as a chemist, rather than for the state, and feels that the wishes of his employer must be respected.

Dispatches from Jacksonville on Saturday stated that Dr. Ralph N. Green, health commissioner, to whom Dr. T. F. Abernethy repeated the advice relative to the exhumation of the body of the former Mrs. Elmer, contained in Friday's telegram from a physician of Erie, Pa., had not yet returned to that city. No legal steps have as yet been taken toward exhuming the body, but are expected today or Monday.

By wire the Erie physician on Saturday declined to make any further statement or disclosure in connection with the case. Dr. Brown, who received Dr. Everhart's report at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon, also refused to make any statement relative to its contents.

L. F. Whitfield, manager of the Whitfield agency and representative of the American Bankers' association, returned to Atlanta Saturday morning, where he expects to remain until the coroner's jury convenes in Fort Valley on Tuesday. Mr. Whitfield has been on the Shepard case for approximately two months, having begun his investigations before the receipt of the anonymous letter by Mrs. Alice Crandall, published as the event leading to the investigation.

All Ford Departments Running on Full Time, Says Stewart Abbott

The arrival of unexpected materials at the Ford plant on Ponce de Leon avenue has forestalled the temporary shut-down—predicted in two departments in published reports. All departments were operating full time on Saturday, according to the statement of R. S. Abbott, general manager.

Published stories that the plant would be forced temporarily to cease operation because of lack of material were premature. Mr. Abbott said, because a shipment forestalled the necessity. Ford plants everywhere are working full time, it was said, and cars are being delivered to dealers as fast as they can be turned out. The Ford company has never stored cars, the demand being sufficiently urgent to consume the capacity of the plants.

PUSHING PROBE INTO SHIP BOARD

Name of Congressman Gallivan Brought Into Inquiry — Commissions Paid Ship Officers.

New York, November 12.—The name of Representative James A. Gallivan, of Massachusetts, was brought into testimony offered here today in the Walsh case, which is pushing the probe into the affairs of the United States shipping board.

Robert E. Kline, special representative of the board's supply and sales department, was testifying as to methods used in disposal of surplus material. In the course of his testimony he described an effort on the part of his department to procure what he said was an advantageous contract for disposal of scrap material. A bid for its sale on a "six months' supply basis" at a rate of 50 cents a ton over the market price was accepted, rejected, accepted again and once more held up because an official in Washington discovered he had acted without authority, he said.

"Sharp" Telegram. In the interim, it was decided another form of bid should be offered. The second bidder alleged he had been discriminated against and, according to the witness, the board secured from Mr. Gallivan a telegram complaining that this bidder, one of his constituents, had not been treated fairly. This first telegram, the witness added, was soon followed by another, which he termed "sharp," demanding an investigation and threatening to take the matter to the floor of congress.

The insistence of Mr. Gallivan, the witness said, no doubt caused the home office of the board to give the contractor more consideration. At that rate, he said, he forwarded to the board a complete file of the case. The delay in determining the successful bidder, however, cost the government money, he declared, for at that time—last June and July—the market for scrap material was much higher than it was now.

Scrap material sold by the board was disclosed by the witness's testimony to include everything from unused parts, bolts, asbestos, packing for steam pipes to even discarded uniforms of the guards used during the war to protect shipyards and plants. He also described discarded uniforms of the guards used during the war to protect shipyards and plants. He also described discarded uniforms of the guards used during the war to protect shipyards and plants.

From shipyard materials and contents over contracts for "scrap," the hearing, in its closing hours today, drifted back to questions of "Delays to Vessels."

Captain James A. MacGregor, of Baltimore, now general manager for the South Atlantic Maritime corporation, but formerly district agent for the shipping board at Savannah and Wilmington, was called.

He related instances of delays to shipping board vessels, alleged interlocking operating organizations, delays in repairs to ships and congested harbors, which he said cost the shipping board money. He admitted, however, that incidents similar to those he described had occurred with his company, but not to such an extent as they did with the government operations.

He told of a vessel from Savannah which could not be unloaded at the latter port because of congestion. Its consignee raised a vigorous complaint, and he was paid for the reship by the steamer company, which carried it with a check on shipping board funds.

The reship went with the ship from Havana to Buenos Aires, thence back to New York, thence to Baltimore and back to Savannah, where it was sold at a loss. The shipping board was reimbursed, but the point was made that the vessel was used without proper authority.

Methods of shipping board operators holding cargo for their own vessels when board vessels operated by another line were available, was criticized by the witness. He alleged that this system caused a tieup of cotton at Savannah last fall.

Commissions Given. Testimony concerning "commissions" paid engineers on shipping board vessels by firms selling supplies for the ships was also given.

Miss Lizzie Moorehouse, accountant and treasurer of the Walsh archer company, manufacturers of chemicals, said such presents were charged up by salesmen as "advertising." Her testimony was corroborated by Albert K. Waycott, employed by the company as a salesman in 1918.

Refreshing her memory from an affidavit which she made in July, 1918, as part of the Walsh committee's records, she declared engineers were paid $10 on each twenty-gallon keg sold and $5 for each ten-gallon keg. She testified that these "presents" amounted to about 15 or 20 per cent of the firm's advertising account.

RECKLESS DRIVING CASE IS REOPENED

The case of reckless driving from which H. H. Franklin, 22 Boulevard avenue, driver of the automobile which, on the night of Thursday, November 11, fatally injured Miss Alberta Patterson, of the Lafayette Court apartments on Alexander street, as Miss Patterson was attempting to cross West Peachtree street at the intersection of Alexander street, was dismissed at a preliminary hearing Thursday afternoon, will be reopened Saturday afternoon, in accordance with an order by Judge Johnson Friday.

This action was taken by Judge Johnson following statements by relatives of the late Miss Patterson that they had received summons to appear in court November 20, when they supposed the trial was to have been held. The case had, in fact, been set for November 20, but was heard at an earlier date at the order of Assistant Chief of Police E. L. Jett.

MAN INJURED IN AUTO COLLISION IMPROVES

Paul Mallon, aged 20, of 759 Highland avenue, injured Friday a week ago in an automobile accident on Highland avenue and who was removed to the Georgia Baptist hospital, is reported to be in a greatly improved condition. The automobile in which Mr. Mallon was injured was driven by Robert Hecht, 43 Springdale road, who permitted the machine to collide with a telephone pole near a curve on Highland avenue. Hecht was later arrested, charged with reckless driving.

JAPAN-AMERICAN WAR SIMPLY UNTHINKABLE

Declaration Made by Ambassador Morris in Address at Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, November 12.—War between Japan and the United States is "simply unthinkable," declared Roland S. Morris, American ambassador to Japan, in addressing the American Academy of Political and Social Science here tonight. Asserting he did not intend to take up any questions which might happen to be the subject of friendly discussion between the American and Japanese governments, Mr. Morris expressed regret for the consideration of statements which from time to time find expression in both countries as to the suggestion of war.

It is as Premier Hara has recently said, "simply unthinkable," Mr. Morris continued. "That there are pending questions for the consideration of both our governments is no valid evidence of unfriendly feeling between them. On the contrary, it is the best possible evidence of the many interests we have in common—many of them difficult and complex, but not one of them insurmountable."

After paying a "deserved tribute" to the American missionary work of sixty years, the ambassador referred to growing trade relations as being of such proportions that "Japan purchases from us and sells to us more than any other single nation with which she deals."

"Are we not justified in stating," he asked, "that the history of our relations with Japan has been one of frank confidence, mutual understanding and sincere respect, and are we not justified in approaching any pending questions in the same generous spirit, free from bitterness, rancor and exaggeration? If we do, I am sure it will meet from the government and people of Japan a response which will demonstrate anew their abiding faith in America's unselfish purposes and high ideals of international conduct."

CHAMBER TO LEAD
IN FAIR MOVEMENT

Councilman R. A. Gordon
Sends Letter to President
Eugene Black Asking Appointment of Committee.

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce was asked Saturday to assume leadership in the campaign for staging a world's fair in Atlanta by Councilman R. A. Gordon, chairman of the general committee which has been fostering the movement. In a letter directed to Eugene R. Black, president of the organization, Mr. Gordon stated that now the proposition has a good start. It should be functioned by an organization, and the chamber of commerce should take the lead.

"I was asked as the presiding officer at a meeting held last Friday to name a special committee of five to further sound out the sentiment of Atlanta, to see if not only the citizens of this city were ready to enter upon the work of landing this great exposition," said Mr. Gordon, "but if the moneyed interests could be depended upon to support it."

"I am of the opinion that your body should appoint a similar committee of five, and have them work with the committee I will name. Let these committees work out their own plan of securing the information desired, and at the proper time report their findings at a mass meeting to be held at the Auditorium, under the auspices of the chamber of commerce, if you think advisable."

With but few reservations still open indications are that the "Midnight Frolic" to be given in the Hotel Ansley room Monday by the Atlanta Caterers' club, will surpass expectations. Felker, secretary of the Atlanta Athletic club, and by Henri Brodard, of the Capital City club, has been working hard to arrange details.

Steamship Olympic
Crossing Atlantic

The steamship Olympic, the largest oil-burning steamer afloat, is clipping her records for trans-Atlantic ocean crossing. She sailed from New York the afternoon of Saturday, November 6, and arrived at Cherbourg, France, forenoon November 12, making the Atlantic passage in five days, thirteen hours and twelve minutes. On the entire trip she maintained an average speed of 22.53 knots per hour, which is this magnificent large vessel's fastest ocean crossing. After calling at Cherbourg she proceeded to Southampton, landing her passengers there before midnight the same day.

Since the installation of oil fuel the Olympic's speed has increased more than one knot per hour and she is expected to make even a better showing than this when no head winds or rough seas are encountered.

Atlantan Visits Old Home
In Russia; Rescues Sister

Miss Emily Berg, whose Atlanta brother brought her to this city from Russia, their native home.

Visiting Russia, his native country, after an absence of twenty years, and finding his family scattered and some of them sorely suffering as the result of the terrible conditions brought about by the bolsheviks, Henry Berg, young business man of this city, has just returned to Atlanta bringing with him a pretty 19-year-old sister whom he had never seen until three months ago.

This sister, Miss Emily Berg, suffering many deprivations and hardships during and since the war, is delighted that she is now in America—"the land of the free and the home of the brave"—and is smiling and happy in the home of Mr. Berg, at 520 North Boulevard. As soon as Mr. Berg can make arrangements he will bring his aged father and the only other remaining single sister from Russia to live with him in Atlanta.

Miss Berg talks of the conditions which vividly portray the suffering of thousands of people she has left behind. Miss Berg's father was one of the leading business men of his town, a man of affluence and wealth, until the war and other conditions almost wiped out his fortune. She speaks the Russian, Polish, French and German languages as well as good English, and is an accomplished musician.

The family of Miss Berg originally lived in Kovno, Lithuania, but early in the war trouble moved to Petrograd. Later, when the bolsheviks began to create so much trouble, her family moved back to Kovno, where she has left behind her younger sister, Miss Mira Berg, and her father, H. Berg.

Believe Can Live. "There are scores of people in Russia," said Miss Berg, who does not believe the Russian czar is dead. I myself believe that the bolsheviks have a mistaken idea that he was killed when they stormed his palace some time ago. We believe that he has been hidden out in the southern portion of Russia, and some of these days, when bolshevism has run its day and fallen, as it must, he will turn up alive and well.

"I hardly know how to express my great thanks for the opportunity to come and live in this great free country. I simply thin America is great, and I expect to spend my days here. There are thousands upon thousands of my people in ters, scattered over various sections of Russia, and found one of them particularly a great sufferer from the conditions existing over there. I could not take any money—only for actual expenses—into the country into which I lived, for if I did, they would not let me bring it back. Fortunately, I ran into an Atlanta man, a former friend, from whom I secured a temporary loan, by which I gave her some needed assistance.

"It is almost impossible to describe conditions as they exist in Russia today," continued Mr. Berg. "People stand sometimes in line for eighteen hours to get a small portion of bread, and then maybe be told, just about the time they reach the distributor, that the bread has given out. In some places they are glad to get potato peelings to eat. It hardly seems credible, but such things have happened to my people over there, and I know they are true that they wait for a sick or emaciated old horse to fall on the streets, as they cannot kill any of the well ones, and when the animal is about all in, they rush up with knives and rip it up for meat to eat."

"My father was in good circumstances prior to the war, and engaged in the jewelry business. During the war he sent money into Switzerland in order to have it, while I was over there I went into Switzerland to get this returned, he having had some trouble to get it back. But I secured it for him.

More Americans. "I met a number of Americans over there, and, believe me, they are all treated with the greatest of deference. I never had a bit of trouble getting around with passports, etc., and American consuls wherever I ran into them, were unusually kind and clever. But I was glad to get back to America. I have always tried to be a good American, Lord of my country, but after a visit to Europe and particularly after a visit to my old country, Russia, I am prouder than ever of my American citizenship. I shall never rest satisfied until I bring all the rest of my family over here, at least those of them who can come. The husbands of some of my married sisters are also working to this end."

CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK BEGINS NEXT MONDAY

"More books in the home" is the slogan of a large number of organizations interested in a national movement, and to which is a they devote a week each year, known as "Children's Book week."

The week of 1920 begins on Monday, and runs to and including the 29th. It is a co-operative effort to get the widest public attention to the need of more books in the home for children, and the movement has the hearty support of Atlanta book-sellers, who are making special efforts to interest parents during the coming week. One of the chief aims is to get parents into the habit of buying books for children regularly throughout the year, instead of at Christmas time only. The movement has the support not only of the American Booksellers' association and other publishers, but of the American Library association and the Boy Scouts of America.

The bookstores of Atlanta have prepared especially for the week, and parents are invited to interest themselves in the movement, and to look over the large number of books offered for the children.

SCHOOL OF METHODS TO OPEN NEXT WEEK

Sunday school workers of all denominations in the Decatur district will have the opportunity of attending a five-day School of Methods and Principles, to be held in the Decatur Presbyterian church, under the auspices of the Atlanta Division of the Georgia Sunday School association.

The dates for the school will be November 22, 23, 24, 25 and 26. The members of the faculty will be: R. D. Webb, general superintendent of the Georgia Sunday School association; Dr. William A. Smart, of Emory university, who will have charge of the Bible hour each night; Miss Myra Bataholder, the new superintendent of the Atlanta division, who will have charge of the story-telling methods and children's division work; H. H. Harris, professor of religious education at Emory, who will have charge of the pupil study work and the young peoples' work methods; and Professor Floyd Field, secretary of the Atlanta division, who will have the adult work methods at the school.

Two forty-minute periods will be given each afternoon beginning at 4:45 and running until supper time, when a plate supper will be served at the church.

The evening sessions will begin at 7 o'clock, and will consist of a Bible period, division conferences for workers with children, young people and adults. Each night the school will close with a talk on the "Modern Sunday School."

No matriculation fee will be charged, and Sunday school workers from the entire district are invited.

CHRISTMAS SEALS GO ON SALE DEC. 1

Anti-Tuberculosis Crusade to Raise Funds on Big Scale This Year, Workers Announce.

The annual sale of Christmas seals to finance the great crusade against tuberculosis will be resumed in Georgia on a large scale during the forthcoming holiday season, it was announced here Saturday by the Crusade Against Tuberculosis in Georgia, the name under which the several organizations engaged in anti-tuberculosis work have united for this and other work.

Governor Hugh M. Dorsey heads the list of sponsors for the movement and with him are associated Dr. M. L. Brittain, state superintendent of schools; Dr. T. F. Abrombie, state health officer; Mrs. J. E. Hays, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs; and Miss Mary E. Cresswell. The trustees of the Crusade are Mrs. F. G. Hodgson, president; John N. Goddard, vice president; Thomas R. Glenn, treasurer; Robert J. Quinn, secretary; and Joseph A. McCord. The advisory committee is composed of Thomas J. Hamilton, Augusta; Mrs. J. T. Fletcher, Columbus; Julian V. Boehm, Atlanta; W. L. Daniel, Rome; Lee M. Hays, Macon; and Mrs. Frank P. McIntire, Savannah. James P. Faulkner, general manager of the Crusade, will discharge the duties of the handling and sale of the Christmas seals.

Work Well Known. As is already well-known to the general public, the work of the Crusade Against Tuberculosis, both nationally and in the several states, is financed almost exclusively from the proceeds of the sale of Christmas seals. This method of raising funds for the tuberculosis campaign has been growing in favor since 1907 when they were first sold in this country by Miss Emily P. Bissell, of Delaware. Three thousand dollars were raised the first year. In the following Christmas season the sale of seals was undertaken on a national basis, and $125,000 was raised. From year to year the sale has grown by leaps and bounds, until in 1919 the total sum of $4,000,000 was raised for the crusade against the great white plague.

Georgia has always responded with her usual public spirit and generous enthusiasm to the annual appeal, and the officers of the tuberculosis crusade are expecting bigger results this year than ever before. In 1918 the sale of seals was suspended on account of the war. Last year it was not put so aggressively as it had been annually before, yet $4,000,000 was raised with the effort put forth.

The Christmas seals have become an established and almost universal feature of Christmas mail. The Christmas card or gift, package or letter is considered quite complete without the Christmas seal. It is nearly as common as the postage stamp. The seal cost only a penny apiece, which makes it very small for an individual, but in the aggregate they mount into millions.

Double Barred Cross. This year's seal bears the famous double barred cross of the anti-tuberculosis movement throughout the nation, the two bars signifying the two main arms of the work—preventive and curative. Heretofore the seal has borne the emblem of the Red Cross, which aided in the sale of stamps by furnishing the funds to pay for printing and distribution, but now the movement has grown to the point where it can walk alone, and the Red Cross has withdrawn its financial sponsorship.

For the state of Georgia, a total in round numbers of $100,000 is expected this year. Special emphasis is laid upon the fact that 90 per cent of the proceeds of all seals sold in Georgia will remain in Georgia to finance the anti-tuberculosis work in Georgia. This is a larger percentage for local use than is allotted in any other movement.

A new feature of the sale this year is the use of a "Health Band" instead of seals for persons who wish to buy seals in large quantities. The bands come in denominations of $5, $10, $25, $50 and $100. They are printed in exact imitation of a regular band, and bear coupons which pay the bearer dividends in the form of results accomplished in the prevention and cure of tuberculosis, with allied lines of work.

Local committees in the principal cities and towns of Georgia will handle the sale of seals locally. They will go on sale the first of December and continue thereafter until Christmas day.

First Evangelist To Get Appointment Passes 66th Birthday

Rev. J. Frank Jackson, first evangelist to receive an appointment from the Georgia Baptist convention, recently passed his sixty-sixth birthday at his home on Rawson street. During the 34 years of his ministry, Mr. Jackson has delivered approximately 15,000 sermons, made 1,200 addresses and interviewed 25,000 persons and 8,000 families about their church relations. His records reveal more than 600 baptisms to his credit.

The kind of meetings Mr. Jackson used to conduct is indicated by the report of a two weeks' revival at the report of a two weeks' revival at the settlement which boasted only twelve members of the Baptist church. After two weeks the evangelists left a well-organized church of 150 members.

Mr. Jackson's first revival in Atlanta was held more than 20 years ago at the Central Baptist church.

Mr. Jackson became a Baptist in 1872, when he was baptised near Monroe. He was active as an evangelist until two years ago, when he was stricken by paralysis. Although he has been confined to his home, he has managed several revival campaigns during the past few months.

COAL DEALERS RAPPED BY SPANISH WAR VETS

Theodore Roosevelt Camp No. 8, United Spanish War Veterans, will meet Sunday afternoon at 3 p. m. for business and muster.

The report of the coal committee will be read. In this connection Thomas J. Harrison, adjutant, said yesterday:

"As Atlanta coal dealers continue to charge an unreasonable price for coal in violation of the law and pay no heed to the United States attorney, other means will be discussed whereby the practice of robbing the public can be stopped."

Local committees in the principal cities and towns of Georgia will handle the sale of seals locally. They will go on sale the first of December and continue thereafter until Christmas day.

TAX COLLECTION WILL BE PUSHED BY CITY MARSHAL

After 5 o'clock Monday afternoon the tax books in the office of the city tax assessor will close for this year, and the city marshal will be issued against all delinquents. Under the law October 15 is set as the final day for the payment of property taxes, but as a matter of public accommodation the assessors have kept the books open longer.

The city is in the throes of a severe money stringency, however, and on Saturday Mayor Key summoned the assessors, the comptroller, the city marshal, the city clerk and other department heads before him and in conference declared that the municipal machinery must be employed to collect every cent of taxes due the city, and the operation must commence at once.

There is said to be a long list of delinquents, and the city marshal will be given additional help, if necessary, to aid him to execute the law.

The Woman's auxiliary to the Wesley Memorial hospital will give its annual "pantry shower" for the hospital on November 22. ## CHECKROOMS USED AS STORING PLACE FOR FINE WHISKY

A Ginsberg, who is said to reside at a boarding house on Peachtree street, was arrested by federal prohibition agents Saturday on charges of violating the national prohibition amendment. He was arrested because he was found with several cases of fine whisky in his checkrooms.

With the arrest of Ginsberg, federal authorities believe they have apprehended a shrewd whisky seller who has furnished high-grade whisky to guests of several Atlanta hotels. He was arrested Saturday at a downtown hotel after federal agents had succeeded, it is stated, in purchasing whisky from him.

When he was searched two suitcases were found containing several cases of fine whisky, which were seized by the government agents.

According to Popular Science Monthly, a doctor at Johns Hopkins hospital has discovered a way of pumping purified air into the brain so as to locate and remove tumors which would cause either idiocy or death.

YOUNG NEGRO HELD AS PURSE SNATCHER

A six weeks' career as a purse-snatcher, according to the police, ended Friday afternoon for Fred Silas, a young negro, who, upon his arrest by Detectives Holly and Lowe, confessed that since his release from the chingano early in October he had robbed several women of their purses and stolen two bicycles. Silas gave his address as the rear of 146 Whitehall terrace.

He has detectives believe, been connected with at least six robberies in addition to purse snatchings, and is suspected of two others in a different section of the city. The negro will be taken before several women who have reported robberies, in order that he may be identified.

Out-of-town buyers will avoid delay in shipping by adding 7c for each dollar purchased to cover postage. Whatever portion of the 7c not used will be returned with your order.

THO' BITTER-COLD, THERE'S NO COAL

Conditions in New York Due to the Fuel Shortage Are Described as "Woeful."

New York, November 13.—The first real cold snap of winter sent shivers through thousands of New York apartment dwellers today, who were suffering because of the lack of heat due to the acute coal shortage.

Unable to get promise of fuel and with colder weather in sight, they flocked to dealers in oil, gas and electric heaters and soon these heating apparatus were at a premium.

Conditions due to the coal shortage were described as a "woeful" and dangerous to the public health by Commissioner of Health Copeand, who has sent an appeal to the interstate commerce commission to issue priority orders for shipments of domestic sizes to this city for "at least one week."

DOCTORS' CERTIFICATE NEEDED TO GET COAL

Buffalo, N. Y., November 13.—A doctor's certificate of necessity was required to obtain a ton of coal here today, and with the thermometer around 20 degrees above zero, thousands of families with empty coal bins were clamoring for fuel. A marked shortage in the supply of natural gas intensified the demand.

Temporary relief was expected within 24 hours. The chamber of commerce, anticipating the situation, has secured consignments from the anthracite mines totalling 7,200 tons.

WIFE GETS CLOTHES BACK, ALSO R. R. FARE

The bail trover proceedings brought by Mrs. Mabel Maloff against her husband, J. J. Maloff, to recover $2,000 in clothing, which she claimed, was in his possession, was dismissed Saturday morning by Judge George S. Bell, of the superior court, upon the plaintiff being repossessed of her property.

In her plea for alimony the judge granted her $75, of which amount $55 is to be used in the purchase of a railroad ticket to her former home in California.

STORMY SESSION HELD BY THE REPUBLICANS

Organization of the Harding Club Perfected, Declares Chairman Karnes.

After a stormy session on the fifth floor of the McClure building on Whitehall Saturday during which one faction of republicans was requested to retire from the meeting if the members did not like the proceedings, the organization of the Georgia Harding club was completed, according to Chairman M. H. Karnes.

The purpose of the meeting was to perfect the organization of the Harding club in this state. Mr. Karnes stated in his opening remarks, while the object of the meeting was to secure in each voting precinct in Georgia at least one "substantial and responsible republican" to care of the interests of the party.

Following the reading of the constitution, a number of republicans present objected to the wording and several stated there was no further need of any other G. O. P. organizations, such as the Harding club, in Georgia. When the objections continued, Chairman Karnes questioned those not pleased with the proceeding and nature of the constitution to leave, and an exodus of the objectors followed.

Big Damage Suit Filed In Columbus Courts Over Georgia Peaches

Columbus, Ga., November 13.—(Special.)—Asking for damages of $28,669.50, which the petition alleges represents the difference in the actual value of 19,113 bushel baskets of peaches at the prevailing market price, resulting from the peaches being defective, the American Fruit Growers, Inc., of Chicago, filed suit here today asking that this sum be awarded them against J. J. Whitley, J. H. and T. W. Whitley and B. W. Hinton, peach growers of Reynolds, Taylor county, with whom the foreign corporation alleges to have entered into a contract on April 21, 1926, for "good merchantable peaches."

The suit was filed in the United States district court here, before Judge N. A. Brown, by the legal firm of Jones, Parks & Johnston, of Macon.

The petition filed by the Macon legal firm for their clients sets forth that American fruit growers entered into a contract for some ninety-two carloads of peaches of the 1926 crop, this comprising "all peaches grown on trees in the orchards owned by the growers."

The price to be paid per bushel crate was $2.25, the market value varied from $2.25 to $2.75 per bushel. It is stated in the petition following receipt of the fruit, in the north it was found that the peaches "would not average 1 per bushel crate." The plaintiff corporation states that the average per bushel they should have received for the peaches was $2.50, and that by the fruit being of the dollar grade it lost $1.50 on each bushel in the 19,113 bushel crates sent north.

It is further set forth that the northern firm paid $28,226 into the hands of the defendants and asks for damages represented by "the difference between the market value of good merchantable peaches and actual value of fruit delivered by the defendant to petitioner."

Booze Cow Story Merely Bull, Say Amused Officials

Declare Story of Finding of "Cows" Giving Liquor Is Unfounded—All Savannah Laughing Over Joke.

Savannah, November 13.—(Special.) Savannah is in a titter today over a press dispatch supposed to be from Savannah, but said to never have been reported from this city, telling of the discovery of a couple of "dummy cows" discovered by officers searching for booze.

The letter charged intimidation by old Ku-Klux Klan methods and other agencies apparently beyond the control of the state of Florida, and requested that "Alabama, Georgia and other southern states" be included in the investigation.

The letter charged intimidation by old Ku-Klux Klan methods and other agencies apparently beyond the control of the state of Florida, and requested that "Alabama, Georgia and other southern states" be included in the investigation.

City and county police declare the dispatch was the first news they had had of such a find, though it is admitted that in the big hauls recently made by federal raiders there was somebody connected with a dairy or once connected with a former dairy arraigned on charges of violation of the prohibition law.

The story is treated here as a huge joke.

"MERELY A BULL STORY," SAYS D. J. GANTT.

Atlanta joins her sister city by the sea in hearty laughter at the amusing story published Saturday in an afternoon paper here, under sensational headlines, of the discovery of two remarkable cows at a dairy farm on the Savannah river who responded to pressure on their udders by emitting sparkling streams of contraband whiskey in violation of the national prohibition amendment, and probably in violation of the pure food act.

The legend of the generous cows appeared in a local paper under a Macon date line, and the article was the topic of much comment when the extras appeared on the street.

When shown to federal prohibition authorities the government agents became hilarious and termed the story a hoax.

D. J. Gantt, supervising federal prohibition agent for the southeast, was asked if he had been officially advised of the singular capture. He laughed heartily, and opined that it was no "cow" story, but "merely a bull story."

The appearance of the alleged fake article created much comment throughout the entire federal building.

ing of this kind, once it is assured fact, would prove a wonderful incentive for the young men and young women to enroll in the educational institutions of this section.

Captain Lee Terrell, of the Uniform Rank of the Knights of Pythias: "Our members are all in favor of it, and we will start a movement looking forward to holding our national encampment in Atlanta this year."

R. K. Robinson, president of the Atlanta lodge Order of Owls: "Our nest endorsed the movement by a rising vote, and if you have the world's fair we will land our convention for Atlanta that year."

Former Alderman M. E. LaHatte, past commander of Henry Grady Tent of the Maccoches and past master of Piedmont Lodge of Masons: "A world fair held in Atlanta would be of great benefit to the entire southeast. I am heartily in favor of it and will assist in making it a great success."

George Campbell, chairman of the press committee for the Greeks of Atlanta: "The leading Greeks of Atlanta have authorized me to say that they not only pledge their moral support to the movement, but will be ready to back it financially, as well."

Would Be Big Thing.

James Robinson, division superintendent of the Georgia Railway and Power company: "In my 26 years with our company, I have been in touch probably with as many men and women of Atlanta as any other man, and I notice that when Atlanta goes after a really big thing that she usually gets it. The expression of our men tells me that every one is in favor of the World's fair for 1928."

Walter E. McElreath: "I can think of no movement that would help Atlanta increase our population to 500,000 by 1930. I am heartily in favor of it."

Former Alderman and Ex-Police Commissioner J. W. McEachen: "Atlanta is a big city and usually does big things. I have no doubt that this fair can be made a grand success and we have time enough to make it so."

MEMORIAL OBELISK TO JEFFERSON DAVIS

Asheville, N. C., November 13.—Work of completing the memorial obelisk to Jefferson Davis at Fairview, Ky., will be resumed and the monument, which will be second in size only to Washington's monument, completed, according to report today before the general convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

A spirited contest over the question of preparing medals for sons of Confederate veterans who participated in the "world war" found its way back to a committee to gather further data. Proponents contended the men no longer cared for the recent war and its medals, while others took an opposite view with equal determination.

Presentations of the officers-elect feature the closing session tonight. Two resolutions were adopted, one protesting against the inclusion of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic" in school music books, and its singing at public celebrations, and the other providing for co-operation in the movement to erect at Richmond a monument to Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury, noted geographer and discoverer of the Gulf stream. The Maury resolution urges divisions of the organization to contribute a "creditable sum," and provides for the appointment of a committee similar to the Shiloh memorial committee.

The convention will meet next year in St. Louis.

FEARING LOSS OF JOB, HE KILLED HIMSELF

Itabena, Miss., November 12.—Samuel Kimbrough, cashier of the Yazoo state bank, shot and killed himself at his home here today. Ill health and despondency over the fear of losing his position is supposed to have prompted the act. It is announced by bank officials that his accounts, books and papers are all in good shape.

Palmer Asked to Probe Alleged Election Riots In Southern States

New York, November 13.—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People today charged that between thirty and sixty negroes have been killed "in Florida election riots and the statewide terrorization of voters."

In making public a letter to Attorney General Palmer asking a federal investigation, the organization asserted that "sufficient evidence of violence, fraud and illegality is at hand available for the department of justice to disqualify the entire vote of the state of Florida in the last election."

The letter charged intimidation by old Ku-Klux Klan methods and other agencies apparently beyond the control of the state of Florida, and requested that "Alabama, Georgia and other southern states" be included in the investigation.

The object of the exhibition is to place on view the best work of southern artists and to further cordial relationship between the art associations of the southern states.

Every artist is invited to submit work and every association is requested to send a representative to the exhibit.

For any information concerning the plan of the exhibit, artists are asked to communicate with Mrs. John S. Garrison, 161 Tradd street, Charleston, S. C.

AMERICAN COUNTRIES ONE MAIL TERRITORY

The Agreement Includes All North, Central and South America.

Madrid, November 12.—"All countries composing North, Central and South America will form one postal territory" says the official text of the tentative agreement adopted by the delegates to the Postal Congress of Spain, the United States, Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, San to Domingo, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Salvador, Uruguay and Venezuela.

The agreement contains a provision declaring for the obligatory prepayment of postage on all classes of correspondence except in cases of letters, where certain tolerance will be allowed, for insufficient prepayment.

Every nation signing agrees to transport free through its territory all correspondence from any signatory nation to another signatory nation, but the transport of correspondence calling for passage through a non-signatory country must be paid by the country of origin. Even signatory nation agrees that the international rate existing in the country where mail originates shall apply to mail destined to all other signatories. This includes letters, ordinary and reply-paid postcards, all classes of printed matter, commercial papers, samples and medicines.

Exception is made concerning prepaid letters. It is provided that these letters must bear prepaid at least the lowest rate stamped otherwise they will not be forwarded.

while all other correspondence must be fully franked or it will not be sent. Double the amount due on insufficiently franked letters will be collected from those receiving them.

Printed matter and commercial papers will be restricted in weight to four kilograms, except single volumes, which may weigh five kilograms. Indemnity for loss of registered mail is fixed by the agreement at 50 francs and gold and special measurements are laid down for packages. Otherwise the rules of the Universal Postal Union will apply.

Attitude of Red Cross In Regard to Ireland Explained by Director

New York, November 13.—The Central Federated Union's action last night in voting to ignore an American Red Cross appeal for support, because the organization had been inactive in Ireland, was declared today by H. D. Burrell, director of the membership campaign in Manhattan, to be unjustifiable.

Mr. Burrell branded as "false" any statements made that the American Red Cross had refused to send workers to Ireland.

"The American Red Cross is willing at any time," he said, "to extend such aid as may be possible to the suffering, but we cannot go to a foreign country without a request either from the authorities or the Red Cross of the country in question."

"The American Red Cross is now awaiting the report of its European commissioner on the need of special Red Cross relief in Ireland. Irish women and nurses are members of the British Red Cross and are on duty in Ireland today. The regular practice of the American Red Cross would be to await an appeal from Ireland before acting."

"Famine or other great disaster there, making immediate shipment of supplies necessary, would call for prompt and special action by the American Red Cross."

DRYNESS CAUSES CRUELTY TO WIVES AND TO CHILDREN

Chicago, November 12.—Statistics showing that complaints of cruelty to wife and children have increased 228 per cent since prohibition arrived, and more rapidly in the last six months than during the first half of the year, were given in the annual report of Albert E. Webster, superintendent of the Juvenile Protective association, made public today.

"Men who formerly drank heavily," the report reads, "have undergone a reaction, which expresses itself in surliness or abuse of the family."

Other classes of complaints also are shown to have increased. Juvenile delinquency has increased 130 per cent; complaints against disorderly houses 80 per cent, or about 700 per cent over the war period, and complaints concerning runaway and immoral girls nearly 100 per cent, or 80 per cent more than during the war period.

On the other hand, it was shown that the eighteenth amendment went into effect, prosecutions for non-support have decreased 20 per cent, disorderly conduct charges have been cut in half and insanity complaints reduced 60 per cent.

Stands Indicted For Killing, but Victim Is Alive

Man Charged With Involuntary Manslaughter Through Error of Grand Jury.

Just at present Ralph Thompson stands indicted for the killing of Mrs. Julia W. Varnadoe, despite the fact that Mrs. Varnadoe is still alive and wishes her friends acquainted with that fact.

This peculiar paradox comes about through an error made when Thompson was indicted Friday by the Fulton grand jury on three counts—one of them charging manslaughter. The incident came about as a result of an automobile accident last May, in which Mrs. Varnadoe was struck by an automobile driven by Thompson.

Immediately after officials in the solicitor's office discovered the error, they began making plans for presenting the matter to the grand jury next Tuesday, when the erroneous count in the indictment will be called to that body's attention, with the request that the count dealing with involuntary manslaughter be stricken from the document. Thompson now stands indicted for assault with intent to murder as a result of the same accident.

Of the English monarchs named George, the first lived sixty-seven years, the second seventy-seven years, the third eighty-two years, and the fourth thirty-eight years. King George V is now fifty-five.

SENATE BOARD NAMED BY WILSON

Benson Remains Chairman—Four Democrats and Three Republicans Named—The Senate Not Likely to Confirm.

Washington, November 13.—The seven members of the new shipping board created by the merchant marine act finally have been appointed by President Wilson. They are:

Rear Admiral William S. Benson, Georgia, democrat, term of seven years, and reappointed chairman.

The other six members are:

Frederic I. Thompson, Alabama, democrat, term of five years.

Joseph N. Teal, Oregon, democrat, term of four years.

John A. Donald, New York, democrat, term of three years.

Chester H. Rowell, California, republican, term of two years.

Guy D. Goff, Wisconsin, republican, term of one year.

Charles Sutter, Missouri, republican, term of one year.

Admiral Benson is appointed from Georgia as a democrat and his term is for six years.

All Secretaries Reappointed. Admiral Benson and Mr. Donald are the Atlantic coast representatives; Mr. Rowell and Mr. Teal are the Pacific coast representatives; Mr. Thompson is the member from the Gulf coast; Mr. Goff the member from the Great Lakes region, and Mr. Sutter the member from the interior. This geographical grouping of the members is repeated in the new board.

Colonel Goff is now general counsel of the board. He is a son of the late Senator Goff of West Virginia, formerly was district attorney of Alabama and United States district attorney for Wisconsin and served eight months on General Sherman's staff at Atlanta.

Benson Discusses Plans. Discussing plans for the new board, Chairman Benson said tonight that immediate consideration would be given to section 23 of the Jones act, which permits railroads to give differential rates in carrying goods for shipment in American bottoms.

This provision of the act was suspended until January 1 by the interstate commerce commission on the recommendation of the shipping board, but it may be necessary to put it into effect in some ports, the chairman declared. The board will probably not be seated before December 1, he added, although the members may take the oath as they arrive here, or wait until the board can qualify as a body.

The various administrative duties of the merchant marine act will be divided between the new commissioners, the chairman said, but as yet the different departments have not been decided upon with the exception that Mr. Goff will have direct supervision over all legal matters.

Since congress failed to make a specific appropriation for the salaries of the members of the new board they are not expected to receive any pay until congress at its next session has made funds available. The salaries fixed by law are $12,000 for each commissioner. Members of the board must devote all of their time to the duties of their office and they must divest themselves from any interest which they may have in the shipping industry.

GOOD WORK DONE BY HIGHWAY BOARD

Projects Aggregating $1,690,000 Completed and Others Now in Progress Amount to $10,500,000.

With highway projects aggregating $1,690,000 completed during the past twelve months and others now in progress amounting to $10,500,000, the state highway department announced Saturday Georgia's system of highways is being rapidly completed and within another few months every county seat in the state will be linked together.

By combining federal, state and county funds, the highway department, it was stated, has been in a position to promote its construction on a much larger scale than it was at first thought possible. With experienced experts at their disposal county authorities have found it preferable to turn over all road projects to the state highway department, which has been practically unhampered in its work.

More than two-thirds of the counties are embraced in the program of projects of the department, which is being carried out in a systematic manner.

Uncle Bud Littlefield, of Hickory Gap, in Rabun county, at the foot of Pine mountain, arrived Saturday to show the people of Georgia what regular fiddling is. He admitted it when he arrived at Terminal station with a two sack along over his shoulder and a fiddle, encased in a pillow slip, tucked under his arm.

"Up where I come from is where they raise fiddlers," declared Mr. Littlefield, as he extended two feet of white whiskers from beneath his vest, where he had tucked them for convenience in traveling.

Over in the next town, fiddlers, and we had a pretty good crop this year, all around."

Uncle Bud said he was paying his first visit to Atlanta, but neither the lofty interior of the Terminal station, nor the bright lights of Mitchell street appeared to excite his interest. He accepted all these things as matter of course, like all the mountaineers, and seemed only interested in the convention of the Georgia Old Time Fiddlers' association, which is to be held at the Auditorium next Friday and Saturday nights.

"I come down a little ahead of time," he explained, "and I took a notion to visit with him a spell and see how he does it. I've got a notion to pick up a few things on a piece of paper, and I've got it somewhere if I ain't lost it. I'm a fiddler, and I've got a few things. Whichaway is this place where they hold the fiddling convention?"

Uncle Bud was the fiddler of the first of the Georgia Old Time Fiddlers' association, which is to be held at the Auditorium next Friday and Saturday nights.

It wouldn't surprise me to see a hummer in the state of Georgia, stage Friday night," he said. "We have received entries from all over Georgia, from twelve miles up in the mountains, where fiddlers seem to flourish most."

First of Fiddlers For Old-Timers' Contest Arrives

Five Reasons Are Assigned for the Dearness of the U. S. Dollar.

Paris, November 13.—Reasons advanced for the fall in the value of the franc, and the rise in that of the dollar and the pound sterling, the most important subject now being discussed on the bourse, have been assembled by the Paris edition of the London Daily Mail, which has been investigating the question and has obtained the opinion of various persons well versed in French finance. Five reasons are assigned by Lloyd's National and Financial bank.

First, the optimistic declaration by M. Francois-Marsal (the minister of finance), whose promise that a better rate of exchange in the near future led people who desired pounds for covering purposes to wait. The reverse of what was expected happened, however, and panic ensued.

Second, President-elect Harding's declaration about the "decease" of the league of nations.

Third, Great Britain and France are entirely in the hands of America, and elements in America hostile to the allies are doing its utmost to depreciate the pound and the franc.

Fourth, the dearness of money in America and England is prompting the people of these countries to recall the francs they have in France.

Fifth, the heavy debt of France and Great Britain to America.

London, November 13.—The London County and Westminster bank, which has this opinion:

France is buying dollars through London. This is one cause of the fall in the franc. Speculators in the inner circle find out what contracts are coming off and they buy dollars to their advantage. This is proved by the rise and fall of the franc within a few days of the overproduction in America causes American business men to close out their holdings in francs and realize in dollars.

The manager of the exchange department of Cox & Co. Ltd., is quoted as saying:

"The exchange rate is not made in Paris. We are absolutely dependent on New York. It is not a matter of the franc and the dollar, but of the dollar and the franc."

Liberty said:

"The franc is a very serious matter to be paid, and Americans are certainly at present on the whole the francs they have in France. Besides, we have now to pay ready money for the large shipments of American coal."

The exchange manager of the Bank Anglo Sud Américain, said:

"The situation is very serious. Speculation, I am sure, plays quite a small part in the depreciation of the franc. One reason is the recent purchases of American coal. Another cause is lack of faith abroad in the franc. The remedy is to produce more coal. That is the chief link we have to our expenses."

Three public sessions of the fiddlers' convention will be held, on Friday, Saturday and Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Tickets, at 35 and 40 cents, will be sold at the door. The convention will be held at the Auditorium.

New York, November 13.—(Special.)—The cotton market showed renewed weakness today with March and later deliveries making new low records for the season. Reports of freezing weather over the belt seemed to attract very little attention compared with the continued depression of general business and overnight reports of weaker spot markets. Trade interests were good buyers on the decline, which carried March deliveries off to 17.50, however, and closing prices showed moderate rallies with the market finally steady at a net decline of 15 to 25 points.

The opening was easy at a decline of 2 to 27 points, with the market selling orders which included hedging by spot firms supposedly against cotton in the near future. Basing in the south late yesterday. Covering for the week-end caused rallies of 20 to 25 points right after the call, but the market soon weakened again, owing to continued liquidation promoted by favorable reports from the goods trade, fear of further spot liquidation and nervousness over the conditions which was probably increased by the reported failure of a produce exchange in the north.

December sold up to 18.05, and January to 17.64, with active months generally showing losses of 25 to 36 points, but there seemed to be an improved demand from the trade on a scale down to 17.00. The close showed rallies of 10 to 19 points from the low.

The census bureau showing domestic mill consumption of only 399,837 bales for October, compared with 455,041 for the same month of the decline, and reports of increasing mill curtailment were regarded as a still less favorable comparison for the current month.

SPOTS IN NEW YORK. N. O. COTTON MAKES NEW LOW LEVELS

New Orleans, November 13.—Lowest prices of the week and new low levels for the season on most months were obtained in the cotton market today by selling mainly stimulated by the unfavorable showing on the census bureau statistics from the census bureau. The opening was lower and the market declined throughout the day, with the decline of about a quarter of a cent, the market recovered somewhat, but taking by shorts until it stood one point over to nine points under the final price of the day. The close was trading in a fresh burst of selling which carried the trading months 15 to 21 points. Yesterday's close, December dropping to 17.21 and May to 16.65. In the late afternoon, the market showed a sharp recovery, with shorts taken off to a large scale and the market improved to such an extent that the close was officially called firm, with prices showing net losses for the session of 13 to 21 points. The census bureau figures of 399,837 bales consumed by American mills during October, compared with 455,041 for the same month of the decline, and reports of increasing mill curtailment were regarded as a still less favorable comparison for the current month.

FOREIGN TRADE CLUB TO HAVE BIG DINNER

Pan-American Commerce
Through Southeast Outlets
to Be Main Topic.

The Atlanta Foreign Trade club, recently launched to promote foreign trade interests of Atlanta and the southeastern section of the United States, with particular attention to trade in the Pan-American countries, the development of southeastern ports and the diversion of traffic to this general section for export purposes, will give a dinner to its members and business men Monday night at the chamber of commerce.

Organization of the club is the direct outgrowth of the stimulus given to interest in foreign trade in Atlanta by the activities of the "Plattsburg" school of pan-American commerce, which was recently held under joint auspices of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and the Southern Commercial congress. Officers are to be elected early in December. The organization is designed to be a three-fold benefit. First, to its members; second, to the exporters of Atlanta and the southeast; and, third, to the city of Atlanta as a factor in community development, in cordial co-operation with the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce and other civic bodies.

Leaders of Club.
Leading actively in formation of the club are Harry C. Mitchell, an instructor in the Plattsburg school, and well-known in the foreign trade field for the past eight years; T. R. Grasso, secretary to the attorney general of Georgia, and James A. Metcalf, executive secretary of the National Drug and Chemical Alliance.

The club will provide a medium for the interchange of ideas and personal experiences of members and will serve as a community clearing house on all matters pertaining to foreign markets and exporting methods and practices. In this connection, it will compile and keep up to date a reference library of books, publications, lists and other data having to do with all phases of foreign trade.

One of the organization's main objects will be to help in every way possible to advertise Atlanta in foreign markets and acquaint those abroad with local products and the desirability of purchasing from this market.

Employment Committee.
A feature of the club will be the maintenance of a committee or bureau of employment for the assistance of its members in obtaining positions in this country and abroad and in order to provide competent help for Atlanta exporters.

In connection with its object to encourage shipments by way of southeastern ports and to work for the establishment in Atlanta of the buying and selling offices and warehouses of northern and western manufacturers and shippers, for export and import business, it is the plan already favored by a number of large railroads, to form and operate an Atlanta co-operative traffic bureau to be composed of one representative each of all railroads, express companies and other transportation agencies doing business into or out of Atlanta. It is intended that this bureau shall operate as an auxiliary of the foreign trade club.

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS FINED FOR RIOTING AFTER A TIE GAME

For participation in the disorderly sequel to the football game between Tech High and G. M. A. Thursday afternoon at College Park, from which a number of G. M. A. students were chased by Tech students with rocks, and were compelled to seek shelter in a house occupied by a negro woman near the intersection of Hamcutt and Williams street, four Tech students Friday afternoon were fined $2 and costs by Recorder George B. Johnson.

The Tech students who faced Recorder Johnson Friday, after having spent the night at the police station upon being caught by police officers summoned to stop the disorder at 5:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, are J. D. Harper, 407 Marshall street; Decatur; P. H. Hall, 100 Highland view; E. E. Pearce, 35 Durant place, and Arthur Shelton, 280 Euclid avenue.

Six G. M. A. students testified that a number of Tech students were charged because the game ended in a tie, 7 to 7, and chased several G. M. A. students from the grounds with rocks. They testified that, in great fear, they sought refuge in the house of the negro woman, who locked them in a room for protection, while the police were summoned. They said more than 100 Tech men had chased them.

The officers testified that the Tech students upon their arrival at the police station, they succeeded in catching four men, whom they brought to the police station.

Officer McWilliams, upon being repeatedly questioned by Dr. H. E. Pearce, father of one of the boys, "why did you arrest my son?" turned upon the doctor and replied: "If you don't cease annoying me, I'll lock you up, too."

One of the greatest needs of the colored people is a training which makes the negro youth useful, honest and of good manners, was one of his statements.

The Atlanta Normal and Industrial Institute is working to the end of turning the negro masses into channels of letting down their buckets where they are able to be self-respecting," he said. "The school needs $3,000 at once for pressing notes on property."

Professor F. H. Henderson, Mary C. Ross, Early County Industrial school, Dr. S. Stringer, Dr. J. A. Hodley and others spoke.

Bishop J. S. Flipper held memorial services of preachers who had died during the year. A telegram was read announcing the death of Bishop Edwin T. Yess of Nashville. Hilltoppers Stage Noble Defense

During First Half, but Crumble
Finally; Reserves Used by Tech

Georgia Tech has a wonderful machine," stated Coach Alexander, of the Hilltoppers, last night when he was approached on the subject. The Hilltoppers' display in the Golden Tornado was all that could be desired. The Hilltoppers attributed the fact that the Jackets ran up a large score due to the fact that their safety men were not doing their duty to the best of their ability. He adds that he will bring a team down next year that will give the Golden Tornado one of the hardest fights since these two institutions have been playing the great old college game.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY.

After successfully defeating Georgia Tech to sweep them to kingdom come for the first half of their annual football game yesterday afternoon, eleven noble Irishmen of Georgetown university were enrolled in the cyclone and were carried to overwhelming defeat by the Golden Tornado. The Hilltoppers' defense was six to six for the Hilltoppers, their lone touchdown being scored in the last quarter against the reserves, who were shoved into the fray during the final period.

Three of Tech's touchdowns followed smashing attacks against line and ends that moved the ball irresistibly down the field. Another was on a 30-yard run by Perst around right end, but the most spectacular play was by Captain Flowers, who broke through right tackle and dashed 80 yards through the Blue and Gray players. It was but the history of last year's game repeating itself, only Tech's margin of victory was two points greater than it was in 1919, when the Hilltoppers were vanquished by the Golden Tornado. The defense of the Washingtonians cracked this time, just as it did last year, when the Hilltoppers' attack broke through the line and dashed 80 yards through the Blue and Gray players.

Hilltoppers Fought. Georgetown fought as thousands of fans in Atlanta knew she would, but Tech's attack was not to be stopped and the hopes of the Blue and Gray were put away for the rest of the day during the third quarter, when the first onslaught of the Alexander offensive was launched.

Prior to that time it appeared that the spirit of the Hilltoppers would prevent the Tornado from piling up an overwhelming score, but the Hilltoppers' defense, which was held up by Tech interference, could hold up no longer, and a steady tide of long gains ensued. After that Georgetown's cause was a hopeless one, and the only debatable question remaining rested on whether or not Coach Alexander would let the Hilltoppers play through the conflict. He did not and Georgetown was saved a scoreless defeat.

Those eleven Irishmen staged a great fight, however, and their defeat was taken with grace. In which the one of 1919 was repeated. There were no cries of foul tactics, no insinuations of unfair play, no hand methods used to accomplish their downfall. Georgetown was licked and Georgetown was willing to concede that a better team administered the beating.

Worn Out. They were weary because it was not physically possible for them to withstand the plugging of the Tech backfield at Tech's interference. The Hilltoppers' defense was bewilderingly swept around the ends, leaving fallen Tech tacklers in the line. In short, they were defeated because the Golden Tornado of yesterday was a veritable typhoon, sweeping a mortal man never has successfully defied, a destructive force that will not be checked.

Good Resistance. Georgetown showed good resistance on the occasions when the play was in the shadow of her goal posts, halting the Jackets at these times, only to fall before the attack after repeated drives. Georgetown tried to fall before the attack after repeated drives. Georgetown tried to fall before the attack after repeated drives. Georgetown tried to fall before the attack after repeated drives.

The Wind Shifts. The visitors were outplayed for the remainder of that period, but there was nothing to denote Tech's overwhelming superiority, and the wind shifted shortly after the opening of the second quarter. Georgetown displayed a certain inability to solve the formations which were used to a certain extent in the second period, when they displayed a corking good defense and smashing ground-gainer in Hap Ward.

Unable to gain more than a few yards in the first half, Tech made a single first down against Tech for the Tornado. Georgetown created a bit of a flurry when Ward broke through the Tech forwards for a couple of first downs in rapid succession. In addition to this spur of ground-gaining, the Hilltoppers showed a distinct reversal of form in defensive football. The Jackets left end, breaking through the Tech interference and throwing the ball for several losses. The playing was about even during this period, as each of the eleven teams played its own game. The half ended with the ball in Tech's possession on her own 17-yard line.

First Touchdown. Tech's touchdown in the first quarter came after seven minutes of play. Kenyon punted to the 35-yard line, after which Haplan had ripped three through the line, flowers went around right end, and Kenyon carried the ball on Georgetown's 30-yard line. Perst, on the fourth down, carried the ball to the Blue and Gray's 1-yard line for a first down. Flowers carried it over the right side of the line for a touchdown. Fincher kicked.

Baron again received Kenyon's kick-off and returned 25 yards before he was downed. Flowers followed by a penalty forced Flowers to punt, and a beautiful 60-yard punt to Flavin resulted. The Georgetown team was in its tracks and after repeated efforts to gain, Flavin punted to Tech on her 35-yard line. Kenyon carried the ball to the 35-yard line, and Tech completed a forward pass that netted 15 yards.

Second Quarter. During the second quarter, the defense of the Washingtonians was superb, and only the good punting of Flowers kept the ball in Georgetown territory. A number of new formations were tried out by the Jackets during this period, and the Hilltoppers' attack broke through the line and dashed 80 yards through the Blue and Gray players. It was but the history of last year's game repeating itself, only Tech's margin of victory was two points greater than it was in 1919, when the Hilltoppers were vanquished by the Golden Tornado.

Third Touchdown. The third touchdown resulted from Flowers' brilliant 80-yard run from the 35-yard line. The Hilltoppers' defense, which was held up by Tech interference, could hold up no longer, and a steady tide of long gains ensued. After that Georgetown's cause was a hopeless one, and the only debatable question remaining rested on whether or not Coach Alexander would let the Hilltoppers play through the conflict. He did not and Georgetown was saved a scoreless defeat.

Fourth Touchdown. Tech's fourth touchdown came in the fourth quarter on a 24-yard line plunge by Glavier, a forward pass. Flowers carried the ball on Georgetown's 30-yard line. Perst, on the fourth down, carried the ball to the Blue and Gray's 1-yard line for a first down. Flowers carried it over the right side of the line for a touchdown. Fincher kicked.

Flowers Starred. Flowers played his greatest game of the season, Georgetown showing a total inability to cope with the speed of the Tornado's attack. The Tech line was impotent, after Hap Ward's "Harvard" was solved. This method of line plunging was mystifying at first and Ward was enabled to reach the Tech's second line several times in the second quarter, but after the Tech forwards had solved the problem, Ward's line plunging was not productive of results.

After the reserves had begun a steady march in the second quarter, the Hilltoppers' defense, following a 15-yard gain through left tackle, was recovered for right tackle. Flavin went over right tackle for 16 yards; Kenyon hit right guard for three. On a triple pass, Kenyon went around left end for a touchdown. He failed at his goal attempt.

The Statistics. The "vital statistics" show plainly the superiority of the Golden Tornado in the second half of the game. For instance, in punting, where the Hilltoppers were thought to have a lead, Tech averaged 43 yards on his five attempts, while Flowers had 47 yards on three attempts. Flowers averaged 60 yards on four attempts, while Flowers had 47 yards on three attempts.

In the matter of first downs, Georgetown made four during the afternoon, two in the second quarter, when the playing of the Hilltoppers was of the highest order. The Hilltoppers made 12 first downs during the game, six of the first-downs coming in the first half, four in the second, eight in the third and four in the fourth.

Forward Passes. Tech tried four forward passes, two being completed and netting a total distance of 35 yards. Two fell short of the goal line, one was intercepted, while the other fell incomplete. Georgetown played the entire game with but one penalty. A 30-yard affair for off-sides. On the other hand, Tech lost sixty yards in the second period, two for off-sides and one for "clipping" in the third quarter. Captain Flowers drew honors for the longest runs of the day, the little Tech pilot bringing through a 37-yard sprint in the first period;

Chicago, November 13.—Steps to place every professional baseball league in the country under the direction of Federal Judge Kennesaw M. Landis, who yesterday was appointed a one-man commission to act as sole arbitrator in the major league disputes, were taken today.

President John Heydler, of the National league and other club owners conferred with a group of the highest officials of minor leagues over the proposed reorganization of control of professional baseball and after listening to the major league officials informed Judge Landis that they approved of his selection and favored coming under his direction.

The delegation which called on the judge were Mike Sexton of Rock Island, president of the National Association of minor leagues, John Farrell, its secretary, George T. Maines, president of the Michigan-Ontario league, E. W. Dickerson, president of the Central league, W. W. Walsh, president of the South Atlantic league and Walter Morris, president of the West Texas league.

The support of these men for the reorganization plan virtually assured its acceptance by the minor league owners. A number of base ball men here. Possibility that base ball might be given an international trip past was executed for a fair gain, a belated pass. Haplan to Flowers was smeared for a seven-yard gain. From a fake punt formation, Ward drove for several scores. The Hilltoppers' defense, which was held up by Tech interference, could hold up no longer, and a steady tide of long gains ensued.

In Charge in Canada. "We want to see you in charge of the league," said a Canadian as in the United States," he told the judge. Your appointment is a great thing for the world of baseball and the good I know will result from it must not be confined to the United States. Judge Landis spent several hours today conferring with the minor league owners and representatives of the American league. They will meet a minor league committee of six members, one from each of the American leagues. They will meet a minor league committee of six members, one from each of the American leagues.

Point Returns. "Red" Barron returned 25 yards from the 35-yard line, after which Haplan had ripped three through the line, flowers went around right end, and Kenyon carried the ball on Georgetown's 30-yard line. Perst, on the fourth down, carried the ball to the Blue and Gray's 1-yard line for a first down. Flowers carried it over the right side of the line for a touchdown. Fincher kicked.

Two Georgetown Stars

Two Georgetown Stars

Above we have two of the Georgetown stars. On the left is "Hap" Ward, the Hilltoppers' fullback, who ripped through the Tech line yesterday for good gains. His work on the defense also stamped him as a player of ability well beyond that of the average gridiron. On the right is Gus Malley, who was knocked out in the Navy game, and did not accompany the Georgetown team on the Atlanta trip.

IT'S TERRIBLE TO WITNESS
TECH'S LINE BEING CROSSED
BY PAUL WARWICK.

The most poignant memory about that game between the Hilltoppers and the Tornado Saturday afternoon was the Georgetown touchdown. Because now the Tech fans know how glad they are that they do not often know how bad it is to see that the Hilltoppers' line is so weak. The Hilltoppers' line is so weak. The Hilltoppers' line is so weak. The Hilltoppers' line is so weak. The Hilltoppers' line is so weak.

Princeton Tigers Crush

Bulldog of Yale by Score
Of 20-0 in Great Contest

Princeton, N. J., November 13.—Princeton's football eleven today broke a hoodoo of twenty-three years and defeated Yale for the second year in succession. In running up a score of 20 points, including two touchdowns and two field goals, against nothing for Yale, Princeton attempted field goals successfully. A try by Murray in the first half resulted in a score of 10-0. In the second half, Princeton attempted a place kick from the 30-yard line, but the ball struck the crossbar of the goal post and bounced back to the field.

Yale's Only Chance. Yale never compared with Princeton except for a flash in the second period, when, after advancing the ball down to its own 43-yard line, Princeton's attack found its offense checked and tried for a field goal. Murphy made the attempt, standing 22 yards from the line, but the ball was wide. This advance involved ten plays, in which Princeton's defense held the Yale offense to a total of five yards and two slices off tackle of eight yards each by the brilliant Yale defense.

Catcher's Toe Atlanta Selected to Entertain Too Much Trapshooters of Southern Zone for Sewanee In Their Big Handicap in 1921

Atlanta will have the honor of retaining the 1921 Southern zone cup. This was decided at the annual meeting of the American shooters' association held in New York city recently. During the past year the association has been held in Washington and the association's decision to hold the annual meeting will boost this sport in the South, especially in Georgia, where it has been waiting for a number of years.

The next year will be under the auspices of the club which is to be held some time in April or

The Atlanta Gun club was organized in Atlanta a little more than a year ago. W. B. Parrish was elected president and the club is carrying efforts the club has grown from a handful of shooters until it is one of the largest clubs in the country.

Just eleven days the last game of the 1929 gridiron season will be played. The Georgia Tech team will play the Georgia Institute of Technology's Golden Tornado. displayed a co-ordination and sense of teamwork that is wondrous. Indeed, it ever seemed Tech needed more words to describe its foe's vanishing and its own triumphs. It seemed to be an inclination to hold plays and formations in readiness for they might be used more.

"If a Man's Time is Worth Anything It Is Folly to Limit His Period of Transportation"

Bank President Classes Automobile as Neces- sary as Telegraph or Telephone.

John G. Longdale, president of the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis, in a letter to one of his vice presidents, expresses an attitude toward the automobile business that marks him as a deep thinking man, a man of vision and rare business acumen and also sets forth a financial policy which recognizes the automobile business in its proper light.

Mr. Longdale's letter, except for the introductory paragraph, follows in full:

"This is an age of electricity and gasoline. Distance is annihilated by the telegraph and telephone. Business is transacted not only nationally, but internationally by wire. Money is transported by telegraphic transfers of credit. If it is a question of hard-surfaced roads and automobiles against the country worn road and the ox cart in the rut, nobody wants to go back to the old days.

"If the high cost of living is a problem and a man's fixed expense is to be reckoned, we must have a time-saver, whether it be the telephone, telegraph, the wireless, the automobile or gasoline-propelled surface car or the airplane. It makes no difference whether a man is a brick-layer, plumber or banker. If his time is worth anything it is economy to limit his period of transportation.

"America is not a nation of diplomats, poets and artists, but a shirt-sleeve business people who excel in domestic industry. What is the use for a man to work hard to raise a feed for a horse when he can save the horse's feed by motive power? And so it is admitted that the tractor performs a great function and that the truck is a connecting link between the producer and the consumer, enabling door deliveries. Therefore, through a process of elimination, the passenger automobile is the only thing left.

"It would be poor economy for a farmer to burn down his barn simply to destroy a few rats. It would be a short-sighted policy to put a blight on the passenger automobile, which is a business car and a time-saver. In order to try to cure an isolated case of a youthful joy-rider. Even the enthusiasm of youth is something to be envied and a condition that money cannot buy, so if one's outlook is healthy and wholesome he will bless the man who harnessed electricity and who diverted gasoline into channels which make motive power and thereby caused the tractor, the truck and the automobile to be possible.

"The history of the American people shows that the luxury of yesterday becomes the necessity of today. Many years ago when our forefathers had wooden doors and sliding shutters for windows, window glass was considered a luxury only for the rich, but now it is a necessity even for the poor, letting sunshine and happiness flow from without, and keeping within the warmth necessary to home comfort. If there is a feeling of unrest, it should be correlated and capitalized for good road building and thereby help mankind on his way of progress.

"As to who should buy an automobile, this is an individual question which should be solved by everyone just the same as each man who has joy or sorrow or other of life's problems has to work them out individually. No economist or banker can deal with them by any fixed rules or regulations. A motor boat is a good thing, but for a man to learn to paddle his own canoe it must be self-propelled. On the other hand, a man's wife will not be sharpened keeping his nose to the grindstone.

CHRYSLER APPOINTS ITS OWN DEALERS

Overland Distributors Will Not Handle New Willys and Chrysler Product.

It has been generally assumed that the new Chrysler car, when manufactured, would be sold through the Willys-Overland sales organization. Overland distributors handling the Chrysler product. This assumption has been shattered by the announcement of the incorporation of the Chrysler Motor company to take over the sale of the new car and to establish a distributor and dealer organization on an independent basis. General sales offices have been opened at the home plant in Elizabeth, N. J., and the organization which will handle the distribution of the five to six hundred cars per day production to be built by the Chrysler plant is rapidly assuming definite shape.

Although it will be well along in the spring before the big factory will be producing cars, territorial applications are being received, and it is expected that by January the new sales plans will take form and distributor appointments will be made in some of the larger cities, where the first of the Chrysler product will be shown.

The plan, which is being formulated by E. B. Wilson, general sales manager of the Chrysler Motor division, Willys corporation, contemplates the establishment of distributing points to keep the product nearer to the consumer than a general distribution of sample cars over a wide area of territory with resultant wait for the delivery of cars in appreciable quantities—a policy that will not doubt be a distinct appeal to the trade. With large production the whole country will soon be flooded with it, and it will mean a lapse of some months from first production before general distribution is effected.

SOUTHERN NASH TO SHOW NEW "4"

New Nash Product to Be Shown at Opening of the New Home This Week.

W. J. Kalls, general manager of the Southern Nash corporation, announces that they will show the new Nash four-cylinder car this week, which will also be presented for their new home at 541 Peachtree street.

They have just finished the alterations necessary to make their new home adaptable to their large business and visitor will find one of the finest automobile homes in the southeast.

The new four will sell at a popular price and will embody the features that have made the six popular, such as valve-in-head, in-head motor, standardization of design and other commendable features.

As fast as possible every dealer operating under the Southern Nash company will be able to show a demonstrator, and until all have received their cars, none of the new product will be available for immediate delivery to the retail purchaser.

MANUFACTURER SAYS BUSINESS IMPROVING

Plants Now Operating at Full Schedule and Addi- tions Being Added.

The factory of the Federal Motor Truck company, which is operating on a full time schedule, according to an announcement made by U. L. Pulcher, vice president and general manager of the company, sufficient orders are on their way to warrant the assumption that there need be no fear of the curtailment of production in the future and the company is making every preparation for an even greater output during the coming year.

A new addition to the Federal plant, adding 50,000 square feet of space in the Federal plant, has just been completed. This new addition will house the final assembly and paint departments.

Business conditions, according to Mr. Pulcher, are "getting better fast." The result of the election combined with the general feeling of optimism on the part of business and the realization of the present importance of the motor industry is having a decidedly beneficial and strengthening effect upon the motor truck industry.

PARKER TO HOLD USED CAR SALE

The E. R. Parker Motor company, distributors for Chandler and Cleveland automobiles in Georgia and Alabama, have announced that in order to liquidate their used cars they have made drastic reductions in prices and will offer them for sale this week.

It is a policy of this company to stand behind the used cars they sell and according to officials of the company they anticipate rapid buying the first of the week.

They state further that their prices are far below the actual value of the cars, based on the present low prices of new cars.

Map No. 1 Published in "Motors and Highways" Last Sunday Shows Way- cross Route in Detail. Macon to Thomasville Fair.

situation is to furnish accurate road information as it can be compiled, and each week's work will be shown from week to week in detail. The travel and transport bureau of the R. F. Goodrich Rubber company of the Constitution will endeavor to give special routings and information to those who call in person or send self-addressed envelope for reply.

This information will not be infallible, as the general condition of all roads is lamentable and subject to change almost overnight, due to weather and other conditions. However, every effort will be made to make it accurate.

Short Pleasure Trips.
The Constitution will endeavor to map several short tours around Atlanta that may be made in an afternoon's ride. These rides will be over the least congested roads and will give some of the points of interest that may be seen, as well as the condition and kind of roads to be traveled. The purpose of these afternoon rides will be to direct the motorist who wants a quiet, pleasant ride, to find it without turning into some unknown road that might be rough or impassable.

Motorists Pleased.
The Constitution was fairly swamped last week with inquiries for routings to various points in Georgia and sister states, showing conclusively that the service which this department is trying to render is needed and appreciated by the motorists.

Many of these inquiries were unable to satisfy more than in a general way, but it is hoped that as time passes we will be able to extend this information service to fill every need of the motorist.

Schools to Teach Pupils to Observe Traffic Regulations

Bureau of Education to Urge Courses in Safety for All Grades in Public Schools.

Inclusion of courses designed to teach children the "rules of the road" will be urged upon school officials throughout the United States shortly by the textbook committee of the highway and highway transport education committee of the bureau of education. While it is yet too early to say definitely whether the recommendations for these courses will contain, some indication can be obtained from studies which are already under way in the Detroit public schools as well as in some others.

In Detroit, for example, the work starts with the kindergarten, where the child is taught to exercise care in crossing streets, always walking on the corner until he is sure that nothing is approaching within a half block.

Later, as the child progresses to the elementary grades the course is broadened and the element of personal responsibility enters into it. The course, together with more detailed instructions as to rules of safety, always in language which is easily understood and which is confined to fundamental principles.

As a supplement to the vocal instruction, traffic games have been found a valuable teaching adjunct in Ohio schools, the child learning more readily in this way and also becoming more interested.

Thus, for example, in one kindergarten one child is selected as the "cop." Others represent buildings, others machines, others are pedestrians crossing the street. The "cop" has a traffic sign with the words "go" and "stop" on it, and the pedestrians proceed according to the signs.

While no definite statistics are available to show all the causes of the many fatalities and accidents on streets and highways, it was the feeling of members of the highway and highway transport education committee in a general discussion of the subject at their recent meeting in Washington, that one very definite reason is in a lack of understanding of rules. If the child can be taught care, the rules so learned will remain with him as he grows and not only will he have a better appreciation of safety as a pedestrian, but if he becomes a driver of an automobile, a street car motorman or a locomotive engineer, his early training will always stand him in good stead.

As a further point which will be emphasized, it is hoped that to a certain extent at least, parents may be reached through their children, as the child's interest in his games will naturally lead to his describing them to his elders.

Sorry He Spoke.
Mr. Mash—Have we not met before? Your face seems strangely familiar.

Miss Squash—Yes, I am the woman who stood up in front of you for half an hour in the street car this morning while you read the paper.

WONDER GAS: A motor fuel that is new to Atlantans, but not to motorists of Chicago, Detroit, Baltimore and other eastern and northern cities.

It is a combination of gaseous liquids (one from Texas, one from Alabama) scientifically blended together; its solvent qualities are higher than any other product known to chemistry.

When used a few days will remove all carbon; its continued use will prevent the further formation, insuring the proper seating of valves, and an easy and smooth running motor, climbing hills on high, where it usually requires second and at times low to go over the top.

Strange as it may seem the price is only two cents per gallon more than the ordinary gasoline, while the increased mileage is never less than 18 per cent and frequently as high as 30 per cent.

This is the day and time we are one and all trying to economize. Why not spend a little less money for automobile fuel, and at the same time give your motor a chance to show its real worth by feeding with the proper liquid.

A trial will create a more friendly feeling between the buyer and seller.

Advanced Dual-Valve Model Is Announced by Pierce-Arrow Motor Co.

A complete line of new Dual-Valve passenger car models is announced in a statement issued this week by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car company, of Buffalo, N. Y. The public announcement was made at the close of a factory convention, at which the new product was introduced to the members of the company's nation-wide sales organization. The announcement says: "In the forthcoming Pierce-Arrow we have combined a decided mechanical refinement with a modernity of body design which authoritatively establishes a new style mode. The mechanical refinement is so pronounced that it is a revelation to drive or ride in the new Pierce-Arrow. To conform with the prevalent practice in America the left-hand drive has been adopted." The open models of the new

The Lafayette's brake equalizing differential is mounted on the rear of the transmission and operates on the same principle as the rear axle differential. It is completely enclosed, and engages unparalleled positiveness and equality of brake operation on both rear wheels and in both sets of brakes.

Motorists Visiting National Parks Show Big Increase in 1920

Statistics just compiled by the federal department of interior show a splendid increase in the number of motorists visiting the Yellowstone National park during the past season. The bulletin in part is as follows:

"Good roads, the great developments of the automobile industry and the See America First slogan brought 79,777 tourists to the Yellowstone National park, exceeding all records for the great playground by more than 20,000 visitors. With it came 13,586 automobiles and motorcycles, which exceeded the record established in 1919 by more than 2,000 automobiles and tends to show that the large national vacationland is only in its infancy. Hundreds of tourists from every state in the union and many from foreign countries spent from four to ten days and many practically the entire summer touring its beautiful scenic regions and fishing in the abundant trout streams.

"On August 2, 1920, 1,498 tourists entered the park, the greatest number entering the park in any one day in its history.

An Essex Advantage That All Acclaim

The distinction of performance which rates the moderate-priced Essex among the fine cars of the world is by no means confined to its greater speed, acceleration and hill-climbing ability.

Official proofs remove its supremacy in those qualities from debate. No car of its motor size ever matched them. Some of its marks were never equalled by any car, regardless of size, price or type.

Thus Essex Takes Rank With the Greatest Cars

Yet if one quality, more than another, causes men to link Essex in merit with the costly cars, it is its ease of motion, and elastic smoothness in action, which have no counterpart among light cars.

That is the enchantment Essex owners admit they value next to its reliability. Even long association they say does not dispel the impression of riding in a large car.

We know in all candor that few men ever have call for such speed and power as Essex possesses. Yet no owner mistakes it for useless surplus. This excess ability is valued chiefly because it does the ordinary task without effort. And because men like to have capacity that can meet exceptional calls for power, speed and acceleration, with an ease and absence of strain that brings no concern as to its accomplishment.

The satisfaction and enthusiasm of nearly 50,000 owners contents us to leave the judgment of the Essex in their hands.

which it was believed would produce $190,000,000 and a tax of 1 cent a gallon on gasoline sold to automobiles, which would raise another $50,000,000. These taxes were to be in addition to the 5 per cent excise tax now paid by the manufacturer and passed on to the dealer. After the meeting an announcement was made by the committee that the two tax schemes would be eliminated from the committee report to the national industrial conference board.

For information of dealers we will note that the preliminary statement of the internal revenue collection, 1926, by the commissioner of internal revenue, dated October 8, 1926, show that $144,494,448.79 were collected in taxes from the sales of automobiles for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1926. As a revenue producer for the government, we were Uncle Sam's "third best bet." His "ace" was the income, war profits and excess profits tax, which netted $2,957,669,970.9. His second best source was the sale of cigarettes which netted $151,512,416.92. Alcoholic beverages netted $139,855,072.55; non-alcoholic beverages, $37,480,364.44, and theaters, $51,931,789.64.

SPECIAL SERVICE FOR DEAF WILL BE HELD TODAY

A special service for the deaf will be held today at St. Mark's church by the Rev. S. M. Freeman, evangelist to the deaf for the North Georgia conference.

Services will be conducted in the sign language. The minister will speak on "I Was Jesus Who Made Him Whole" by means of the same language. All hymns are joined in by the congregation by use of rhythmic signs.

Those who may be interested in the mission to the deaf are invited to attend and especially members of the conference now in the city. For their benefit an interpreter will be present to render an oral interpretation of the entire service.

Dr. Freeman leads the congregation in all hymns. W. C. Crusselle and Walter Christian will lead in prayer. Mrs. Arthur Williamson will render the offertory, "Love Lifted Me," the congregation joining in the chorus.

Fair and continued cool weather is promised Atlanta for Sunday by C. F. von Herrmann, local weather forecaster, who says he will go no further than that, however, because he believes it just to warn Atlantans that they may expect showers Monday or Tuesday.

The temperature will remain through Sunday just as it was Saturday—which gave an average of about 25 degrees—but the low pressure area which is bound toward us from Texas should smite the city some time Monday, reduce the temperature a bit, then favor us with some inches of rainfall, said Mr. von Herrmann.

There has never been much more ideal football weather than that dealt Atlanta fans and players on local gridirons Saturday afternoon. It was cold enough to be snappy and not cold enough to put biting pain into the bruises sustained by the players. The absence of all but a very moderate breeze also satisfied the fans in the stands and was kind to the punting proclivities of Flavin and Flowers, respectively, of Georgetown and Tech.

organization in its fourth roll call. "In the development of its peace-time program, the American Red Cross has written another chapter in its history, perhaps less dramatic than that of war-time, but none the less glorious in its spirit and its object," Cardinal Gibbons said. "Throughout the past year the Red Cross has been devoting its attention to the welfare of the people at home as well as that of foreign peoples. In every field of its effort, its record speaks enthusiastically and desire to serve."

REO

This Reo Speed Wagon Fits Every Business

In its proven range of usefulness and its great degree of adaptability as well as its wonderful efficiency and low upkeep, this Reo Speed Wagon has surpassed even its creators.

Its influence on the truck business in general has been tremendous. It has rendered many other types obsolete.

Designed originally, in the belief that it would meet a specific need in a limited field, this pneumatic tired truck has found its way into innumerable industries, the very existence of which were previously unknown to us.

Realizing that only through greater speeds than were possible to trucks mounted on "solids" could greater economy of operation and upkeep be attained, the Reo engineers designed and built this Speed Wagon.

Results were immeasurably beyond their fondest expectations.

Not only was the efficiency multiplied, the fuel consumption divided, but even tire mileage was greatly added to.

And—most important of all—it was found the same chassis would live three times as long when cushioned from road shocks, power and brake stresses by the resilient air-filled tires.

In a word, this pneumatic tired Reo Truck, which we thereupon named "Speed Wagon" showed the way in the greatest single advance made in automotive engineering since the inception of the industry.

Lest you have forgotten:—

This Reo was the original of its type as well as of its title.

"Speed Wagon" is a copyrighted Reo trade mark.

That's proof of its pioneering

This was the first motor vehicle designed expressly for heavy trucking service that was mounted on pneumatics, and equipped with electric starter and electric lights.

From the day of its advent it was received with enthusiasm by users.

In five years it has found its way into every part of the world, doing wonderful work in war as well as in peace service.

It is as often seen on the farm as in the city. Seems as if its range of usefulness is as broad as the range of human activity itself.

Manufacturers, wholesalers, jobbers and retailers in every line, find this Speed Wagon ideally suited to their widely diversified needs.

Crowley-Milner Company—Detroit's largest department store—has a fleet of 38 Reo Speed Wagons, and we could name similar cases in almost every city and town.

Farmers in the east; grain growers and stockmen in the middle states; ranchers in the west; cotton planters in the south—dairymen everywhere—look upon this Speed Wagon as the standard, because the best adapted, type for their work.

Passenger busses in Alaska and in South Africa—in California and in the Atlantic States (400 Reos running in this service in Newark, N. J. alone!)

No matter what the business or the delivery problems peculiar to it; no matter what the climate or the condition of roads—still this Speed Wagon proves its capacity to do the work, and its superiority, by all tests.

Because of its proven quality, its economy and its broad sphere of usefulness, demand always has been in excess of possible output.

Demand of the last three months has clearly determined Reo leadership.

So the only way to be at all sure of getting delivery of a Speed Wagon when you'll need it is—to order now—at once. Today won't be a minute too soon.

Prices are f. o. b. factory, Lansing, plus Special Federal Tax

Splendid Report of Progress Of State Highway Department

The state highway department has actually completed highway projects involving an expenditure of $1,500,000 and has under construction 122 additional projects, which will aggregate $10,500,000, according to announcement made Saturday by the department. This record of completed construction has been accomplished during the past twelve months and within the next year the comprehensive highway program, which will link up every county in the state and weld the commonwealth into a scientifically arranged transportation unit, will have been measurably advanced.

The completed projects give every section of the state an opportunity to see at first hand just what the highway department is doing, what the underlying highway policy of the state actually means. The 122 projects under construction are located in every congressional district and in more than two-thirds of the counties of the state.

The working force engaged in carrying out the program includes an army of 3,500 men, 1,200 teams, 15 steam shovels, 33 road rollers, 108 road scrapers and similar machinery, 75 concrete mixers, 12 rock crushers and five asphalt distributing machines.

In most instances, the completed projects were constructed with funds made up jointly by the state, county and federal government. The projects under construction are, in a majority of cases, financed in like manner. Many counties have allowed the department to handle their highway funds, also turning over the engineering, inspecting and auditing details to the department authorities. The entire amount of federal aid funds is expended through the department.

For the information of the public and particularly those citizens who are interested in highway development, the department announces the following completed projects:

From Gainesville north to the Lumpkin county line, a sand clay road 12 miles long, scientifically graded. This road will be a link in the Gainesville-Blairsville highway by way of Dahlonega.

From Jefferson toward Commerce, two-thirds of the distance, a sand clay road.

Out of Washington in three directions—toward Athens, Elberton and Lincoln. A total of nine miles of concrete road.

From Moreland to Greenville, in Meriwether county, 16 miles of sand clay road.

From LaGrange northward toward the Coweta county line, a sand clay road and three concrete bridges. This is an important link in the Atlanta-West Point route.

Six miles of sand clay road in Henry county on the main Atlanta-Macon route.

From Lenoir, at the Bibb county line, southward to the city of Macon, on concrete, 10 miles.

Also in Bibb county, from Macon southward toward Fort Valley, two and one-half miles of concrete road.

This is a part of the Atlanta-Macon-American-Thomasville route.

In Thomas county, from Thomasville north to the Okefenokee river, three miles of bituminous macadam, as well as a concrete bridge across this river, 80 per cent completed.

A steel and concrete bridge across the Flint river between Montezuma and Oglethorpe, in Macon county. This is one of the most important projects on the Atlanta-Macon-American-Thomasville route.

In Brooks county, from Quitman northward toward Moultrie, eight miles of concrete road and five concrete bridges.

North and south from Swainsboro, in Emanuel county, ten concrete bridges at points where traffic had been impeded between Atlanta, Macon and Savannah.

An important concrete bridge north of Valdosta on the Valdosta-Adel link of the middle Dixie highway.

A concrete road eight miles long from Savannah northward in Chatham county. This is another link in the Atlanta-Macon-Savannah route.

An important concrete bridge across Swamp creek in Whitfield county. This bridge eliminates one of the most troublesome spots between Dalton and various points in north Georgia.

One mile of bituminous macadam road out of Ellijay, in Gilmer county. This stretch of road was constructed as an object lesson and forms a link in the Atlanta-Blue Ridge route.

Every one of these completed projects has had the effect of linking up existing good roads, being located at strategic points. They give an indication of the scope of the highway program and serve to demonstrate the real purpose of the highway department.

In addition to the projects already completed and under construction the department has contracted for projects aggregating $1,500,000, on which work will be begun in the near future.

Several projects of vital importance in the highway program are now in course of construction. Among them is the twelve-mile stretch of tar, gravel and asphalt road being built along the edge of the Okefenokee swamp between Waycross and Folkston. This is one of the most strategic points along the route into Jacksonville. The road has been almost impassable because of sand, swampy holes and soft spots.

The completion of the highway bridge at Darien across the Altamaha river and several arms of the sea, will mark a triumph for highway construction in that section of the state. This bridge, five miles long, was formerly used by the Georgia Coast and Piedmont railroad and when that road was abandoned recently, the bridge was purchased jointly by Flynn and McIntosh counties to prevent its being salvaged as junk. It is now being remodeled as a vehicular bridge by the use of steel and concrete and when completed will be opened up toll free as an important link in the Savannah-Jacksonville route.

The department is also building a bituminous macadam road from Dahlonega southward to the Hall county line, connecting with the link already completed in Hall county and forming an important section of the Gainesville-Blairsville route. The Chesterton Pyrites company is donating the rock for this road, which is of almost importance to the mountain section.

Seven miles of bituminous macadam road is being constructed from Rome toward Cedartown, forming a link in the Chattanooga-Tallahassee route.

Between Thomaston and Butler the department is now building a concrete bridge over the Flint river. When completed, this bridge will open up a new road between Griffin and Americus via Zebulon, which has heretofore been impassable, except by ferry established in the colonial days.

Within a short time the highway department will issue a more detailed statement relative to the projects now under construction and the highway program in general.

Service Rendered By Local Branch of the Buick Motor Company

The service department of the Buick Motor company, Atlanta branch, has recently been completely reorganized, making available to Buick owners in this section a thoroughly reliable, efficient and economical service. The installation of special machine and hand tools, and the organization of a competent force of workmen skilled in Buick mechanical features, assures facilities not only for minor repairs and adjustments, but for complete overhauling of the automobile.

Authorized Buick service at the Buick plant, 241 Peachtree street, is in charge of W. H. Langmaid, service manager, and R. W. Ottman, shop foreman. Both of these gentlemen have had ten years' experience in Buick mechanical departments both at the Flint factory and in various branches.

"An automobile with poor service back of it is a poor automobile," says Mr. Langmaid, in discussing that much-used word, "Service."

Teacher—Well, Jimmie, does the question trouble you? Jimmie—No, ma'am, but the answer does.

Mrs. Helen Mason has completed fifteen years of continuous service as police matron of Wichita, Kan.

THE VICTORY OF GOOD VALUE

Dodge Brothers' great works are operating at full capacity every day.

It is good to be able to say to you that Dodge Brothers' implicit faith in the good will that grows out of good value is being vindicated by everything that is going on in their plants today.

You know well that Dodge Brothers dedicated themselves, from the very first, to the production of a car which should rise superior to all external conditions, and be, in effect, and in fact, a law unto itself.

They were supremely satisfied, to begin with, that good motor cars supplied a great and a permanent human need.

They were sure that no matter what happened, there would always be an inexhaustible market for the particular kind of a car they hoped and planned to build.

They were convinced that they could produce a car so sound in value, so saving, and so satisfactory to the individual owner, that no outside influence could shake its hold upon the public.

The simple facts, as they exist at this moment, are so inspiring that we are prompted to share them with everyone who shares with Dodge Brothers their faith in sound business principles.

Dodge Brothers are more strongly and soundly entrenched in the good will of the public at this moment than ever in their history.

Every good result which John and Horace Dodge counted upon when they committed themselves to the principles of building good will by building good value, has come to pass.

Their certainty that people will always discover a meritorious product, set it apart, prefer it and reward it, is continuing to come true with each and every succeeding business day.

Dodge Brothers Motor Car is in demand because Dodge Brothers Motor Car meets a definite economic need and satisfies a human craving for honest and substantial value.

Its market will continue to grow and the production continue to increase to meet that market, as long as merit continues to be the determining factor in motor cars and in all other manufactured products.

MONEY TO LOAN

Loans on New Houses

IT is not necessary for us to tell you how acute the housing situation is, not only in your city, but throughout the country. NOW is the time for the vacant lot owner to realize on his holdings, through this new loan feature. WE are presenting a proposition which is favored by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. This proposition is so arranged that it is bound to relieve the seriousness of the present housing conditions. THESE loans will be made on new one-family dwellings and new moderate-priced apartments; that is to say, ones needed by persons of moderate means and income, in numerous towns and cities throughout the state of Georgia. AMOUNTS to be loaned will not exceed $5,000, nor will they be less than $2,000, on new one-family dwellings, loan not to exceed 50 per cent of land value and construction cost of the building without carrying charges or profit. IN case of apartments, the amounts loaned may be larger, but must receive special consideration for this office. THESE loans are to be made for fifteen years, with the option to the borrower to pay the loans without penalty after three years. INTEREST at current rates is to be paid on first days of June and December. There is a 3 per cent semi-annual curtailment to be paid on interest dates. For instance, if you have a loan of $5,000, you will pay $150 of principal on first day of June and same on first day of December. IF YOU are contemplating building one or more houses, you would be pleased to go into the proposition with you, and, in some cases, we will be able to make a commitment before the building is completed. APPLICATIONS will receive prompt attention, inspections will be made immediately, and all loans will be closed with the least possible delay.

MONEY TO LOAN

Loans on New Houses

IT is not necessary for us to tell you how acute the housing situation is, not only in your city, but throughout the country. NOW is the time for the vacant lot owner to realize on his holdings, through this new loan feature. WE are presenting a proposition which is favored by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. This proposition is so arranged that it is bound to relieve the seriousness of the present housing conditions. THESE loans will be made on new one-family dwellings and new moderate-priced apartments; that is to say, ones needed by persons of moderate means and income, in numerous towns and cities throughout the state of Georgia. AMOUNTS to be loaned will not exceed $5,000, nor will they be less than $2,000, on new one-family dwellings, loan not to exceed 50 per cent of land value and construction cost of the building without carrying charges or profit. IN case of apartments, the amounts loaned may be larger, but must receive special consideration for this office. THESE loans are to be made for fifteen years, with the option to the borrower to pay the loans without penalty after three years. INTEREST at current rates is to be paid on first days of June and December. There is a 3 per cent semi-annual curtailment to be paid on interest dates. For instance, if you have a loan of $5,000, you will pay $150 of principal on first day of June and same on first day of December. IF YOU are contemplating building one or more houses, you would be pleased to go into the proposition with you, and, in some cases, we will be able to make a commitment before the building is completed. APPLICATIONS will receive prompt attention, inspections will be made immediately, and all loans will be closed with the least possible delay.

Perkins—Carnes.

A marriage of social interest was that of Miss Vera Claire Perkins and Mr. William Clarke Carnes, which was solemnized by Rev. W. M. Suttles Monday, November 1, at 6 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Perkins. The house was beautifully decorated with ferns, white ivy and vases of white chrysanthemums. The living room, where the ceremony was performed, was an improvised altar, the center having a large oval mirror embedded in ferns, white ivy and chrysanthemums. Preceding the bride party Miss Edythe Duke sang very sweetly "Because." To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, which was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Gustice Gower, the bride party entered. First came the flower girls, little Sara McCoy and Mary Selman, wearing dainty frocks of white organza with apple green ribbons, carrying baskets of white chrysanthemums tied with bows of green tulle. The bride, entering with her father, Mr. S. S. Perkins, was lovely in her going-away suit of brown velvet, hat and other accessories to match. Her flowers were brides roses showered with swansonia. She was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. Hugh Carver, a brother of the groom. Mrs. Carver is the only child of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Perkins and has greatly endeared herself to a large circle of friends by her gracious manner and charming personalities. She is a very talented musician. Mr. Carver is a young man of sterling qualities, very popular socially as well as in business life. After a short wedding trip they will be at home to their friends in Douglasville, Ga.

Miss Page Weds Mr. Morris At Inman Park Parsonage

A marriage of interest to a large circle of friends was that of Miss Frances Evelina E. Page and Mr. Joseph Dave Morris, which was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the residence of Rev. Thomas R. Kendall. The ceremony was witnessed by only the relatives and very close friends of the bride and groom, including Mr. and Mrs. O. J. Willoughby, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Taylor and Miss Nora Page. The bride was attractively groomed in a tulle of brown peachblow with touches of blue in the embroidery on the coat and worn with brown feather hat with feather ornament of blue burnt goose. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony, an informal dinner was given at the home in Inman Park of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Morris. Groover and L. C. Drew, of Atlanta, Vann Groover was best man and Miss Virginia Avera maid of honor. Several children were attendants, Frances Klein Staton, of Valdosta; Dugald Avera, Eleanor McMichael, Laura Lilly, Teddy MacDowell and Elizabeth Chance. Misses Marguerite and Marian Whittington and Mr. George Sherman, of Valdosta, gave a lovely musical program. The bride is the daughter of Mr. John R. Avera and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Groover, both belonging to old county families.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris, Jr., went immediately to their new apartment on Juniper street, where they will be at home to their friends. The bride's daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Page, of Augusta, has made her home in Atlanta for almost two years and has endeared herself to a large circle of friends. She is a blond of unusual beauty and charm of manner and she comes of a well-known Augusta family. She is the sister of Mrs. W. H. Holmes, Mrs. Joseph Atkinson and Mrs. How, and Miss Nora Page. Mr. Morris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Morris, of 190 Euclid avenue, and is the manager of the merchandise department of the Atlanta Constitution. He is quite well known in the business world. Mr. and Mrs. Morris will make their home at 48 Juniper, where they have an apartment.

Oglethorpe Board To Meet.

The women's board of Oglethorpe university will hold its first meeting next Thursday afternoon, November 18, at 3 o'clock, in the chapel of the university.

On account of the continued illness of the president, Mrs. Thornwell Jacobs, the meeting will be presided over by the first vice president, Mrs. Leachcraft.

An unusually interesting program has been arranged, and will be largely in the nature of a study of the subject of "Self-Help." The subject of athletics will be presented by Mrs. J. C. Price, and Miss Martha Shover will speak for the co-eds.

In addition to these talks, Mr. Parker Cahoon will discuss Oglethorpe's band; Mr. Dwight Johnson will tell something of the scholastic life at the university, and one of the special students, Miss Horton, will give a short talk on "The Finished College Woman."

Mrs. Ashcraft urges every member of the women's board to be present, and promises an afternoon of interest and profit.

East Indian Program At Drama League.

Following the recent successful series of talks on the drama of the east by Dhan Gopal Mukerji, the Hindu poet and scholar, the Atlanta Drama League will present at its next regular meeting, on Tuesday afternoon, November 16, a reading of "Sakuntala."

This is the oldest of the Indian dramas, the authorship of which is revealed only in the most general prologue, which says: "The play is by the poet Kalidasa." For real atmosphere of the ancient Orient and yet for the love story of all time, as lovely as Romeo and Juliet, "Sakuntala," perhaps, has no equal in the realm of drama. It is played several weeks out of every year in India, and is one of the most successful of the presentations of the Greenwich Village theater in New York.

It is greatly regretted that circumstances prevented the carrying out of the plan for Miss Carolyn Cobb's dramatic reading of the play, but Mrs. Emma Garrett Boyd has kindly consented, even upon the brief notice, to take over the program. Mrs. Boyd will add to her delightful reading of the poetic lines an account of the Greenwich Village production which she witnessed.

Two weeks from Tuesday Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson will read Rabindranath Tagore's "King of the Dark Chamber," the reputed finest example of the modern Hindu drama, and the audiences will have the opportunity of judging the differences between the two forms, as well as seeing for themselves the points of resemblance and of variance, recently pointed out to them by Mr. Mukerji.

The meeting will be held as usual in Eggleston Hall at 3 o'clock, Tuesday afternoon, and is open to all members of the Atlanta center upon presentation at the door of membership cards. Those desiring to become members of the league for the season 1920-21 may secure these cards upon payment at the door of the annual dues, which insures as well a year's subscription to "The Drama" magazine.

Arts of Greece For Study Club.

Mrs. Maybelle S. Wall is chairman of the program "The Arts of Classical Greece," which is to be given by the Atlanta Music Study club at the Ponce de Leon Baptist church annex on Piedmont avenue Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

This is the second in a series of programs to be given on ancient art and culture, in which it is sought to establish the connection between present musical composition and its ancient inspiration.

Classical Greece has been one of the most prolific sources of inspiration for the musician, as well as for the poet and dramatist. From the days of Gluck and his classical opera subjects down to the present time, there have been a succession of master composers which have drawn their inspiration directly from ancient Athens. It will be the aim of those in charge of the program to indicate just the extent of this culture and its influence at the present time.

Mrs. Wall will have the assistance of Mrs. Benjamin Elias, whose lovely soprano voice is so much heard throughout the city, who will sing Brahms' "Sappho Ode." Mrs. Eugene Heath, who will give a most interesting talk on Greek drama and poetry; Mrs. P. H. Jeter, who will give a delightful reading from Sappho and Mr. A. W. Browning, who will render the Greek patriotic hymn. A special feature of the program will be an illustrated talk on the architecture and sculpture of Greece by Professor Francis Jones, of the Georgia School of Technology. Professor Jones will use the stereopticon in revealing some of the finest examples of the Greek classical period, both in architecture and sculpture.

All music lovers of the city are most cordially invited to become members of the club. The membership fee of $2 admits to all regular club meetings, as well as the morning musicals, which are a part of the program for this season. Membership cards will be issued at the door before the meeting is opened.

The complete program for Wednesday is as follows: "Architecture and Sculpture of Greece," Professor Francis Jones; Brahms' "Sappho Ode," Mrs. Benjamin Elias; "Fragments of Poems from Sappho," Mrs. P. H. Jeter; "Greek Drama and Poetry," Mrs. Eugene Heath; "Hymn to Apollo," "Music of the Greek Church," "Victory Records," "Music of Greece," Mrs. Maybelle S. Wall; "Greek Patriotic Hymn," Mr. A. W. Browning.

Wednesday Morning Study Club.

The Wednesday Morning Study club will meet with Mrs. M. E. Tully at 14 E. Oak lane Wednesday morning, November 17, at 10:30.

Home Economics Program.

A program on Home Economics, arranged by Mrs. Ray Neal and Mrs. A. Mayfield, will be presented at the next meeting of the College Park Women's club in the assembly room of Cox college, Wednesday, November 17, at 3 o'clock.

The speaker, Miss Clara Lee Cone, director of home economics of the Girls' High school, will give a most practical lecture on the important features of this department. The domestic science department of our own high school, under the able leadership of Miss Lydia Sue Boners, will give a demonstration of their work.

"Echoes" from the recent federation meeting will be given by Mrs. Edwin Lang, our delegate. A most delightful musical program has been provided by Mrs. W. W. Ward, music chairman. Mrs. R. L. Aderhold, the president, will announce some important committees. This meeting promises to be most pleasing and helpful, and a full attendance is desired.

Kill Kare Klub.

Oxford, Ga., November 13.—(Special.)—Unusual interest centered in the regular meeting of the Kill Kare club on Tuesday afternoon, at the home of Mrs. W. A. Aiken, on account of the unique feature of the program. By special request, the tax collector, Mr. Sam Ramsey, appeared on the scene for the purpose of registering the club as a body. The club has a membership of forty-one, and they entered into the novel experience with keen zest, with the exception of two or three, who were not quite ready for so great responsibility. The club is making plans for a study course on citizenship in the near future. They are alive to the best interests of the town, having recently put on the Alkahest Lyceum course.

Dances This Week and Next Will Feature Activities In Atlanta's Social Life

The dance to be given Saturday night by the Tech hospital auxiliary for the benefit of the Tech hospital and the announcement of a Thanksgiving dinner-dance to be held at the Capital City club a week from next Wednesday are outstanding features of interest in Atlanta's social life.

The Tech auxiliary, with Miss Mary Clarke Cohen, as chairman, and Miss Alice Stearns, as co-chairman, will give its dance from 8 to 12 o'clock the night of November 20, at the Hotel Ansley. Assisting Mrs. Cohen and Miss Stearns will be the other charter members of the auxiliary, including Miss Lydia Mathews, Miss Alice Orme, Miss Marguerite Stringfellow and Miss Mary Nevin.

The tickets will be $2, and Garber-Davis orchestra will furnish the dance music for this auspicious occasion, which will be the most prominent week-end event in the festivities of the college set. Those who desire to attend may obtain tickets from any member of the auxiliary.

The following Tech belles will also assist: Misses Emily Davis, Julia Black, Callie Orme, Grace Goldsmith, Martha McCrea, Hallie Poole, Irene Thomas, Kate Palmour, May Emery, Cornelle Torrence, Nellie and Dorothy Dodd, Marion Stearns, Mary Bardwell, Mary Sadler, Jorinne Johnson, Ruth Rhorer, Catherine Sanders, Mary Malone, Mary Hill Bloodworth, Ruth Yarbrough, Christine McEachern, Ruth Rhorer, Allen and Mary Carroll, Sara Schoen, Wilmothine Perdue, Rosalyn Amorous, Isabel Amorous, Mary Frances Coolege, Louise Brown, Maudie Couch, Marian Smith, Frances Peabody, Margaret White and others.

The chapters will be Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grady, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stearns, Dr. and Mrs. Frank Boland, Dr. and Mrs. K. G. Matheson, Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Wallace, Dr. and Mrs. J. B. White, and Mrs. Edward Van Winkle.

Thanksgiving Dance At Capital City.

In regard to the Thanksgiving dinner-dance, which will be given at the Capital City club Wednesday evening, November 24, members have been reminded that the club capacity is 300 and the first 125 reservations will be placed in the ballroom and 125 in the salon adjoining. Chase's orchestra will furnish music for the occasion.

Tonight there will be the regular table d'hôte dinner served at the club, with an orchestra concert. The musical program includes: "March," "Alhambra," "Chambers," "Rendezvous," "Alester," "On the Old Plantation," "Isleman," "Cansetta," "Nicodemus," "Drifting Along," "Goldberg-Nielsen," "In Sweet September," "Macon," "Please Learn to Love," "Hollam," "Tues," "Typical-Topical," "Yoddybye."

Army Contingent at Fort McPherson.

The arrival of the officers comprising the Fourth army corps and their families, with headquarters at Fort McPherson, will be an interesting addition to Atlanta's social life, for their coming has more of personality attached to it than conditions during the war permitted. Then the officers who were assigned to duty at the fort would scarcely be acquainted before they and their families would be ordered to some other fort. Under the reorganization of the army there is every reason to believe that the Fourth army corps which is here now has come to stay awhile. Anyway, that is what Atlanta people hope for. With deepest regret the news has come that Colonel Bratton has been assigned to duty at the military hospital at Hot Springs, Ark., not that his Atlanta friends are not appreciative that the change brings to him a recognition of ability and service which he richly deserves, but because in the army way it takes him away from Fort McPherson, where he and his charming wife have become much beloved.

During the war days the people of Atlanta have grown to know Fort McPherson and to take a patriotic interest in the people centered there and there is no doubt that this relation will continue in the coming of the Fourth army corps to be "at home" at the fort.

Among the ladies at the fort is Mrs. Adna Chaffee, wife of Major Chaffee, who is at present in New York, one of the judges in the military features of the annual Madison Square Garden horse show. Mrs. Chaffee was Miss Ethel Huff, of Chattanooga, and she frequently visits Atlanta, and had many friends here. Residing with Major and Mrs. Chaffee are their little son and Mrs. Chaffee's mother, Mrs. J. A. Dodson.

Belgian Artist In Atlanta.

Art lovers are very much interested in the work of E. Heineken, well-known Belgian artist, who took the first prize at a recent exhibition given in the Academy of Fine Arts, Brussels. Mr. Heineken, who is now in Atlanta, is a pupil of Joseph Israels, the great Dutch master, and he has studied with Frans von Stuck in Munich, and later in Paris.

A scene in Venice, a water escape on the Italian coast, and a Dutch interior home scene, demonstrate that his studies have taken him to famous art centers, and their beauty attracts the eye and holds it. There is a softness in the colors and a delicacy of treatment, which would delight lovers of the beautiful who might not be art critics, while Atlanta's art students and lovers of art are encouraging Mr. Heineken to make an exhibit of his pictures in Atlanta, which he may do in early January.

Among those who have seen his pictures and admired them are Mr. C. P. Bidwell, of the Atlanta Art association, and Mrs. E. W. More, an artist herself, a member of the art association, and the chairman of fine arts of the Southeastern fair committee, which recently brought to Atlanta the admirable collection of pictures at the recent fair.

Former Principals In "Robin Hood."

Incident to the performance here this week of the famous opera, "Robin Hood," there are many Atlantans who will recall that the first time the opera was presented here, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Pearson had leading parts in the cast. He sang the famous "Brown October Ale," and Mrs. Pearson took the part which had been made famous by Jessie Bartlett Davis in the original cast.

Mr. and Mrs. Pearson had letters of introduction to Atlanta music lovers, among them Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Barnes, who entertained them and other members of the cast. Subsequently Mr. and Mrs. Pearson returned to Atlanta to reside, and have been generous contributors to Atlanta's musical growth.

To Give Reception For Debutantes.

Mrs. Jesse Walter Bates and Mrs. C. Irvine Walker, Jr., have issued invitations to a reception at which they will be hostesses in honor of their daughters, Miss Dorothy Bates and Miss Virginia Walker, on Friday afternoon, November 19, from 4 until 6 o'clock, 125 East Eleventh street, the home of Mrs. Bates.

These two young women, Miss Bates and Miss Walker, are charming members of the debutante set. Assisting in entertaining will be Mrs. Mel Wilkinson, Mrs. Stratton Hard, Mrs. Frank Gumm, Mrs. James L. Campbell, Mrs. Arthur Smart, Mrs. J. H. Childress, Mrs. Edward T. Turman, Mrs. Cleves Symmes, Jr., Miss

C., and who will act as chairman of the Tech Hospital auxiliary, at the benefit dance which will be given next Saturday evening at the Ansley hotel; Miss Carolina Nicolson, the pretty daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William Perrin Nicolson, talented in both art and music; Miss Mary Woolridge, the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Woolridge, a belle in the college set of society, who makes her home at the Georgian Terrace. at a series of galleys. Miss Perkins represents a family prominent and socially important in New Orleans.

On Thursday, November 18, Miss Grace Goldsmith will give a luncheon for this visitor.

Miss Nellie Dodd will entertain at the dinner-dance at Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening, November 20, in compliment to Miss Perkins. Mrs. Edward Gay, Jr., gives a luncheon on Tuesday, November 23.

Miss Sanders and Miss Perkins will be among the belles at the "Nine o'clock" ball at the Druid Hills Golf club Wednesday evening, November 24.

Mrs. Troup Howard will entertain at a buffet supper at her home in Druid Hills Sunday evening, November 21.

Miss Wilmothine Perdue will give a luncheon, Miss Hallie Crawford will entertain at her home on Peachtree road, and Mrs. Joseph Raine will also be hostess at a party in honor of Miss Perkins.

Mr. and Mrs. Inman Sanders will revive the old-time popular custom of giving dances at home, and will compliment Miss Perkins with a dance Tuesday evening, November 23, at their home on Peachtree road. Other affairs will also be planned in honor of Miss Perkins and Miss Sanders.

At Camp Gordon— Social Life.

A dance at the army service hostess house Friday evening, given by the soldiers of the Sixth infantry, was one of the prettiest socials of the season. A delightful refreshment course was served and the music for the occasion was furnished by the Sixth infantry orchestra. The guests were received by Mrs. Max Muller, wife of Band Leader Max Muller, who acted as hostess for the men of the Sixth.

The Camp Gordon chapter of the American Red Cross has been most active in the membership drive, and indications are that when the campaign closes tonight the local committee will have enrolled practically the entire strength of the garrison. The ladies of the post have made a very thorough canvass of the garrison, while booths have been maintained at the hostess house and at the Sixth infantry club, and it is expected that Camp Gordon's quota will be far exceeded long before the drive is scheduled to close.

The post library has been installed at the hostess house under the direction of the educational and recreational officer, Captain John J. Murphy. More than twelve hundred volumes are on hand and it is planned to add another thousand volumes within the next few weeks.

Captain H. E. Meneses is spending fifteen days' leave of absence in Washington, D. C., and other eastern cities.

The calendar of social events for the coming week include a party on Wednesday afternoon at the hostess house, given by Mrs. Hunter B. Nelson, wife of the post commander, assisted by her daughter, Miss Hazel Nelson.

Upon the recommendation of their congressman, five Georgia young men have been designated during the past week for the United States Military academy entrance examinations to be held beginning on March 1, with a view to admission to the academy on July 1. All these candidates are from the Third Georgia district, as follows: James W. Asteller, Americus; Albert R. Grant, Cordele, first alternate; Robert H. Fetter, Americus, second alternate; Fred G. Guerry, Monticuma; Pinis E. Dunway, Americus, first alternate.

The reception was given at the Community house, which is the property of the Episcopal church, but which extends its hospitality to all community service. It was artistically decorated for the occasion with autumn foliage and red flowers. The charming tea table had its centerpiece of red

Atlantans Guests at Cedartown House Party.

A group of Atlantans enjoyed a rare hospitality in Cedartown on Armistice day, when they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Adamson.

The occasion was one of double significance, since the house party was invited to enjoy the first concert of the season under the auspices of the Woman's club of Cedartown, and also to christen the new hotel, "The Wayside Inn," just completed as a result of the enterprise of Mr. Adamson and other Cedartown citizens.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Lyle, Mrs. W. C. Jarnigan, Mr. and Mrs. Valdemar Gude and others went from Atlanta. Mrs. William H. Felton, of Cartersville, was a distinguished guest, and Mr. Sovereign, of Bay City, Mich., was a visitor.

The guests.

The out-of-town guests, arriving in the morning, made a tour at their own request of the cotton mill, of which Mr. Adamson is president. This inspection including also the service features, notably, the playground in course of construction, the plans of the landscape gardener who is to have charge of the beautifying of the mill settlement, and the Aladdin houses, of which Mr. Sovereign, of Bay City, is one of the firm manufacturing this last word in home building; Mr. Quilian, vice president and general manager of the corporation, and Mrs. Quilian conducted the trip.

An elegant luncheon was served at 1 o'clock and Mr. and Mrs. Adamson's beautiful home, and at 3 o'clock the Woman's club, Mrs. Fred Noble, president, gave a reception in honor of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, who is one of the state's leading club women.

The reception was given at the Community house, which is the property of the Episcopal church, but which extends its hospitality to all community service. It was artistically decorated for the occasion with autumn foliage and red flowers. The charming tea table had its centerpiece of red people, and this flower was worn by all the ladies, the visitors having their poppies presented them. An Armistice day program, brief and appropriate, was presented, and the visiting ladies had the opportunity of meeting the Cedartown club women, of whom a large number was present.

At 6 o'clock the Wayside Inn was formally opened with a beautiful dinner at which Mr. and Mrs. Adamson were hosts. There were forty guests, and they were seated in the dining room, an inviting hall, its main decoration the American flag, draped over an antique sideboard in walnut, on which the Colonial candlesticks were also antiques. The tables had their decorations in Shasta daisies, and all the guests again wore red poppies.

Appropriate after dinner talks were made, and tribute was paid Mr. Adamson, to whom Cedartown owes much of the credit for its growth and development, both materially and in community spirit.

West End At the Clubs.

The first cold weather gave extra enthusiasm to the enjoyment of the dinner dances, which are week-end features Saturday at the Piedmont Driving Club, Capital City Club and East Lake Country Club.

At the Capital City Club Mr. Carl H. Lewis, Dr. Bowcock, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Frederick and others entertained.

C., and Miss Margaret Garreth, of Philadelphia, inviting to meet them Miss Dorothy Haverly, Miss Minnie Lou McNeal, of Marietta; Messrs. Henry Walker Bagley, Edmund Brady and his guest, Mr. Hughes, of New York; Messrs. Edwin McCarty, Spencer Tunnell and Lee Adams, of Greenville, S. C.

this fall in the organization of a magazine to be devoted to the interests of dancing.

Mr. Brooks Mel's groomsmen for his marriage to Miss Mary Brown on Wednesday entertained the bridal party at a delightful dinner last night at the dinner-dance at the East Lake Country Club.

The bridesmaids and groomsmen are Misses Corrie Hoyt Brown, Marjorie McIntosh, of New York; Dorothy Brown, of Milwaukee; Lydia Mell, Isoline Campbell, Margaret Hoyt, Mr. and Mrs. George M. Brown, Jr., Messrs. Henry Robinson, Henry Hallman, George Northen, Charles L. Green, Robert E. Moll, of Rock Hill, S. C., and John Westmoreland.

Club d'Honneur Armistice Dance.

On Thursday evening, November 11, the special Armistice day dance given by the Club d'Honneur at their clubrooms, corner Peachtree and Third streets. The first exhibition given was a Grecian interpretive dance, the little dancer wearing a shell-pink Grecian dancing frock. The second exhibition was a ballet dance, and little Miss Chalmers wore a dainty frock of black and red, the colors of the Club d'Honneur. The exhibition dancing was greatly enjoyed and brought many encores.

The clubrooms were a mass of American flags and red poppies with artistic decorations of red and black appearing at intervals.

Dandruff Soon

Ruins The Hair

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails. —(adv.)

Needlecraft Exhibit.

An event of Thursday, November 11, was the annual exhibit of the Needlecraft circle, which was held at the home of Mrs. T. D. Wild on Hill avenue. The home of the hostess was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. This display of fancy work gave to the public an opportunity to see what the club has been doing during the past year in the line of needlework. Posters of the club's program, which will be opened in basement room of Epworth church were posted throughout the house. A total of 182 pieces of embroidery were beautifully displayed throughout three rooms which were effectively thrown together. Twenty-seven prizes were given and nine honorable mentions.

Punch was served in a bower of the dining room by Misses Webb, Reese and Thompson. During the afternoon about a hundred callers were received.

In the evening the hostess entertained very delightfully for the club members and their families. Sandwiches and punch were plentifully dispensed during the evening and a profitable social hour followed.

The club asks that those sincere thanks be extended to the very able judges. The co-operation of the public in the contemplated program will be greatly appreciated by the club and its members.

Y. W. C. A. to Observe World's Week of Prayer.

The Young Women's Christian association will, during the third week of November, observe the world's week of prayer, when twenty-two nations will bow together in observance of the sacred custom that is followed wherever there is a Y. W. C. A. As the association now encircles the world, the week of prayer will be world-wide.

Tuesday evening, at the Y. W. C. A., Peachtree Arcade, at 7 o'clock, the association will hold a vesper service that will be attended by all "Y" members and their friends. Miss Edith Thompson, secretary of the Associated Charities, will speak on "Women of the Orient." Miss Thompson has recently returned from missionary work in China, and her talk will be of a people whom she knows from having worked with them.

The purpose of the week of prayer is that the world may be harkened to the universal prayers of girls and women who are longing for the advancement of Christ's kingdom throughout the world—a kingdom where justice and brotherhood and love will reign supreme. In speaking of the prayer custom, Miss Irma E. Finley, general secretary of the local association, said that the world will be praying for Asia and Africa, for Europe and Australia, for the Americas that sin and injustice and suffering may be wiped away through the co-operation of Christian forces in those lands. That these millions of women may be able to pray intelligently, declares Miss Finley, certain outstanding characteristics of the missionary situation throughout the world must be familiar to their thought.

The fact that there are great groups of students throughout the world who are fast developing a group consciousness, who, in Japan, in China and South America, are breaking away from the faith of their ancestors, yet are not substituting anything in its place, Miss Finley tells of a Y. W. C. A. student secretary who writes from China that, as a result of post-war conditions, there is a diminishing faith in Christian nations; there is a discarding of old ideas and customs, and there is evidence of a distinctly anti-religious movement. Students are saying it is enough to be good, why be religious?

In Tokyo, out of a group of five thousand students, Miss Finley declares, less than five hundred declared themselves to have any faith. In the advanced South American countries, where the social consciousness is distinctly aroused, practically the same condition prevails. In all of these lands, as well as in India and the European countries, the student group is intensely patriotic, intensely sacrificial. The initiative, the ability, the leadership of these students must be turned into channels which will open into wide streams of Christian influence.

"Our Y. W. C. A. week of prayer will bring us into one universal thought for overcoming such conditions in the world today," concluded Miss Finley.

Next year the southern will meet in Atlanta over the East Lake links, and it is the purpose of the Atlanta association to hold these monthly tournaments and enable its members to have plenty of tournament practice. The matches can be played any time on Friday, November 12, at Ansley Park.

New Era Study Club.

The New Era Study club had a most enjoyable meeting with Mrs. J. E. Brooks, at her home on Hurt street, on November 10.

A lovely lunch was served. An artistic arrangement of poppies and flags formed a centerpiece for the table.

After the ladies were assembled around the table, Mrs. L. T. Pattillo sang "America," after which Mrs. A. A. Braswell read "The American Creed."

A splendid program was rendered by Mrs. J. E. Alexander, Mrs. C. F. Dowd and Mrs. J. M. Hewitt.

The guests present were: Mrs. Crosse, Mrs. Eugene Brooks, Mrs. Johnson, Mrs. Estess and Mrs. Pattillo.

Telephone and Telegraph Society Dance.

The 1929 opening ball of the Telephone and Telegraph Society of Atlanta will be given at Taft hall in the Auditorium on Tuesday evening, November 19, 1929, from 8:30 to 12 o'clock. All employees of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company, the American Telephone and Telegraph company and the Western Electric company are cordially invited to attend. orchestra has been prepared, and refreshments will be served. Any employee of the associated companies are allowed one or two escorts. Come out and get acquainted.

Glenwood School Parent-Teachers.

The Parent-Teacher association of Glenwood school, in Decatur, held its regular meeting on November 10. More than 100 enthusiastic mothers and teachers were present.

The teachers of the school, of which Mrs. T. M. Fulton is principal, were hostesses for the occasion. As the mothers began to arrive they were taken to the various rooms, where the pupils' work was on display. Many of the rooms were gay with autumn leaves and flowers. The school's flower is the red geranium, chosen because it carries out the school colors, red and green. The association had offered a prize to the grade bringing in the best collection of red geraniums and the prize was awarded to the first grade. Miss Beesie Jones, teacher, though the other grades made good displays.

After the mothers had spent half an hour in the rooms they were invited to the auditorium where an excellent program was rendered by the pupils. There were singing, dancing, recitations and violin solo and a contest in expression, using "A Psalm of Life," which was very appropriate. As Longfellow is the school poet, Robert E. Lee has been chosen by the boys as their hero.

The boys and girls alike enjoyed entertaining their mothers and it is needless to say the mothers were proud of their children. There were short talks by some of the teachers.

Mrs. S. W. Young, teacher of English in the two sixth grades, reported wonderful work being done in English and that she expected the pupils to dramatize "Yankee Doodle" and "Hawaii" in the near future.

Mrs. Young also explained the system of marking, which has puzzled quite a number of mothers. Mrs. Finney, third grade teacher, and Mrs. Maynard, one of the third grade mothers, reported on the play given by the third grade pupils, from which they netted $74.21. Their room has been tinted and they bought volley balls for the children to play with at recess and also helped on the payment of the moving picture machine. Miss Miller, sixth grade teacher, gave a short report on the Halloween party.

East Lake Parent-Teacher.

The East Lake Parent-Teacher club met in the schoolhouse on Friday afternoon, November 12. Over fifty ladies were present. The reports of all the committees were very good. Special mention must be made of the reports on civics, citizenship, household hints and current topics. The latter was a very fine article on "The Proper and Improper Use of the English Language," read by the chairman, Mrs. W. J. Wilson.

It was voted to create a department of citizenship instead of having a committee, said department to have its own officers, but and advisory board, consisting of the officers of the club.

It was resolved to send a letter of congratulation to Miss Alexia Stirling on receiving the Carnegie medal for bravery in saving two young ladies from drowning. At the close of the business meeting, refreshments were served and a social half-hour spent in getting acquainted.

State Street Parent-Teacher.

The Parent-Teacher association of State Street school held a most interesting meeting on Friday afternoon. The house was beautifully decorated with great quantities of brightly tinted autumn flowers brought by the children.

The sixth grade, Miss Josie Hall McAdams, teacher, had the largest number of mothers in attendance. Resolutions of sympathy were sent to Miss Lucy Fields, whose mother's death occurred in Marietta this week.

Mr. Osborne Williams addressed the association on "Vocational Training." His talk was well received, and many favorable comments were made.

A unique feature of the program was the presentation of the various activities of the school by a selected number of pupils, representing each grade.

Katherine Childress, seventh grade, hygiene; Jeannette Burnett, sixth grade, cocoa, a lesson in geography; Lillian Bradberry, fifth-A grade, lesson on rice; Leonard Horton, fifth-B grade, history; Ruby Miller, fourth-A grade, spelling; Harry Speaker, fourth-B grade, geography; R. J. Reid, third-A grade, arithmetic; J. C. Coleman, third-B grade, language; Virginia Combs, second-A grade, story-telling; Lottie Danforth, second-B grade, study song; Grace Osburn, first-A grade, song.

President of Federation Writes Her Convention Impressions

Mrs. J. E. Hays, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, has written her impressions of the convention in Atlanta.

For publication Mrs. Hays has issued the following statement: "The convention is over! It was generally pronounced the very best in the history of the federation with the largest number of delegates; with the broader work of the women, and with the Atlanta Woman's club as hostess, it could have been no less than the best. In every detail, the Atlanta Woman's club proved to be the ideal hostess from the moment of arrival, when the delegates were met by the transportation committee, on through the beautiful dinner at the club house, and until the moment of departure, no stone was left unturned for the pleasure and comfort of the delegates. The splendid executive ability of the president, Mrs. Irving Thomas, and the chairman of arrangements, Mrs. Alonso Richardson, was shown in the ease and efficiency with which all details were worked out. Every committee was in place at the right time and it can truly be said that it was a smooth convention. The federation gives thanks and congratulations to the hostess club, including all of those committees. To the sister organizations (the D. C. that D. A. R. and "Uncle Remus" association), who so generously joined in the entertainment of the delegates with their luncheons and dinners, the federation returns profound thanks and appreciation. It is unusual for an individual to entertain a convention and so we would particularly thank Mrs. McEachern for the beautiful dinner and Mrs. Albert Thornton, president of the Atlanta City federation, for her delightful luncheon to the executive board.

This vote of thanks would not be complete without thanks to Mr. Jesse N. Couch, of the Georgian Terrace hotel, for his courtesy to the delegates. And now, that the convention of 1929 is over, let us look to the work of a new year and be ready to make the coming year the best year of service in the history of the federation.

song: Helen Drummond, first-B grade, reading. After the exercises the ladies enjoyed a social half hour during which hot chocolate and cakes were served.

HISTORIC SPOTS ON THE DIXIE HIGHWAY

On the front cover of the book of the proceedings of each yearly D. A. R. state conference is this quotation from the historian Macaulay: "A people which takes no pride in the noble achievements of remote ancestors will never achieve anything worthy to be remembered by remote descendants." This quotation has been adopted by the D. A. R. and our large patriotic society is a noble answer to the challenge implied. It seems particularly fitted to be ever before the state committee on preservation of historic spots, for, are we taking sufficient pride in the noble achievements of our ancestors? Is that pride often enough expressed in a substantial way? In the constitution of our national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution under the heading "Objects" of our society, the first "Object" is given as "To perpetuate the memory of the spirit of the men and women who achieved American independence by the acquisition and protection of historic spots, and the erection of monuments." So this is really the first and foremost work of the D. A. R. The Georgia chapters were actively engaged in marking their nearby historic spots when war put a stop to the work, but our state organization has never placed a marker, however, we have plans. Now since the war is far enough away to be distinctly of the past, we are returning to former things and are wisely putting first things first.

By the following resolution, offered by our past state regent, Mrs. Howard McCall, at the last state conference, and unanimously adopted, our state work for the year along this line has been definitely planned.

"Whereas, the Georgia D. A. R. at the 1919 conference passed the following resolution, 'that the D. A. R. raise and maintain a separate fund for the purpose of marking historic spots in Georgia, and that each chapter be requested to contribute annually to the same'; and 'Whereas, a map showing the historic spots in each congressional district has been compiled by Mrs. Thomas (former state historian), Therefore, be it resolved, that the Georgia D. A. R. mark the historic spots on the new Dixie highway during 1920.

And it is further resolved, that these places be selected by the committee on historic spots appointed by the state regent, and that each chapter be requested to undertake this work, with the aid of the state D. A. R.

It now remains for you Daughters to see this work through before April, and there is no time to be lost.

You find the spot, the state D. A. R. will find the money.

A good plan has been suggested by the national chairman on historic spots, it is this, each chapter is to send to the chairman of the state committee a typewritten account of the local spot which they deem most historic, these papers to be preserved for future reference.

Any spot of historic interest was enacted an important event in our state's history (the D. A. R. deal mainly with the colonial, revolutionary and Indian periods), such as revolutionary and Indian periods, treaty spots or frontier forts. The home or birth place of prominent men of the past is also an historic spot.

But since we are to mark three places along the Dixie highway, and since in many places it follows along old stage roads, some once only narrow Indian trails, and in each decade made historic by the passage over them of noted warriors, statesmen and students, and frontiersmen, it seems particularly suitable that marker should call attention to these facts of history to the swift traveler of today that his imagination may bring back the romance of these past travelers to keep him pleasant company on his journey.

The Dixie highway goes some miles along the Old Federal road in North Georgia, or crosses it in places. This was the first government-built road in the northern part of the state and historic for many reasons. The Desoto trail and the Jackson trail also cross the Dixie highway. Can these places be identified?

Each chapter is asked to send in at once written descriptions of historic spots of their knowledge. We should have enough information to be able to select three suitable places to be marked at the meeting of state executive board this fall.

This is a beautiful work for the Georgia Daughters and we want your co-operation. Let us build for the future.

RUBY FELDER RAY THOMAS, (Mrs. Eli A.)

D. A. R. LUNCHEON

An event of marked beauty among the many beautiful entertainments in honor of the delegates and distinguished guests in attendance on the state convention of women's clubs in Atlanta last week was the luncheon at Craigie house given by the Daughters of the American Revolution of the city.

PATRIOTIC SONGS

Mrs. John Randolph Whitehead, state chairman of patriotic songs, requests that all chapter meetings be opened with the "Land of the Free," followed by "America," and always have patriotic songs on the program.

Appoint a committee to see that patriotic songs are sung in the white and colored schools of your city and county. Your co-operation in this work is essential for a perfect Americanization.

BLAKELY CHAPTER

The Governor Peter Early chapter, Daughters of American Revolution, held their first fall meeting at the home of the regent, Mrs. Walter Thomas. After a short literary program, a business session was held, and the annual election of officers took place. The regent, Mrs. Walter Thomas, declined the nomination again, because of the fact that she was leaving Blakely next week to make her home in Albany, with her husband, in future. On behalf of the chapter, Mrs. J. H. Williams, Miss Ethel Jones and Mrs. Moyer.

The election was as follows:
Regent—Mrs. Henry Moyer.
First Vice Regent—Mrs. W. G. Park.
Second Vice Regent—Mrs. J. H. Williams.
Recording Secretary—Miss Mattie Butler.
Historian—Mrs. J. D. Abernathy.
Treasurer—Mrs. Ed. Chancy.
Registrar—Miss Ethel Jones.

State Executive Board.

The executive board of the Georgia D. A. R. will be held Friday, December 3, at 10 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Max E. Land, state regent, Cordele, Ga.

The board is composed of all state officers and standing committees. A full meeting of the membership is desired as the board will, at this time, receive reports from the state officers and chairmen as to their work and will supervise the program and arrangements for the state conference besides the consideration of other matters of importance.

At the conclusion of the business session Mrs. Land will entertain at luncheon in honor of the board—the members of the Fort Early chapter being invited guests.

Children's Book Week To Be Observed

Aside from the literary value of it in the early education of the child, there is much human interest centering in the event of Children's Book Week, which is to be observed November 15 to November 20, and has as the laudable purpose of establishing books as appropriate gifts for children, and encouraging the reading by children at home, and the reading to children in the home.

The campaign for Book Week is being sponsored by the American Booksellers' association, the Boy Scouts of America, the publishers, the American Library association and the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Publicity on the subject is developing the most interesting reading matter and the questions—

"What was your favorite book when you were a child?" "Would you recommend your favorites to the children of 1920?" are being sent to prominent men and women in an effort to get the opinions of the best minds of today for the aid of parents, teachers, librarians and others who are interested in children and the selection of books for them.

The world reads with interest that Amy Lowell says: "After fairy stories, the books I most delighted in during my childhood were adventure stories, particularly those of the sea." Helen Keller liked "Macbeth," Greek heroes, "The Arabian Nights." Abraham Lincoln earned his first book by doing three days' work on a farm—it was the Life of George Washington.

Is there an Atlantan today who has not enjoyed to overflowing the never-to-be-forgotten stories of Uncle Remus? Is there a father or mother, or even teacher in our public schools, who has failed to tell the little folks about Br'er Rabbit and Br'er Possum and the wonderful Tar Baby?

What child does not like to hear over and over again about poor little Tinker Bell, and how Peter Pan asked everybody that wonderful question, "Oh, do you believe in fairies?" And everybody at the same time said, "We do."

Every up-to-date bookstore in the country this week will have a display window of children's books, thus encouraging the purchase of the right kind of books.

A national program is: Librarians should plan exhibits of their best children's books, should invite the little children to special meetings in which the most popular stories for children are again retold. Scout readers should lend their enthusiasm, school teachers should encourage the boys and girls by giving special talks on the subject. Y. M. C. A. and Sunday schools should become interested, as well as the women's clubs and the parent-teacher associations, and all educational agencies interested in the welfare and joy of the child.

The Red Cross Roll Call

The Civilians of Atlanta, who have undertaken, with the Red Cross, the work of the fourth Red Cross roll call, hope to complete their work Monday, November 15. Therefore, all those people who have not been solicited for a $1 membership and who desire to do so can communicate with Julian Boehm, head of the Civilians and the roll call, or Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, either of whom or their official representatives can be found at the Red Cross roll call headquarters, second floor Chamber of Commerce Building.

Aside from the humanitarianism of every phase of Red Cross work in war or peace, and aside from the local call for better health conditions, which this membership call asks for, there is the economic value of the present work, through the committee on nursing service. This committee does a certain work which the average individual cannot do, no matter how humanely inclined he or she may be.

For example, people are told that a certain man is ill, his wife has a young baby and conditions are such that they cannot afford the care of a regular nurse. They are not objects of charity, for the man, when he is well, works for his family.

A visiting Red Cross nurse in such a case can visit the family, carry out the doctor's orders for the care of the sick man, help the mother with the care of the young baby and instruct whoever helps the family or waits upon them in the matter of preparing the right food. A trained Red Cross nurse cannot only look after this case, but probably a group of similar cases in the same district or community in the city.

It is obvious that any one contributing to a $1 membership in the Red Cross contributes to every case where a Red Cross nurse under the nursing service of the chapter is a visitor.

One individual, untrained, could do very little good in even one case, much less an entire community, hence the advantage of a system for which the nursing service stands, and can be extended according to the number of memberships to the Red Cross which come in response to the roll call.

Heretofore, under the old order of things, even after the Associated Charities were organized, certain well-meaning individuals discovering a needy case of sickness, preferred exploiting the case, appealing for a general charity for it, when probably in the same community there would be many similar cases just as needy and just as worthy.

Many times the individuals helped were humiliated by this system of helping, while present with Atlanta's well-organized health agencies and the Red Cross nursing service there is no reason why every case should not be lifted from the charity basis, and individuals temporarily embarrassed placed in a position to help themselves by paying for whatever service is given them, and that in a reasonable way.

In a recent survey of the amount of giving by misled people in this country, it was discovered that millions of dollars had been wasted in misdirected charity, and then only in the administering of temporary conditions, with the basic causes of the sickness or poverty never reached.

The world is wiser now, and there are certain institutions and agencies, which, if receiving intelligent co-operation, can save thousands of dollars, and reach farther than temporary relief, and get at the bottom of community conditions.

In the effort to aid in Atlanta's public health program, the Atlanta chapter of the Red Cross through its nursing service, is contributing the most valuable agencies in the visiting Red Cross nurses. To put the service on a good basis the people of Atlanta, one and all, are being urged to join the Red Cross in $1-a-year membership fee.

Surely, there will be no one who can give who will refuse to do so!

Atlanta's Pretty "Woman With the Bread Tray;" Vannie Tilden and Her Wonderful Work

Vannie Tilden, charming Atlantan, who has achieved great success as maker of fine bread.

While the twentieth century woman, with her foot on the threshold of citizenship and problems galore to solve, discusses the most important of these—living—comes Vannie Tilden, "the woman with the bread tray," weighted down with orders.

Young, pretty and successful, she is an admirable example of the self-made woman in business, for she initiated her own career, has her own bread formulas and her own methods of doing business.

The secret of it is—she worked for it. She was trained in the work, nor ashamed to do it. She did it with her own hands—and she continues to mix all the ingredients used in her bakery and to supervise every phase of the work in the bakery—another secret of her success.

From the grammar school, her own home, then the corner of Linden and Willow streets—a small apartment, in her own little kitchen she began the work of making bread which has extended to two places of business, one in the Arcade and the other at 309 Peachtree street, and two other agencies. Now she is hunting a place where she can establish an up-to-date plant with the facilities which her business is demanding of her.

She cannot supply all the customers who have established the "Vannie bread lines" outside of her establishments.

Her Mother's Inspiration. "My mother has always been one of my inspirations in every thing I have undertaken. She has helped me valiantly and I could not accomplish as much as I do now without her assistance. As Miss Tilden discusses her career.

"I had learned to make bread for the family, and I liked to do it, and it occurred to me that as a wage-earner I would try to use my talents in that direction.

"I realized I would have to begin on a small scale and I had no space except the little apartment kitchen and my own willingness to work.

"I knew, too, that telling people I could make bread would not satisfy them, and that depending on an agency to do it when I was still unknown would get me nowhere.

"One morning I got up about 3 o'clock, mixed the ingredients for my bread and made sufficient to have enough to give away.

"I had a number of addresses in my immediate neighborhood, and to them I made the gift of the loaves of bread. Then I followed up the samples and in almost every gift I received the order for bread every day.

"Finally I had in a very short time regular orders from 200 people. This told my first little kitchen. Then I made my first venture to extend my headquarters and I made the first sale at the Peachtree shop and found my orders many times doubled.

The Bread Line. "Very soon after this when the people of the country were discussing the 'bread lines' in New York city my bread line became an Atlanta institution for outside my shop at 309 Peachtree street at 5 o'clock each afternoon there formed the motor bread line when my customers arrived to purchase their bread.

"The street was narrow and the shop was small and the patronage was large. More than once I had to have the shop door closed because the crowd was such I could not wait upon my patrons and I feared for the results among people in the shop, especially the warmer days.

"They waited outside, causing a congestion, and this in connection with the long line of motor cars outside the door gave the police of that district every reason to believe there was some trouble. More than once an officer entered the shop and asked, 'What is the matter?' only to see for himself—the trouble was my desire to answer the call of my 'bread line.'

"During the time when the servant problem was at the most intense stage, when wages took domestic into other industries, when housekeepers were desperately in need of trained help and when they had to buy all they could of made food products, I was placed at a great disadvantage. The street was torn up for repairs and my patrons could not get to my shop for purchases. I was forced to make the same satisfaction by order over the phone and at the very time during the war when I was most dependent upon me they could not reach me and I was unable to meet the demand of their patronage."

Same Story. Miss Tilden told the same story housekeepers individually tell about domestic service. When the standpoint of efficiency, when she told of the trouble she has getting efficient assistance—efficiency not only in the matter of assistance in bread making, but in disposing of it satisfactorily in her shops.

"I believe that the assistance I have in my shop at the Arcade is the best any business could require, and I leave that part of the business almost entirely to them, with every reason to know that the management is satisfactory."

Here Miss Tilden was interrupted with an order for fifteen layer cakes to be delivered the next day. To the inquiry as to whether branch of the business was meeting with success, Miss Tilden explained that every branch of the business was taking the space she was in and the facilities of the business.

"For instance, the Christmas cakes are beginning to be ordered," she said, "and I have just taken an order for a 10-pound fruit cake. This commodity or luxury is most difficult to sell, as many of the ingredients are difficult to secure, and as I do all the mixing for cakes as well as for my bread, it means a great amount of work to do night and day."

"Do you work often at night?" was here asked.

"Whenever it is necessary," she answered, "for I find that when one works and makes a success one's time is not measured by will or courtesy. One's time is measured by the need of the hour, but one's desire to meet the demand of patrons and to do one's own personal desire for success."

Her Vacation. After describing her trials during the war and the hard work of this year, though meeting with financial success, Miss Tilden stated that she had taken a vacation this summer and acknowledged that she had without consulting her patrons or anybody else turned her back temporarily on practical business and indulged in real recreation.

In Brownsville, Texas, on the 4th of July she celebrated Independence day by becoming dependent, when she was married to Mr. R. F. Deyo, of Atlanta, who had followed her from Atlanta in pursuit of his happiness, and apparently hers.

She had gone to Texas with his sister to make a visit to the latter's family and Mr. Deyo joined them there unexpectedly. She had but a short time to stay and the day they were married he suggested to her as an adventure that they go across the border to attend a bull fight at Matamoros, a famous center for the Mexican national sport.

"I went and spent the afternoon in tears," said Miss Tilden, "for I saw three bulls cruelly killed, and that was enough of that sort of sport for me."

The Bridal Trip. "We returned to Atlanta and Mr. Deyo continued to assist me in my business, for my assistance was such that it if it were somebody to help me in the extension of my business."

Here Miss Tilden looked conscious as Mr. Deyo, who had been very responsible. He was introduced, and I realized that he was being a good husband and doing the "heavy lifting," for, as his young and pretty wife said, he could not do the baking and all the rest, too.

Mr. Deyo could be detained but a moment for the shop downtown was calling for information and a delivery wagon outside was calling for bread. A telephone was ringing and the young woman proprietor of a large and important business was being called on all sides.

Besides her bread business she is making cakes, sells fresh eggs and is making fudge, for which without difficulty she gets $1.25 per pound. It is worth it, too, so say the connoisseurs, as all her patrons say of Vannie Tilden's bread.

Bread is the most necessary of all the food commodities, and yet good bread is a novelty. That is the reason why Vannie Tilden is making a success, for she makes good bread.

that all literary clubs of the city federation prepare a fitting and appropriate program, to be given on or close to the date of the birthday of "Uncle Remus."

All over Indiana there has been for a number of years the celebration marking the birth of the famous Georgia writer, and during the lifetime of the late James Whitcomb Riley he always took a prominent part in observing the natal day of Joel Chandler Harris. Mrs. Thornton will help to inspire the literary organizations in Atlanta to make this a part of their future program each year. She is urging the people to recognize the ability and the talent with which the late Mr. Harris told his "Uncle Remus" stories, which will ever remain gems in the American literary world.

Virginia Woman Speaks. Mrs. H. E. Parker brought many new ideas before the women, among them being the plan of a legislative council made up of all the women organizations. She told also about the work of the state legislature and the necessity for education if we were going to accomplish results in having the vote. She spoke of the moral conditions among the young boys and girls and the necessity of protecting young boys, as well as girls. The discussion proved intensely interesting to the women present and that they were strongly hinting that our legislators in Georgia seemed to be more interested in breeding and hogs and getting the ticks off of cattle than they were in improving conditions for human consumption. The work of the organization in the last legislative session was touched upon.

The next luncheon will be held at the Daffodil Thursday, the 18th, promptly at 12:30 o'clock, and the leaders from every district will be featured. Every ward is divided into districts, which is in charge of a leader working under the ward chairman. The work of the organization will be thoroughly discussed and every one will have an opportunity to give their views on what the league should do and how it should be done. Tickets can be gotten on reservations made by communicating with Mrs. P. Tagg, thirteenth floor of the Healey building.

Mrs. Thornton Makes Request of Clubs. On Thursday, December 9, the birthday of the late Joel Chandler Harris, who is known to the literary world as "Uncle Remus," will be observed through the "Indorsement of the Georgia State Federation of Women's Clubs. All clubs throughout Georgia will celebrate this date, the idea having been indorsed by the state federation. Therefore, Mrs. Albert H. Thornton, president of the Atlanta City Federation of Women's clubs, is urging

Fallen Arches Unnecessary

Comfort is the essence of the Cantilever Shoe; and the Cantilever is retained in style. But it is especially recommended as a preventive of flat-foot and other ills that befall so many women through pure ignorance of what a shoe can do to the foot.

A woman's foot can become harmed almost imperceptibly by wearing sharply pointed toes, or very high heels, or a wrong size, fallen arches may result, or callouses, or bunions; or the effect may locate in the nervous system. Some cases of imaginary rheumatism are caused by nothing but badly shaped shoes.

The Cantilever Shoe is recommended by physicians and foot doctors as a good shoe for women to wear because it has a flexible arch, permitting muscular exercise and blood circulation; because it is shaped to the natural foot with toe-room; because it has a healthy, comforting effect on the foot.

A good-looking shoe which we carry in the popular colors and in all widths. For men and women.

HERE ARE THE TEST POINTS:

1. Tone No other has a tone so pure and true to the artist's rendering. The Oval Wooden Amplifier does that.

2. Time Perfect adjustment means perfect time. Fully captures the spirit of the piece, be it Chopin—or jazz.

3. Beauty Cabinet Art of the best periods reproduced with the skill of the famed Brunswick construction.

4. Ultona Not a comparison point, for there's nothing just like it to compare it with. A reproducer that plays every make of record at its best. Readily adjustable in weight, and set by a turn to play each make of record with just the right needle, and just the right pressure. That's why there's so little surface sound.

Comparison sells the Brunswick—the more critical the purchaser the more fully he convinces himself. We will demonstrate with pleasure to all who will call. Compare! You'll agree on the Brunswick.

MRS. FRANK HARROLD, AMERICUS, PRESIDENT.

Mrs. T. B. Raines, Dawson, recording secretary; Mrs. E. H. McKey, Americus, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. T. Dixon, Thomasville, registrar; Mrs. W. B. Higginbotham, West Point, treasurer.
MISS MATTIE B. SHEPHERD, ROME, STATE EDITOR.

Report of State President

Following is the annual report of the Georgia division, U. D. C., presented to the general convention, Asheville, N. C., by Mrs. Frank Harrold, state president:

In presenting the annual report concerning the activities, the progress and the welfare of the Georgia division of the U. D. C., I find that this is one of the duties of the state presidency which, by its character, becomes a pride and an honor filled with pardonable pleasure.

That this happy condition has been brought about solely through the wonderful service and loyalty of the splendid women who have composed my staff of officers; through the various state chairmen and through the chapter presidents, anyone who is at all familiar with the work of the organization in Georgia for the past year, recognizes. With such excellent co-workers, failure in any of our undertakings was rendered impossible and it is with the utmost spirit of thanks to them that I present this record of increasing brilliancy of accomplished deeds by the Georgia Daughters.

Less than one month ago we held our state convention in Macon, the home of the Sidney Lanier chapter, which set a new record in hospitality by the manner in which they entertained the delegates. The convention was the largest in the history of the Georgia division, with a total strength of 100. In the more intangible features, however—in the spirit and in the accomplishment which characterized the gathering—was the most remarkable keynote sounded.

On this occasion we were happy in the presence of two general officers of our organization. Our president general, Mrs. Roy McKimney, was a very welcome presence and she—perhaps unconsciously—by the very grace of her personality—captivated not only the convention proper, but all of Macon.

Our first vice president general, Miss Alice Baxter, of Atlanta—now and always our own "Miss Alice"—likewise added immeasurably to the success of the gathering.

The address of Mrs. McKimney, on "The U. D. C. as an Educational Factor," proved one of the most interesting and instructive features of the convention. Perhaps the most striking single incident of the Macon gathering was the passing of a resolution providing recognition of the patriotic services of Admiral W. S. Benson, a native Georgian and one of the most distinguished of our country's naval commanders. During the recent war with Germany, Admiral Benson commanded the American fleet in European waters. The Macon convention pledged itself to present to Admiral Benson a jeweled sword as a visible token of the appreciation and honor which is felt for him in all Georgia hearts. It was felt that in this honoring Admiral Benson, we were but recognizing his heroic work which has already supremely honored every member of our organization, together with all loyal Georgians.

Growth in Membership.
The work which has been accomplished in Georgia during the year just closed has developed along various lines of endeavor. It may be of primary interest to you to hear of the growth in membership which has been recorded by our state during the year.

Our state registrar, Mrs. J. T. Dixon, in her report, gives a total registration of 13,560 members in Georgia, of whom 908 are new members for 1920. These figures break down as follows: Total membership, all past records on membership. The names of all members in Georgia are to be published in the U. D. C. directory, to be issued shortly.

There is one chapter in Georgia which has achieved a record in this branch of the work during the past year which will be exceedingly hard to surpass. The O. C. chapter, of Hawkinsville, Ga., of which Miss Lillie Martin is president, has added 148 new members to its roster in 1920, placing its total membership at 435. When it is realized that the total population of Hawkinsville is only 4,500, the really remarkable record of this chapter will be realized.

As a result of this splendid work, the Hawkinsville chapter won the national banner, which is awarded to the chapter sending in the greatest number of new members for the year. In addition, they also won the trophy offered by Miss Alice Baxter, of Atlanta, for the chapter sending in the greatest number of new members between the ages of 13 and 25. In their work of 1920, the aged men and women of the confederacy, we have achieved a number of important successes.

Largely as a result of the activities of our organization the Georgia state legislature has appropriated the sum of $5,000 annually in order to provide the necessary small pocket money for the inmates of the Soldiers' Home in Atlanta. Through the efforts of the Atlanta chapter, a moving picture machine has also been secured and installed in the home for the entertainment of the veterans.

Our committee on "work for veterans and women of the confederacy," under the chairmanship of Mrs. Max Wood of Savannah, has done exceptionally good work.

Under the general heading of "education," we class a number of our activities.

We are raising by contribution, a "45,000 world war educational fund," which is to be our first tribute of love and appreciation to the young veterans of the Olive Drab in Georgia. Then there is our Helen Plane educational fund, for the education of two Georgia girls at the state industrial colleges; our Francis Barlow Memorial school, where 100 mountaineer children are educated annually; we have raised $144 for the furnishing of rooms in the women's dormitory at the state university at Athens, and then there are our contributions to the $50,000 educational fund of the general organization, known as the "hero fund."

Georgia's contributions to the hero fund have been $6,500 for the year. In addition to this our free scholarships amount to $35,000, making a grand total of $41,500 contributed for educational purposes by the Georgia division. Mrs. Julian Lane, of Statesboro, has proven a most efficient and efficient state chairman of scholarships.

In our department of historical work, ably directed by Miss Ruff, with Miss Lillie Martin as assistant, much has been achieved. Figures taken from the report of this branch of activity show a total of 1,313 typewritten pages; 241 printed pages; 327 letters; 167 books placed in libraries; 13 granite markers erected; 42 remembrances secured; 14 state prizes given by members of chapters; 204 historical meetings held and 116,116 contributed for the purchase of books.

One of the most gratifying signs of progress during the year has been the increased interest displayed in the historical essay work. Mrs. H. W. Cantrell, of Decatur, chairman, and she reported 4,337 essays written by the school children of Georgia on the subject "The Civilization of the Old South."

Seventy prizes were given in the state by this department. At the won the Selden banner, which is awarded to the chapter sending in the greatest number of these essays.

The eighth annual conference of the Children of the Confederacy of Georgia was held in Savannah in June. Thirty-three chapters and seventy-one new members were reported at this time. The interest displayed at this meeting, as well as the reports on the year's activities of the children's chapters, proved highly gratifying, both to the state director, Mrs. Peter X. to the historian and to the state president.

We are making a special effort in Georgia to secure the record of every Georgian who served his country, in any capacity, during the world war. A silver loving cup was offered to the chapter sending in the greatest number of war records during the year, which trophy was won by that incomparable chapter among chapters, Hawkinsville. A total of 325 records were sent in during 1920.

There have been many other features of our work during the year just closed. Among them are included:

The issuance of 169 crosses, as reported by Miss Rebecca Dupont, of Savannah, state recorder of crosses.

Georgia flags and pictures of General Lee and President Davis have been presented to hundreds of schools in the state by our committees.

Mrs. H. M. Franklin, state director, reported 11,206.1 to the credit of the Georgia Endowment fund during the year.

Mrs. R. L. Nesbitt, chairman of the duties which devolve upon a state president is the making of official visits. It is then her privilege to personally experience the warmth of love and loyalty to the entire U. D. C. which the local chapters express in their welcome to her and to witness the high ideals which are visualized in the splendid achievements of the various chapters and their memberships. Twenty-two such visits were made in Georgia in 1920.

I present to you this report, filled with pride at the achievements of my state, but likewise humbly praying that the new year may be immeasurably better than any we have yet seen, both as an organization and as individuals. I bring you greetings from every section, every city, every town and every county of Georgia. I express profound appreciation for the many

FAINTING AND DIZZY SPELLS

The Cause of such Symptoms and Remedy Told in This Letter.

Syracuse, N. Y.—"When I commenced the Change of Life I poorly, had no appetite and had fainting spells. I suffered for two or three years before I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills which I saw advertised in the papers and in your little books. I took about 12 bottles of your Vegetable Compound and found it a wonderful remedy. I commenced to pick up at once and my suffering was relieved. I have told others about your medicine and know of some who have taken it. I am glad to help others all I can."—Mrs. R. E. DEMPSEY, 437 W. Lafayette Ave., Syracuse, N. Y.

While Change of Life is a most critical period of a woman's existence, the annoying symptoms which accompany it may be controlled, and normal health restored by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Moreover, this reliable remedy contains no narcotics or harmful drugs and owes its efficiency to the medicinal extracts of the native roots and herbs which it contains.

The four students, as shown in the individual pictures on the lower left of the page, are, from left to right of the upper row, Miss Marion Dabney, Miss Mary Faith Yow, Miss Eugenia Dozier, and, below, Miss Virginia Kelley. All are prominent in Atlanta's younger set, and the debut of Miss Yow, who is a niece of Governor Dorsey, was an outstanding social event of the season.

The dancing is a feature of the serious and interesting work these young women are doing under Mrs. Spiker, several of them studying for the dramatic stage and perfecting themselves in all phases of the necessary technique. Their studies also include elocution, music and literature.

NIGHTGOWN DESIGNED FOR GLORIA SWANSON

CLAIRE WEST
WHO DESIGNS SCREEN'S
MOST BEAUTIFUL COSTUMES

that they never did, I am prepared to say; for every garment designed for a film star, by Miss West, is an original creation and while following rules of costume artistry, is as distinctive and unlike anything else, as the personality of the wearer. It is as if Miss West utilized the aura of the wearer to produce her clothes. We are told by those claiming acquaintance with worlds invisible that there we shall "think on" our attire; and Miss West "thinks on" the garments which go so far toward the making of a successful photoplay.

She does more than this: She carries the very spirit of the play into her dress creations.

It was she who prepared the marvels with which Cleopatra snared the heart and hushed the honor of Mark Antony, in Theda Bara's play. Those habiliments repose within a case of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City, a place which they have won for the reason that they are conceded to be perfect examples of Egyptian artistic dress.

The Make-Believe in Materials.

Miss West designed the glories of attire shown in Griffith's Intolerance. With the past year, the Lasky Company has retained the sole services of this wonderful clothes artist, and a new era in film attire is resulting. Her creations are such as might grace the atelier of a leading Parisian couturier, setting fashions for the world. In fact, her designs have frequently done just this, when accepted by the National Association of Costume Design. But now, her realm is limited only, as she has said, by the possibilities of her imagination.

She first hears the play, which is about to be screened, taking in the character of the star. Dwelling upon act after act, she sets the web of her wondrous brain to weaving. The fabric of her thought is the finest to be procured. There is no make-believe in the materials with which Miss West creates. Her stock-room compares favorably with that of any world-famed designer. The most recent weaves in silks and satins, tissues, velvets, laces, furs, accessories, repose upon the shelves awaiting the magic wand of the god-mother who will fairly forth the Cinderellas of the films. From $200,000 to $500,000 worth of materials are there, to be multiplied by many figures, in the completed garments. The work-rooms where scores of hands obey the mandate of Miss West's gentle, directing mind are modernly equipped and hand-work is the rule there. Nothing is scamped, nothing tawdry, nothing make-believe.

A star's wardrobe which is to be of today's mode, does not express merely the passing fashion, but each garment is a creation suitable to that particular star—a master-piece bringing out every point of the wearer, and designed to accentualize the part she is to play.

Very Modest and Retiring.

"Clothe Sin for our next picture, in which Miss — is to appear." And Sin is shadowed forth in such garments as only creative genius could limn. "Make the habiliments of Virtue," and such, unmistakably, are made. Modest, retiring, Miss West infinitely prefers to speak of the greatness of the director, the beauty of a film star, than to descant upon her own wonderful creations; and yet, she loves work, as only genius can love work.

Her presence inspires beauty. Directly you have talked with her, you feel impelled to translate yourself into expressive clothes. Dress seems the most important of all the arts. Henceforth, you find yourself wondering what Miss West would do to bring out the best points of this or that crudely attired woman. You ask yourself what she would make from this lovely piece of silk, that velvet. Henceforth, she is associated in your thought with loveliness in fabrics and in garments. You wonder about her home; you place her among such settings as your fancy portrays and you find yourself desirous of building, at once, your own ideal home—but also you feel sure that, if Miss West would but drop a hint or two, your imaginative world might be made over. She revolutionizes beauty, not in an iconoclastic way—she is not futurist, nor cubistic—but rather she draws forth latent perfection and spins it to a finality. Some contagion of beauty-sensibility in her.

causes you to see new marvels in the sunset, enlivens your interest in the grouping of trees and flowers, enhances your appreciation of grace in the human form. As you stand in her workshop, all things lovely seem possible. She sets the world to unthought-of harmonies. The fabrics she so fondly handles are like clouds scattered throughout the mid-day sky which will come together in a glory of pigmentation to form the sunset.

Color Is an Elixir.

"Color, Color! To me it is an elixir, almost an intoxicant," said Miss West, "I think in color, I dream in color, I find myself wedding color to form, everywhere, in everything."

Yet, in her own attire, she is extremely quiet, usually wearing black of the simplest sort, but never lacking some out-standing color-touch—a necklace of unusual design, a striking ring. Her favorite is a deep-sea agate, of melting browns and softly blended reds which might have been stolen from the mosses in old ocean. The setting, Miss West designed herself, as she does much of that for the jewelry worn with her professional costuming. It is of silver in the form of the folded wings of Egyptian symbolism, the setting all underneath the agate, save a barely visible rim. The agate has a natural polish, resultant from the caressing of the mermaids, perhaps in their subsaquesan home.

"—and here, the dreams of one's life come true!" said she, "at flush of enthusiasm pinking the clarity of her white cheeks, and her eyes gleaming with the fire kindled only by genius.

We had spent the morning conning over her masterpieces; I had drawn to exhaustion upon my store of superlatives; and had then ought to learn how it all came about, but of herself she was, like all true geniuses, reluctant to say much.

When it had been about the materials which go to make that cosmos of which she is the presiding deity, or even of creations that she had produced, she had treated it all like inspiration from some other realm; something for which she had been the medium, set aside from praise. I knew otherwise, for had I not traced from their beginnings the marvels of la mode, studying the logic of fashion in all her realms, from shoes and hats, to stocks and bonds? At least, I had discovered a genuine originator! I stood in the presence of one who, unslaved by passing styles, expresses the spirit of personality.

Originator of Many Modes.

"When did you begin, and where, and how?" The questions fairly tumbled out. I'll confess I was excited; for had I not glimpsed the making of future worlds?

"As a little girl, I dreamed of mar-

And modestly she told how the daisy-chains and clover-strings which children weave, to ensnare their dolls, were to her imagining, robes of glory to clothe the fair women.

Biographically, Miss Claire West is the granddaughter of former Governor Smith of Ohio, who was more father than grandparent to her. Governor Smith built the Wabash railroad, and Kansas City became the growing-up place of Claire West. Studying costume and design wherever best teachers of this subject were obtainable, she by her originality carried off prize after prize, offered by the American Association of Costume Design, and originated many modes, including the fish-tail train, the "miser bag," the application of hand-made ribbon and silk flowers to the embellishment of dress, and a number of other features which have been accepted by the sartorial world.

The logic which travels via a straight line intuition, underground; the caprice, the whimsy; the argument: "Because;" the evolution unexpected, save by those whose prophecy is unrestrained by causes; in other words the why that fashion's name is feminine: This it is comprises costume's history and evolution. As fascinating as the study of feminine creation. And above all, of woman, this study has absorbed the creators of the mode, since the beginning. To express, by means of clothes, the underlying femininity, the individual characteristics of femininity, has been the effort of Miss West, since her early childhood.

Always, however, there had been a commercial limit to the possibilities, against which her imagination constantly beat as waves against a restricting shore. "But here—all the dreams of one's life come true!"

We were in the atelier of Miss Claire West, designer extraordinaire for C. B. DeMille, director general of the Lasky Feature Play Company.

Glimpsing the Treasures.

Miss West had been showing me her treasures—those creations which will soon be seen upon the screen, and over which women in the darkened house will wonder and interrogate each other, in side whispers. "Do you suppose those clothes are what they look? Is that really a rich, Oriental brocade? Or just an imitation? Did you ever see a coat like that?" And

RIALTO THEATER TO SHOW "THE FURNACE"

Pretentious Picture Is Presented by Cast of Well-Known Players.

"The Furnace," a new Realart production, which has created a sensation all over the country, has been secured for a full week's showing at the Rialto, and will make its appearance on the screen next Monday. Not only is this one of the really big pictures of the year, but it has the distinction of having the most powerful cast of stars that has been seen in any photoplay that has been seen on a local screen in months. Even the smaller parts are played by artists of recognized ability, while the more important roles are in the hands of such famous players as Agnes Ayres, Theodore Roberts, Milton Sills, Helen Dunbar, Myrna Loy, Lucan Littlefield, Jerome Farrier, Betty Francisco, Fred Turner, Robert Bolder and Edward Martindel.

The marriage of a beautiful young actress to a millionaire clubman furnishes the theme of the picture, around which is woven one of the most fascinating modern love stories that has found its way to the screen in recent years.

Folly Vallance (played by Agnes Ayres), marries Anthony Bond, Folly herself, admires by many, thinks Anthony Bond "rather nice." But convention knives happiness on the very eve of the marriage.

Anthony Bond learns that she has lightly said that if he killed her she would sue him for breach of promise. The straightforward Canadian takes this as a sign that she does not love him—she goes ahead with the marriage as a "business proposition." He determines it shall be a union in name only—so he tells Folly on the first night of their honeymoon.

Stung to the quick she plunges into a whirl of reckless pleasure and flirtation. Always Anthony is present, a brooding, malicious spite, a constant reminder to her of her cold and suspicious.

Keene Mordant, lifelong friend of Anthony, tries to keep Folly from flying too far. Always he gentles her to further a reconciliation when she comes to him.

Count Svensen, an explorer of the Far North, enters this tragedy of errors. Holding the threat to disgrace her husband for a Canadian offense which he, Svensen, had really committed but now tells his own advantage, he induces her to run away with him.

Keene discovers the flight, pursues them to save Folly from the consequences of her reckless act, and drives through the rain for shelter to the closed country home of the Bonds. Arriving there, they find Bond, who was supposed to be on his way to Canada. Jumping at conclusions, Bond accuses his friend of treachery and Keene is forced to flee, refusing to explain. Folly, however, tells of the Svensen incident and in the ensuing scene Bond discovers that she did it for him.

Shamed to the quick, he goes away—telling her to tell him when she returns. Next we find them meeting on the deck of a liner bound for Canada. "You asked me to wait," she says, looking at him for the first time with loving sincerity, refined from the fires of misunderstanding.

A clever Snub Pollard comedy and the current edition of the Forsyth Magazine will be shown as added features.

Fine Feathers for Viola.

Viola Dana, who is considered one of the best dressed stars of the screen, spends most of her spare time in designing costumes to be worn in her forthcoming productions. In "The Off-Shoot," her current picture, every garment she wears is rainbow-hued. She wears a wonderful tulle as a cape over her gown. The skirt is composed of row after row of petal-like scallops, almost like a rose. It is severely plain, relying upon beautiful color and flower-like arrangement for its attractiveness. A shell pink crepe gown is another sartorial dream. It is accented with a skirt that is rather full and the waist and sleeves are also pleated. Several rows of hemstitching around the bottom of the

"THE FIGHTING CHANCE" IS STRAND ATTRACTION

Is Taken From Robert Chambers' Famous Novel of Society.

Robert W. Chambers' famous story, "The Fighting Chance," one of the most widely read of all Mr. Chambers' famous society novels, has been adapted to the screen by Paramount Artcraft, and will be offered as the feature attraction at the Strand the first half of the present week, with a clever new Hank Mann two-reel comedy entitled "Junk," as an added attraction.

The story revolves around Stephen Sward, the last of an aristocratic New York family, who is following in the alcoholic steps of his ancestors. Stephen is accused of emulating Lydia Vyse, an actress, into the sacred precincts of the Patrons' club. The charge, brought by Howard Quarrier, who dislikes Stephen, though false, results in Stephen's expulsion from the club. Quarrier is compelled to bribe Lydia to keep quiet about the matter.

At a house party at Shetover house, given by the Kemp Farrells, Stephen meets Sylvia Landis. Quarrier has asked Sylvia to marry him and she consents to an engagement. The friendship of Stephen and Sylvia progresses rapidly, and a hunt, he avows his love. She gives way for an instant and he kisses her. She covers her indiscretion by pretending that she is merely flirting with him, but there is a fighting chance for him to win her eventually.

They meet again one night and Stephen kisses her again. This is observed by Leroy Mortimer, a dissipated society shark. Plank is introduced to him and they become staunch friends. Quarrier, to break Stephen, plans to corner Amalgamated Electric, in which Stephen's fortune is invested. Plank frustrates this by buying the stock he controls, thereby retaining control for Stephen.

Sylvia and Mortimer's wife see Stephen and Plank in Washington square and arrange a dinner for four. Quarrier learns of this and, seeing here a chance to disgrace Sylvia and Stephen, bribes Mortimer to go to the restaurant and create a disturbance over Plank's dining with Mrs. Mortimer. When Quarrier and Mortimer reach the inn, they quarrel. Mortimer shoots Quarrier, who in turn kills Mortimer with his own weapon. Lydia Vyse clears Stephen's name at the Patrons and Stephen and Sylvia, not to speak of Plank and Mrs. Mortimer, find happiness in their love for one another.

skirt and on the waist are the only adornments, with the exception of a spray of French flowers at the waist. There is an indigo and green costume, made of soft, clingy chiffon, and, like the other gowns, is not very elaborate. The foundation of this costume is green chiffon, over which is a skirt of the purple material. An orange-colored chapeau is the most elaborate of all. It has trimmings of sequins on the bodice and skirt. A huge black ostrich fan completes the costume.

May Allison proudly boasts of her canning ability. She recently preserved figs picked from trees in her own garden and her press agent avers that the operation was a complete success.

Irene Marcellus, New York stage beauty, will make her screen debut in an adaptation of Albert Payson Terhune's famous story, "The Lotus Eaters," which will be produced by Marshall Neilan.

Prominent Film Stars Here in New Screen Plays

Splendid Features
Beginning Monday

Another big week of features and special added attractions will greet the patrons of the Vaudeette on Monday. The opening picture has for a star Blanche Sweet, one of the most admired stars that appears on local screens, and her offering, "The Warrens of Virginia," is recognized as one of the finest photoplays she has ever appeared in. On the same bill will be seen the 14th episode of "Hidden Dangers," together with the Paramount Magazine, making an altogether acceptable program for the first two days.

On Wednesday and Thursday the second episode of the great super-serial, "Bride 13," will be shown in addition to a fast-moving two-reel western drama entitled "Double Danger," and a two-reel Keystone comedy called "His Bitter Pill." This will be the two big days of the week.

On Friday and Saturday "Between Men" will hold the screen, one of the strongest of many powerful stories of the border. On the same program will be seen a side-splitting Mack Sennett comedy entitled "Back to the Kitchen," one of the cleverest comedies of the year, and a picture that will keep you laughing clear through Sunday. Topics of the Day will close the bill as usual.

"Lying Lips" will be the release title of Thomas H. Ince's second big production for the Associated Producers, House Peters and Florence Vidor will be co-starring in the picture. "Lying Lips" includes a highly sensational and lavishly staged banquet and ball scene in which a bevy of mermaids, clothed almost exclusively in professional tails, splash about in a great pool of water.

Three Popular Stars
In Late Productions
Coming to Alamo No. 2

Three of the brightest stars in screendom, each of them appearing in a splendid production, are announced as the week's attractions at the Alamo theater No. 2.

Here's the schedule. On Monday and Tuesday the Alamo presents Eugene O'Brien, reigning "matinee idol," in one of his greatest successes, "A Fool and His Money." On Wednesday and Thursday Olive Thomas in "The Flapper," a comedy-drama in which the star has done probably the best work of her career. For the week-end on Friday and Saturday, inimitable Constance Talmadge in "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," a delightful adaptation from a distinguished comedy-drama of the speaking stage.

"A Fool and His Money," the initial feature, is the work of George Barr McCutcheon, leading American author of "best sellers." His leading lady is Ruby DeDecker, a charming film artist who visited Atlanta last spring.

Louise Price, a young New York actress, is the latest recruit to the Clara Kimball Young supporting company of players at the Harry Garson studio in Los Angeles. Miss Price was formerly with David Belasco and also served under the stage banner of the Selwyns. She has also had a successful cinema experience.

Jane Atherton, 17-year-old niece of Gertrude Atherton, the novelist, has been enrolled as a player by Goldwyn. Her initial appearance will be in "Noble Oblige," her aunt's first original screen story.

SPLENDID PROGRAM OFFERED AT ALPHA

The Alpha theater, the home of the motion picture serial, has a program this week which cleverly mixes comedy and drama, as well as serial films. Thursday in particular promises something out of the ordinary in the way of picture entertainment. In the first place, Elmo Lincoln, the screen strong man, will make his initial appearance in a brand-new serial, "The Flaming Disk," the first episode of which is called "The Rails of Death." It is said to be a thriller of the most pronounced type. Then, on the same day, "Babe" Ruth, the home-run king of baseball, will be seen in "Over the Fence," a screening of an interesting story about the national game. But this is not all, just to make Thursday a big day at the Alpha, there will also be shown Texas Guinan in a western drama, "Moonshine Fued," and Molly Malone in the comedy, "Mollie's Mumps."

William Fox has purchased the picture rights of A. Channing Edington's book, "Brute McGwire," a story of the United States reclamation service. The plot is woven around one of the biggest reclamation projects ever handled by the government. Fox is expected to make a superproduction of the scenario.

Producer Ben Hampton has selected the Colorado river desert, which is part of that great strip of waste land that forms Death valley, the Mohave desert and the Sonora of Mexico, to represent the African Sahara in the desert scenes of his latest big production, "There Was a King in Egypt." It will be an all-star picture.

BERT LYTELL FILM IS GRAND OFFERING

"The Price of Redemption" Gives Star Another Excellent Role.

Bert Lytell, popular film hero, who lately passed through Atlanta, and who will be a distinguished figure among the stars who attend the moving picture exposition here next month, is starred in the remarkable romantic drama presented at Loew's Grand this week as an extra attraction to the usual vaudeville bill.

"The Price of Redemption" is the new Lytell picture which is rated as the most impressive vehicle given the handsome young player since his screen career began.

"The Price of Redemption" is a thrilling drama that tells the tale of a man who conquered himself. Its varied scenes range from exclusive circles of London society to barbaric palaces in the heart of India.

A magnificent starring has been given this Metro production, and a splendid cast supports Lytell. For instance, his leading lady is Senna Owens herself a star in her own right. The "villainess" is Cleo Madison, a screen actress who has been in the limelight since the early days of the cinema era.

An outstanding feature of "The Price of Redemption" is the striking portrayal done by Bert Lytell as a "dope fiend"—a degraded victim of the drug habit who fights his way back to self-respect. A love story, punctuated with thrill after thrill, is unfolded in the drama.

"The Price of Redemption" is one of the most important productions yet presented at the Grand, and its premier screening in Atlanta bids fair to be auspicious.

was when she received her first "fan letter." "Fan mail," as the motion folks use the term, is the mail received from persons who know the actor only through the screen.

"I still have that letter. It was from a young woman living in Des Moines, Iowa. Evidently, she was well educated and knew something about acting. She praised me, and at the same time criticised me. The first picture which I appeared in had just been released, and she told me my faults as she saw them, as well as my good points. Her criticism benefited me more than I can say."

Allice Calhoun will soon appear on the screen as a Vitagraph star.

News and Features of the Screen and Drama

CONDUCTED BY L. B. WINCHELL

NORMA TALMADGE AT CRITERION ALL WEEK

In "The Branded Woman" Star Has Most Pretensious Picture.

In the most ambitious production of her career Norma Talmadge comes to the Criterion theater this week in "The Branded Woman," a screen version of the famous stage play, "Branded," by Oliver D. Bailey, a story of a girl who is forced to the very brink of the abyss from which few women ever escape, but in this case the woman does escape, she marries the man she loves, only to be confronted by visions of her terrible origin.

The basic substance of the story has to do with the devilish influence the denizens of the underworld are always trying to exert over those above their moral stations in life and a striking effect in the picture is the likening of tendencies among very different people to the devil and his hordes.

Because of the elaborate nature of the sets necessary in this production, Huga Hallin, the celebrated artist, was especially engaged to design them, the result has been an artistic triumph. In addition to beautiful interiors for a private house in Paris and the Ritz hotel, a fashionable boarding school for girls up the Hudson, the library and other rooms of the wealthy New Yorker's home are some remarkable scenes in India.

The scenes of the Far East reveal an open market place and a slave-block, where Norma, as the heroine, is sold at public auction, with donkeys, camels and natives in picturesque costume lending a touch of "atmosphere."

But most remarkable of all are the allegorical scenes in India. One of these sets which represents a dream of Norma's, wherein she imagines herself dragged down by society into a whirlpool from which she is rescued by the man she loves, was filmed in a huge pool discolored and apparently filled with creeping creatures.

Percy Marmont, the English actor, is Miss Talmadge's leading man in "The Branded Woman." He once played to be an English diplomat, and while attending college in Great Britain, studied with that object in view, but the nearest he has ever come to realizing that ambition is in the films.

Other well-known members of the cast are George Fawcett, Gaston Glass and Vincent Serrano.

The Race of the Age.

Educational Films announces the immediate release of a two-reel special under the title of "The Race of the Age," giving exclusive pictures of the Great International Exhibition Man O' War and Sir Barton.

Prints have been shipped from New York to the various exchanges for immediate release through the United States and Canada.

Since the picture was made under exclusive agreement with the Kentucky Jockey club, owners of the track on which the race was held, and it was known that no other photographer was permitted admission, Educational has preferred to carefully assemble and film the picture rather than send it out in a shape that showed the rush.

Fourteen cameramen were employed in making the picture for Educational. Its own entire staff was sent to Windsor and the very pick of the photographers available in New York were employed. Cameras were stationed at start and finish and at each quarter during the race. Two other cameras swept the track during the contest and are reported to have recorded the most unusual picture of the sort ever taken, securing every second of the race. Other cameramen took the crowds, adding considerable dramatic effect to the picture.

Three slow motion cameras were

"FELIX O'DAY" IS OFFERING AT TUDOR

H. B. Warner Heads Cast of
duction.

A powerful story of love and hate, revenge and forgiveness is "Felix O'Day," which comes to the Tudor Monday for a week's engagement. It offers the sterling actor, H. B. Warner, in a role well suited to his histrionic ability, that of an honorable gentleman who is suddenly faced with the unscrupulous machinations of his supposed dearest friend, who not only betrays his father's fortunes, but also steals away the love of his wife. Now that he has sipped the bitter draughts of disappointment, Felix O'Day has but one object in life, and that is revenge. To New York city, the melting pot of the world, the trail leading to his fate takes a hand. The footprints of Felix are taken to a little antique shop, it is here that he tastes his first touch of happiness. How he finally discovers his wife and the method of revenge that he receives forms one of the most tensely interesting and entertaining film dramas seen here this season.

No more perfect selection could have been made than H. B. Warner for the role of Felix O'Day. He is one of our best exponents of restrained emotional acting. He will be found superb in this new photoplay, which carries him from the heights of society to the depths of poverty. In the beginning "Felix O'Day" is a society drama, but later discloses the underworld and reflects the changing viewpoint of men and women under the influence of a high and low plane of living.

Marguerite Snow, charming and talented, plays the leading feminine role opposite Mr. Warner. She is well known both on stage and screen. As Lady Barbara O'Day, the weak woman she assumes a difficult role with sympathy and strength. Lillian Rich, after her advent in "One Hour Before Dawn" and "Half a Chance," supports H. B. Warner with sympathy and appeal. Karl Formes, for years a successful character actor on the stage, portrays the villainous Jules Bonyay, a kindly old antique dealer. His is a remarkable piece of character work, admirably accomplished. "Felix O'Day" will be found splendidly done, although the part is unusually difficult. Mr. Ripley has made the role a perfect type of villain, without resorting to the common place subtleties employed by the ordinary bad man.

The novel "Felix O'Day," from which the picture is taken, is by F. Hopkinson Smith and has earned a world-wide reputation owing to its deep-rooted heart appeal. In the film drama the element of pathos has been emphasized. It brings to the screen a story that will have a widespread appeal.

used, and these are said to afford eloquent evidence of the reason for Man O' War's victory. The slow motion pictures include an unusual one in the form of a close-up showing every movement of the muscles of the world's greatest race horse, taken immediately at the close of the track duel.

According to Educational, the unusual dramatic power of the picture will make it appeal to women and children equally as strongly as it does to the follower of the races and the lover of thoroughbred.

"Lucky Damascus," an original story by Marc Edmund Jones, will soon be placed in production as a Thomas H. Ince special. It deals with the vital subject of redemption, but from an entirely new viewpoint, and surrounded by amazing circumstances—according to the press agent.

Bryant Washburn is returning from London to Los Angeles. He made one picture while abroad—"The Road to London."

Problem Picture Opening Feature For Week at Savoy

Grace Davison and Montagu Love in "Man's Plaything," a fascinating problem story, is the opening picture attraction for the coming week at the Savoy theater. It is a picture with a new angle and one that will not fail in interesting Savoy patrons. There is also a comedy Monday, "Why Change Your Mind," in which Hank Mann is the chief fun maker.

The Tuesday program is headed by Clara Kimball Young in one of her greatest successes, "Tribes," a 1920 version of the screen masterpiece. It is in six thrilling parts.

The comedy for the same day is "A Harem Scarem," featuring Billy Ruge. Alice Brady is the star for Wednesday, appearing in the leading role in "The Knife," a pulsating melodrama and one filled with action from the very start. Another Hank Mann comedy, "The Nickle Chase," is also on the bill for that day.

For the balance of the week some strong productions have been booked. Olive Thomas comes Thursday in "The Spite Bride," a fast-run picture. Norma Talmadge Friday in "The Forbidden City," and Constance Talmadge Saturday in "Sauce for the Goose," one of her most pleasing comedy-dramas.

The latest Thomas H. Ince-Louis Joseph Vance special, "The Bronze Bell," has been completed at Ince's Hollywood studio. Calmidge Foote and Doris May are co-featured in the all-star cast, which includes John Davidson and Clara DuBois.

Director Frank Borzage has returned from London to Los Angeles, where he shot scenes for Cosmopolitan's production, "Kindred of the Dust."

From the Heart of Filmland

BY JAY BALFOUR.

Los Angeles, November 12.—Millard Harris Chaplin is in Los Angeles for a few days' stay—just long enough, she says, to sign a few business papers relative to her matrimonial troubles with the famous actor. Coupled with her reappearance on the west coast, she is the announcement that hereafter she will be known as Mildred Harris. To the initiated here this looks like a decided victory for Charlie. The capitulation of his name by her in her motion picture work has always vexed him exceedingly and the fact that she has decided to drop the family name indicates that Charlie really has the whip hand in their mistle detangling. There has been a great deal of misdirected sympathy wasted upon the couple, for Mildred really is complacent over the vast amount of publicity she has received.

Discussing the proposed settlement with Charlie, Mildred is quoted as saying: "I am sorry to the effect that I demanded one-half of Mr. Chaplin's fortune or wanted a few million dollars. I am sorry that I released Mr. Chaplin's latest picture, but I am not sorry that I have ever asked him what he thought was right. That is all I have ever asked him, and I am proud of it. I am proud of the fact that I have been here and will continue and Mr. Chaplin will return to Los Angeles to get service of the necessary papers."

Thelma Percy, once a favorite, it is announced, will become Mrs. W. A. Brady, Jr. The romance had its inception in New York a year ago. Mr. Brady, who is a well-known theatrical manager and promoter of New York and other theaters, has been married to the actress. Miss Percy is now playing the lead in "The Spite Bride," a fast-run picture. Norma Talmadge Friday in "The Forbidden City," and Constance Talmadge Saturday in "Sauce for the Goose," one of her most pleasing comedy-dramas.

Francis X. Bushman and his wife, Beverly Bayne, are appearing in the forthcoming production of "Whistler" in Los Angeles by Oliver Moscoso. The play has been engaged for the life of the famous player, and it is to have its premiere at the now famous Little Theater in this city. The plot of the play is said to team with incidents of sparkling romance interwoven with the life of the artist. The stage settings will include a collection of Whistler paintings, which are to be obtained from New York, it is said. The former screen stars will be featured by Moscoso in the production and, later, they may appear in pictures under the direction of their new manager.

Richard Dix, who recently came west to appear in pictures, is now with Edwyn, having been engaged for an important role in "Mr. and Mrs. Eberhart," a picture produced by Rupert Hughes. The cast also includes Helen Chavick (who is featured), M. B. (Lefty) Flynn, James Neill, Edythe Chapman and Kate Lester.

Hobart Bosworth is again making pictures directly under the banner of the Famous Players-Lasky company. He has made three pictures under the direction of J. Parker Read, Jr., all acknowledged scenes in the theater before returning to the Ince studio. His first picture, under the new arrangement, will be titled "Pearls and Pain." The original story was by Carey Wilson. The theme is a love story, which is a variation of an enormous pearl in the wake of which follow romance and tragedy. It will go to the screen as an Associated Producers picture.

William H. Crane, in his old age, is like a fish out of water. Having retired from the stage he had a falling out with the picture business, and the actor, who had been a big success in the theater, is now in a public house, or "pub," as they are called across the pond.

"I've been there many times," he asserted, seriously. Of course he meant to the church.

"Yes," he went on, "it's like looking at the actuality. I am amazed at the accuracy of the scene—even the signs and smaller details are perfect."

He was told how painstakingly every item of this sort and co-operates in gaining just the necessary effects and maintaining the realism. Princes, generals, noted writers, scientists and artists are continually finding things of great interest at the studios and are loud in their praise of the manner in which the producers of motion pictures achieve their results.

In our own land the authors who are most prominent in the literary field of contemporary fiction have for some time past recognized the necessity of closer co-operation with the producers if they were to get the most out of their work. At first they were more or less content to sit on the sidelines and gradually they came to realize that the place for a man who wanted to write primarily for the screen, or even secondarily, was the studio. California—essentially those who are desirous of either commercial or sentimental reasons to advertise the fact of its beautiful characteristics and scenic charm—owe a lot to the motion pictures. Every picture that emanates from a west coast studio as a rule contains some typical scenes showing the beauties of the state. But there is another rather unique note: publicity concerning the pictures goes from one end of the world to the other and when it is possible to record truthfully such anecdotal items as the following, the denizens of the Golden State may well "perk up."

George Melford's production, "The Faith Healer," which is now being made, there are scenes which depict the great throngs of "lame, halt and blind" who come to the Michaels for healing. The hospitals and health resorts were combed and many invalids who could get about were engaged. It was a pathetic looking aggregation which traveled in big vans to the San Fernando hills on the first days of the work. The scenes required the best part of a week or ten days to complete. At noon each day, for luncheon, besides other dainties, a pint of milk was supplied each extra. By the end of the engagement they began to look so healthy that, as an assistant remarked, "if we had been obliged to use 'em another week they wouldn't have done for the picture at all!"

Many interesting and distinguished visitors succeed in gaining admission to the picture studios in Los Angeles and often their comments are decidedly interesting to the workers in the big film plants. Not so long ago, a member of parliament from England was an interested visitor at the studio where William D. Taylor was producing a picture.

space having been secured for that purpose at the plant. There was a street scene in Holborn, England, and the visitor gazed at it with deep interest. It showed a big church and adjoining it a public house—or "pub" as they are called across the pond.

"I've been there many times," he asserted, seriously. Of course he meant to the church.

"Yes," he went on, "it's like looking at the actuality. I am amazed at the accuracy of the scene—even the signs and smaller details are perfect."

BEBE DANIELS COMES AS STAR TO FORSYTH

"You Never Can Tell" is Her First Starring Vehicle.

Beautiful Bebe Daniels, lately elevated to stardom after having won a host of admirers by her clever work in such pictures as "Male and Female," "Why Change Your Mind," "The Dancin' Fool" and "Sick Abed," will be seen in her first starring vehicle, "You Never Can Tell," this week at the Forsyth, marking the second time this season that a picture given in the hotel the little clock room girl is one of the most admired models.

As the star, "You Never Can Tell," Miss Daniels plays the part of Rowena Patricia Jones, a pretty cheek-room girl in a smart hotel, a locale which presents a contrast to her home in the tenement district. A love for beautiful clothes is evidenced by her constant capturing the attention of William Vaughn, an elderly man about town.

While the Vaughn affair grows apace Rowena's heart is really smitten by a "fairy prince," a handsome young fellow who is her ideal of everything that is splendid in masculine attractiveness. But having secured him, only to find he is a poor and so she tries to stifle her love for him by one of the most dramatic scenes in the picture.

Crushed and unhappy, she hurries home, where Prince comes to her rescue and tells of his love, still under the masquerade of a chauffeur.

Of course he is a wealthy young millionaire, and chooses this as the means to produce Rowena into a social circle. In the luxuriously appointed mansion the girl is completely puzzled and she must be a society crook! But she makes good with his mother by her sweetness and everything is sailing along as merrily as a June romance when the Prince's uncle appears in the picture room nearby. He proves to be Vaughn and Rowena nearly faints from fright. However, Vaughn arranges to have a word with her alone and apologetically reassures her that nothing ever will be said of the incident—that he knows her to be a thoroughly good girl. And Mrs. Vaughn is likewise convinced of this. Everything ends happily and a new era opens for Rowena and her struggling family.

As added attractions to the feature picture, the management has secured a brand-new two-reel Smah Pollack comedy, which, with the current edition of the Forsyth Orchestra, will make one of the most delightful programs to be seen in Atlanta during the coming week.

Nell Shipman has two pet skunks which she will feature in her forthcoming "north woods" picture.

Two Unusual Productions Coming to Atlanta Theater

Walker Whiteside Here Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday in "The Master of Ballantrae"—Dunbar Opera Company in "Robin Hood" Coming Thursday.

Walker Whiteside will appear at the Atlanta Theater on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and on Wednesday afternoon, in Robert Louis Stevenson's wonderful story of adventure, love, romance and mystery, "The Master of Ballantrae." The attraction of the first half of the week will be the ever-popular DeKoven opera, "Robin Hood," for which seats will go on sale Tuesday.

After years of acting character parts, Walker Whiteside will now appear in his own natural visage, for James Duffie, the hero of "The Master of Ballantrae," is a young man of three and thirty; handsome to a fault; "an unco lad for the ladies," as Stevenson says of him, and as gay a scamp as ever sailed the Spanish Main with "Blackbeard," the pirate captain.

Romantic roles were played by Walker Whiteside for many years, and he is a master of the art of sword play; his swaggers convey just the proper element of bravado; his love making is said to excel in intensity that of the so-called "admirable" of today, and his villainy possesses the requisite polish which elevates it above the ordinary depths of intrigue.

The story of "The Master of Ballantrae" is enacted entirely within the confines of the great baronial hall in Castle Dunsinane in Scotland. There come James Duffie and his Hindu servant Secundra Dass; Lord Duffie and his other son, Henry; old Mackellar, the tight-fisted Scotch steward; dashing Colonel Burke; amusing John Paul, the glib, lovely Alton Graeme, and sinister Jessie Brown. These characters are portrayed by such celebrities as Alexander, Frank, Basil West, Maurice Barrett, W. Mayne Lynton, Karth Voss, James Macne, Miss Sydney Shields, Miss Nancy Stewart and Miss Virginia Duncan. Carl Mason, a New York playwright, made the adaptation of "The Master of Ballantrae" for Walker Whiteside, and Augustus Ditou, one of Gotham's best known managers, is directing this star's tour.

Ralph Dunbar's beautiful revival of the DeKoven opera, "Robin Hood," which comes to the Atlanta Theater Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is extremely fortunate as to cast. In fact, it's an almost "all-star" show. Miss Estelle DeShon, tall and very pleasing to look upon and the possessor of a wonderful voice, is the "Maid Marian," and Miss Catherine Quinn is singing "Anabelle."

The "Robin Hood" role is in the able hands of Arthur Sherman, fresh from laurels with "The Chocolate Soldier." John MacSweeney, late of the Bostonians, is the "Sheriff of Nottingham," and Miss Clara DeShon is the "Puck." Others among the principals are Miss Silence Tower, Randolph Ketch and Raymond Hunter.

The chorus is one of the best from the Dunbar studio while the costumes, lighting effects and properties are up to the Dunbar standard.

Romantic Drama and Tuneful "Robin Hood"

"Irene" Announced As Attraction Here Week of Nov. 22

The tremendous popularity of "Irene," which is to be the attraction at the Atlanta theater the entire week, beginning Monday, November 22, is attested by the following article from the current issue of Variety (New York):

"The four companies representing 'Irene' are said to have achieved something of a record last week, when grossing $42,000 collectively. The financial returns to James Montgomery, from interest in the show and royalties, is said to have been $23,000. It is reported a fifth company is to be organized by Jules Murray. Atlanta theatergoers will be glad to learn that the No. 1 company is to appear here."

Promptly, Too.

(From Cartoons Magazine.)

"I was humiliated this morning," my dear," said the young minister, out a year ago.

"How was that, Charles?" inquired his wife.

"Immediately after my sermon I was requested to marry the Widow Jones and young Mr. Spriggins. As it was the first time I have performed the marriage ceremony, I suppose I was a trifle nervous. Anyhow, after I had said to the groom, 'Do you promise, my mind suddenly became a blank and I was unable to proceed.'"

"Charles! What did you do?"

"The widow prompted me."

Madge Bellamy, recently recruited from the ranks of Broadway beauty, has the leading feminine role in "Pearls and Pain," a Thomas H. Ince special, featuring Hobart Bosworth, Tully Marshall and Niles Welch have important roles. Of course "Pearls and Pain" is a sea picture.

Gloria Swanson's first picture for Paramount since the arrival of the stock at her home is likely to be from a story written by Elinor Glyn, of "Three Weeks" novel odor. Miss Glyn is scheduled to soon arrive in Hollywood in search of a new kind of hero for her story.

There are more potential film to way and they are taking the place of the departed. They are the Film les girls at the Los Angeles Broad-foles beauties.

At the Vaudeville Houses

Left: George Austin Moore at the Lyric Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. Right: Victoria and Dupre at Loew's Grand first half of the week.

Beauties With Ray.

The cast for Charles Ray's adaptation of James Whitcomb Riley's best known poem, "The Old Swimmin' Hole," which will be the popular star's fourth release through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., includes Laura La Plante and Marjorie Prevost, both of whom have migrated from comedy into the dramatic fold. Playing the leading feminine roles, these two maidens form a decided contrast. While Miss Prevost is dark and demure, both are beautiful, however, and accomplished young women.

Charlotte Pearce will again be seen with Mr. Ray. This young lady played the pathetic sister of the star in "Peaceful Valley," a performance which gave her a niche in the hall of screen fame.

Lincoln Stedman is filling his third consecutive engagement with the Ray company and impersonates a novel character in being a fat boy with a mean disposition. Lon Poff will stand on a raft, together with four cameramen who were to "shoot" a vital scene. In the excitement of the scene, the five men and the four valuable instruments were thrown into the water.

With "Foolish Wives."

If Von Stroheim finishes the production of "Foolish Wives" without the loss of life or limb, he will have encountered to provide a scenario for an eighteen-episode serial.

While scouting for a suitable location on the rocky coast near Monterey, Cal., one on which to erect a reproduction of Monte Carlo, the launch containing Von Stroheim and his assistants was wrecked on a submerged rock, and the party was brought to safety by a fishing craft.

Rehearsing a scene in which he carried a body down a river bank in a blinding rainstorm, Von Stroheim slipped on a wet rock, and in trying to regain his balance, suffered a sprained back which kept him in the hall of screen fame.

Filming a fire scene in a cabin located in a rocky canyon, Von Stroheim was so intent on his scene that he did not notice the flames creeping nearer and nearer. He was rescued by an assistant, after his clothes and hair had been scorched.

Directing a river scene at night, he stood on a raft, together with four cameramen who were to "shoot" a vital scene. In the excitement of the scene, the five men and the four valuable instruments were thrown into the water.

After working under the powerful sun all night for several weeks during succeeding days when fell a victim to "killed" eyes and had to remain in a dark room for several days.

And the production of "Foolish Wives" is but half completed.

Don'ts to Screen-Struck Girls

By MARY MILES MINTER

6—Don't Observe Best You. The worst obstacle to a screen aspirant is success. No matter if a girl has youth, beauty and brains—if she has to order larger hats after achieving screen triumphs there is but little hope for her.

A player's chief stock in trade is a personality, natural, unaffected, charming—the player herself in other words. To keep that stock in drawing power one must stay completely natural. And of all the blights to destroy this factor, "swell head" is the greatest.

As soon as anybody begins to think themselves indispensable—"put on airs"—then and there they are tarnishing that originality, that freshness of viewpoint which has been fortunate enough to attract and hold public attention.

I recall the lesson I had on this point years and years ago. I was only six or seven years old—but had scored quite a success. I really thought I was quite indispensable.

Then one day I took ill and couldn't play. What a horrible catastrophe! Of course, the whole company must close down. I felt a terrible chagrin when I went by the theater in a car during performance time with crowds pouring in the door, apparently just the same as usual. And I learned that an understudy was doing my work, quite acceptably.

That almost broke my heart. I cried for hours—and at intervals during succeeding days when I felt I was to do my work apparently without change in the crowd.

Don't let success beat you—that's my last, and I think, my most important bit of advice to the screen-struck girl.

"PETITE MUSICALE" TOPS GRAND BILL

Brings Six Talented People in Act of Tuneful Melodies.

A pair of headline attractions and an exceptionally fine film production are the outstanding features on the big bill announced for the first half of the week at Loew's Grand.

"Petite Musicale," a brilliant sextet of feminine harmonists, and Nancy Boyer and company in the famous comedy success, "Mary Lou," are the rival top liners, while Bert Lytton in "The Prince of Redemption" is the noteworthy drawing card on the screen.

Big news in the announcement is contained in the announcement that "Buzin" Around," the newest, brightest and most successful of Will Morrissey's musical comedies will close the week. Carrying sixteen people and elaborate settings, this production was the hit of the summer at the Casino theater, New York.

"Petite Musicale" is the last word in gorgeous settings, stunning costumes and tuneful melody. The six principals in the cast are presented in strikingly conceived revue, which is as pleasing to the eye as to the ear.

The Nancy Boyer sketch, "Mary Lou," has been called the "Pollyanna" of the vaudeville stage. It is a powerful little drama with a absorbing plot, and it has been an instantaneous hit everywhere it has been staged.

Enjoyable variety is afforded by the remainder of the Grand's opening. Elsie Harvey and George Stifter are present with a lively pianologue that mixes songs and nonsense with telling effect. The six couple are among the most popular entertainers behind the footlights.

Cope and Hutton, two "naïf" comedians, put over a riotous episode under the caption of "Gus, you're too darned rough," while Victoria and DuPre are a mixed pair of dancing line in the balancing and tumbling line.

Productions With Religious Themes Becoming Popular

That the strong prejudice harbored by many moviegoers against pictures dealing with religious themes is rapidly disappearing is the belief of Benjamin A. Prager, president of the Mayflower Photoplay corporation. The public's "Man," "Earthbound," "The Miracle Man," and other photoplays modeled by religious themes, he said, forced film moguls to take a new attitude and a broader attitude toward the religious picture.

The result that pictures of this type will virtually dominate the market during the coming year, says the Mayflower official.

NINE LIBERTY GIRLS ON LYRIC PROGRAM

Spectacular Musical Offering—Heads Four Other Big Time Acts.

The Nine Liberty Girls, a spectacular musical offering that has been making tremendous hits in the big theaters of the east, is announced as the headline attraction of the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday bill of Keith vaudeville at the Lyric. Four other big time acts will round out one of the best shows of weeks.

The Nine Liberty Girls are really a small brass band. These attractive misses all are skilled musicians and constitute one of the best petite musical organizations in the country.

"At Rome and Ed Cullen will be a welcome feature of the bill, appearing as eccentric, terpsichorean, pantomime comedians.

The Two Caritons are phlegmatic gymnasts whose act promises to be as the headline attraction of the Lyric. The name of the act is different. Eccentric comedians who are certain of a warm welcome are Keaton and Hutton.

The Whirlwind Dorans will complete the vaudeville program with an amazing exhibition of fancy stunts. Added to the vaudeville will be the latest Pathe News, Topics of the Day and Pathe Review.

Leroy Scott, a Goldwyn Eminent Author, is at the Lyric City studio to assist in the adaptation and picturization of his novel, "No. 13 Washington Square."

Marshall Neilan's latest star, Irene Marcellus, is about to begin work. When Neilan discovered her, popular actress, she was appearing in a dancing solo number with the Ziegfeld Follies.

Marshall Stedman has been granted a divorce from Myrtle Stedman, popular actress, who is now appearing in Charles Ray's supporting company.

Francis MacDonald will play opposite Violet Dana in her forthcoming Metro picture, "Sorrentina." In this picture Miss Dana will appear as an Italian maid.

Charlotte Dawn has the leading feminine role in a new Henry Lehrman comedy, in which seven "cute" Billie Ritchie also cavort.

Broeken Christians, for six years director of the Lyric Picture theater, New York, is now playing with Erich Von Stroheim's Universal company.

Otis Harlan, uncouth comedian, has a congenial role in "The Girl in the Taxi," in which Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven are the featured players.

The value of the religious theme must endure if the motion picture is to progress, for the screen art is withering in the hands of those who treat it as a mere vehicle for tawdry fare than rapid sentiment and airy romance."

Paul Powell, Now Lasky Director, Had Newspaper Training

Paul Powell, who is now a director at the London studio of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation, was originally a newspaper man. He was born in Peoria, Ill., and educated in the high school there and Bradley college. His father owned The Peoria Star and was opposed to his son engaging in the publishing business. But young Paul had been writing for years as a high school and college correspondent, and was determined to continue as a reporter. While on a fishing trip with his father's city editor they formed a conspiracy, the upshot of which was that the youngster was working as a reporter on The Star two months before his father discovered the fact.

Going to Chicago, he became, as he expressed it, the first "nob" sister in America. He invented the "human interest" story—and it was him a star job on The Tribune. Then came star editorial positions on his father's old paper and The Los Angeles Express.

It was in the Los Angeles Express that the cleverness of this young newspaper man first evidenced itself to his father. The Express was then a paper of some 10,000 circulation and the industry was in its infancy and to enter it was a real gamble. But Paul had faith and burned his bridges behind him. From Lasky he went to Griffith, 1914 to 1918, directing such stars as Lillian Gish, Dorothy Gish, Bobby Barron, Mae Marsh, Marie Doro, Wilfrid Lucas, Constance Talmadge, Bessie Love, Seena Owen and Gladys Brockwell. After leaving Griffith his best known productions have been Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna," Ethel Clayton in "Crooked Street" and Mary Miles Minter in "Sweet Lavender" and "Eyes of the Heart."

Tom Moore is to appear in a screen version of that old-time stage success, "Mr. Barnes of New York." It is scheduled to be his next Goldwyn starring vehicle. The play was adapted from a novel which was a sensational success in the early eighties.

In Marshall Neilan's newspaper picture, "Go and Get It," is a hard riding cowboy in "Not a Drum Was Heard" and the forthcoming First National picture.

Frank Keenan has made the greatest hit of his stage career in the title role of "John Ferguson," now running in Los Angeles.

Roy Stewart will play the lead opposite Pauline Frederick in her picture, "The Mistress of Shalott."

PRINCESS LEAVES GERMAN HUSBAND

Famous English Beauty, Whom War Made Enemy Alien, Back in London for Good, 'Tis Said.

BY LADY MARY.

London, November 14.—The beautiful Princess Pless, who has again taken up her abode in London, has, I hear, definitely left her German husband, though I understand no legal proceedings of separation have been taken.

Princess Pless, whom we used to know as princess of that title, is the elder of the two famous daughters of the late Colonel Cornwallis West, of Ruthin castle, the younger being the recently divorced Duchess of Westminster, and has always been regarded as one of the loveliest English women of her time. Her baptismal name is Margaret, but previous to her marriage a dozen years or more ago to the then Prince Henry, of Pless, she was known as "Daisy" Cornwallis West. During the war, which made her an enemy alien, it was persistently whispered that the princess had been arrested as a spy and was a prisoner in the tower of London. But then, all sorts of unlikely people were confined in the tower, according to widely credited rumors. The princess' husband, Prince Pless, is now head of his family, and had it not been for events following the war, would have been ruling over a small state.

I have been exceedingly interested lately, by the way, in noticing the devotion that evidently exists between Princess Pless and her famous sister-in-law, Mrs. George Cornwallis West, better known to the general public as Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the actress. It will be remembered that "Mrs. Pat" (as she is generally called in the theatrical world) is the successor in name and marital status to Lady Randolph Churchill, who married Mr. George Cornwallis West in the early days of this century and divorced him about six years later. "Mrs. Pat" and "Lady Randolph" (or Mrs. George Cornwallis West, as she was then known) used to be devoted friends, and as both ladies are enthusiastic and brilliant musicians, they frequently gave chamber concerts at which they would play duets upon the piano very delightfully.

Ends in Discord.
It is to be presumed that Mr. George Cornwallis West turned over the pages of the famous actress music with considerable fervor. At any rate, his wife brought a suit for divorce against him, which was granted, and they separated. Lady Randolph gave up the name of Cornwallis West and publicly announced her return to her original married title by permission of the king, and within two years of her divorce made still another matrimonial venture, becoming the domestic partner of Mr. Montagu Porch, a most distinguished and charming gentleman, who, like Mr. George Cornwallis West, is many years the junior of his distinguished wife.

In the meantime, Mr. George Cornwallis West also sought and found another partner in the game of matrimony in the person of Mrs. Patrick Campbell, and now the game of general post, it is to be presumed, has been more or less permanently brought to a finish. At any rate, "Mrs. Pat" and Princess Pless are apparently on the most affectionate terms, and are to be seen together in theater boxes whenever a new play is produced.

The princess has one of her sons with her just now at her flat in William of Pless, is tall, fair and teutonic-looking. He seems to be exceedingly happy in England, although I am told that his elder brother has most definitely anti-English sympathies and feelings and lives with his father in the splendid old Schloss that was formerly the state residence of the reigning head of this German principality.

Peers Defended.
Dancing is beginning once more in earnest and London ball rooms, public and private, are commencing a very active campaign for the winter. I was one of a large party at the famous riverside dancing club, the Riviera, this week and among the most conspicuously graceful of the smart dancing women present was Lady Carbery, the wealthy South American whose sensational suit for divorce from her husband, the Baron Carbery, was one of the excitements of social England about ten months ago.

Lady Carbery brought special evidence to bear upon the cruelty to which her husband subjected her. Lord Carbery is an enthusiastic sportsman and he took Lady Carbery with him to East Africa on a big game shooting expedition. While indulging in his favorite sport he also conceived the idea of maltreating his wife. It was proved that he thrashed her with a sjambok (which I believe is an elephant whip), made her ride an untamed horse, tied her to a young elephant and performed many other acts of barbarism that were fully set forth in open court while she was pleading for the divorce that she eventually secured.

Evidently the trials which this attractive young woman has been through have not left conspicuous marks upon her physically, but I was surprised to learn that she is practically stone deaf. In order to obviate this defect (which is the direct result of her ill-treatment), Lady Carbery wears a neat little pair of tortoise shell ear trumpets attached by some almost invisible device to her ears. She wears her dark hair fluffed on either side of her face and the guitar instruments suggest the tiny horns of a young faun as they poke out ineffectively from her curls. She was wearing a wreath of small green grapes and leaves tied at the back of her head with a vivid green bow with long ends that floated below her shoulders and heightened the faun-like effect. Her gown was of white tulle covered with black lace that was bunched panner-wise upon her hips. Lady Carbery is an unusually fine dancer and has a pair of the most perfect little feet and ankles I have ever seen.

I fancy that most people who read newspapers the wide world over have heard of the beautiful Mrs. Bamberger, who is at the present time undergoing a trial for perjury arising out of her evidence in her recent divorce case. It has become quite "the thing" for fashionable London women to attend the court where the trial is taking place and listen to the various witnesses and to Mrs. Bamberger's own amazing evidence. Many people are surprised at so much acute curiosity being displayed among society people. But the reason, though not widely known, is not far to seek. Mrs. Bamberger is, or rather was, the wife of a nephew of Lord Reading, the famous statesman and jurist, who is lord chief justice of England and who came over to the stateside in a suit of ambassador propaganda. The greatest efforts have been made by Lord Reading and his family to keep their name out of the Bamberger case. So far they have been successful, but I am told that Lady Reading is in a condition of nervous anxiety that is almost painful regarding various details of the unfolding thrashed out with considerable attention to special episodes.

Holds Furniture Sale.
Lady Henry Grosvenor, who is aunt to the Duke of Westminster, is selling a wonderful collection of furniture at Quenby Hall, Leicester, during this month. The collection contains specimens of periods ranging from 1580 to 1800. There are some wonderful Jacobean and Carolean refectory tables that will prove most women the beauty and practical value of the narrow table as opposed to the oval or square one. Lady Henry also is disposing of some luxurious winged Queen Anne arm-chairs, and there is a William III. side table by Daniel Marot that has "six legs connected by four floral aprons, head-fortunate marriage that is now being by lyre-shaped capitals, and a bold rose and oval cornice moulding." I quote from the catalogue, which makes me think that, personally, this very elaborate side table would interest me not at all. At Quenby Hall all the bedrooms are given a special name, and one of these, the "Angel" bedroom, has a four-poster Jacobean bedstead, each post of which is shaped like an angel with folded wings. It is around the canopy at the top there are quotations from the Bible and the guardian of the bed. Mark, Luke and John carved in bold relief at each corner.

MANY WEIRD TREE LOTIONS MARKETING

Department of Agriculture Head Talks of Insecticide and "Remedies"
Imposed Upon Public.

BY DR. J. K. HAYWOOD,
Chairman Insecticide and Fungicide
Board, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Washington, November 13.—In the enforcement of the insecticide act the officials of the United States department of agriculture have had some wonderful and weird "remedies" brought to their attention.

A preparation sold as a remedy for all kinds of diseases of trees was found to consist of approximately 80 per cent table salt and the remainder consisted of equally "powerful" ingredients. This great "remedy" was sold by an "itinerant tree specialist" who "guaranteed to exterminate" tree diseases and naively informed his credulous victims that tree diseases were caused by uneven temperature and overproduction of wood which causes the sap to become concealed in the "arteries" of the trees.

He compared the treatment of tree diseases to the treatment of human diseases and consigned to the scrap-heap all the conclusions and results of scientific investigators, insisting that he was the discoverer of the only true method of treatment. And "this wonderful remedy" may be bought, ladies and gentlemen, for the modest and insignificant sum of only $3 per can, cash money.

Another "remarkable" preparation was offered to the poultryman for the guaranteed extermination of vermin in his flocks by the simple expedient of adding a few drops to the drinking water, which became effective through the pores of the chicken and thus killed the lice on its back. This was an interesting theory to the scientists of the department, since chickens have no pores. This seeming obstacle to the practical working of the remedy meant nothing at all in the life of its discoverer, who, without hesitation, denounced the department and impatiently pointed out the feather holes to prove his assertion that chickens did in fact have pores.

Favorite Scheme.
The treatment of diseased trees by the injection or inoculation method also seems to be a favorite of some "tree specialists." Cyanide capsules were used by one of these gentlemen in his "treatment" and many promising orchards were irreparably injured until the department got on his trail.

A combination of salt bricks with a little sulphur has been sold for destroying lice and ticks on cattle. "Simply put the brick in the pasture and let the cattle lick it and presto! away go the lice and ticks," so said the manufacturer, but the insecticide board of the department failed to agree with him and he is now "specializing" in some other treatment which is certain to remove shakels from the purses of his victims.

Apparently it is only necessary to devise some treatment which is simple and easy to administer and the silver-tongued fakers are able to "put it across." The department advises all purchasers to write for information regarding the demonstrated and established treatments which may require more time and labor, but which are known to be safe and the best available treatments. Carefully read the labels and see if the seller has dared to put in print the verbal promises he makes. If so, the department will get him if he doesn't watch out and if so he has made false and exorbitant claims.

The disinfectant which makes a strong odor, but which does not kill any germs, the insecticide or fungicide which is not effective against insects or diseases, or which positively injures the plants or crops. All of these things are receiving the attention of your Uncle Samuel who is endeavoring to prevent the billion and a half dollars of annual losses to crops and animals through the ravages of insects and disease.

GERMANY PROTESTS
COST OF U. S. ARMY
Berlin, November 13.—Herr Helfferich, speaking in the executive committee of the reichstag, declared that the American occupation of Rhine territory is costing Germany 32,000,000 marks a year for the maintenance of troops. He declared it "an impossible situation" to which the members of the executive committee assented.

THE WORK OF A WEEK.

Things have been moving fast during the past week toward the solution of the south's cotton problem.

The gravest feature of the situation is that of the stagnant market produced very largely by the inability of Europe to buy our cotton under reasonable credit conditions.

Europe will easily take 3,000,000 bales just as soon as financial arrangements are made so as to give it reasonable time in which to pay for them.

The bankers of the south have made wonderful progress in the movement to organize an export trade association whose function will be to start the flow of cotton abroad by extending the credit facilities that are absolutely necessary if we are to sell our cotton abroad.

At a meeting of the bankers of Atlanta held a few days ago, Robert F. Maddox told the story of the New Orleans meeting and of the enthusiasm with which the movement to finance such credits was launched.

Senator Hoke Smith explained the Edge act, passed at the last session of congress, which authorized national banks to take stock in a corporation whose object is to finance our foreign trade by doing the same thing that other countries have been doing all along, and yet which up to now the national banks of this country have not been permitted to do.

Banks in other sections of the country, taking prompt advantage of this act, are organizing associations to do the very thing for the industries of their respective sections, that this association is intended to do for the south.

The action of the Atlanta banks in subscribing so liberally to the stock of this association means that Georgia's pro rata participation of $1,500,000 is already practically guaranteed.

If the other states do as well, this $6,000,000 association, authorized to handle credits aggregating $60,000,000, will soon be under full headway and in time will be of service in moving the cotton crop which has just been gathered.

While the bankers have been hard at work helping solve the problem, the farmers and the community merchants and business men have not been idle.

A news dispatch in The Constitution a day or two ago told of the organization of a cotton warehouse corporation in Screven county, with enough funds to build warehouses to store every bale of cotton in that great cotton county.

Similar movements are under way in every part of the state and throughout the south.

The bankers are saying to the farmers and to the community business men—

"You go ahead and build the warehouses and we will attend to the matter of international credits."

The farmers and the small merchants are saying to the bankers: "That's fine! We will attend to the production and the warehousing and you are the ones to do the complicated financing involved in foreign trade. You will share the benefits equally with us."

And so it goes.

By such co-operation the cotton problem is being rapidly solved. More progress has been made than that end during the past few months than ever before.

Cotton will never market under reasonable and just conditions until the crop grown one year can be gradually put on the market, as needed, for the next year's consumption.

The old plan of dumping the whole cotton crop on the market at once has been ruinous, not only to the farmers but to every other interest dependent upon cotton as the basis of the general prosperity of this section.

The farmer has been compelled to sell when cotton was low, simply because under conditions which have always controlled the marketing of the cotton crop, he had no alternative than to sell when his cotton was ready for market.

Under the new system that is now being rapidly established throughout the cotton belt, the farmer can warehouse his cotton, and from his warehouse receipts can finance himself and his family without being dependent upon anyone and without mortgaging his soul to obtain his actual necessities.

Hereafter the cotton farmer is to feed his cotton from the great warehouse reservoirs just as the water that is impounded in the great irrigation and power reservoirs is supplied as it is needed.

Heretofore millions of horsepower has run to waste each year, frequently flooding the country and doing untold damage.

Then the dry season came and there was not enough water to supply the power to meet the demands of agriculture or of industry.

Now these waters are being stored in great reservoirs, impounding the winter rains in such quantities that abundant water is furnished to meet the requirements of the dry months.

And so it is with cotton.

Heretofore it has all come in with a rush, practically at one time, forcing the sacrifice of millions of dollars in value by those who produced it, simply because of the congested conditions under which they were forced to market it.

Under the new condition the warehouse sluices are to be opened from month to month, and the great reservoir is to supply agricultural and industrial demands in just such quantities, and at such times as needed.

There is no place in such a condition for the speculator.

The farmer will be able to get a fair price for his cotton the year round, and everybody will be the better for it.

So, with the bankers working on credits and with the farmers and the community merchants working on the construction of a great warehouse system affecting every cotton center in the south, our cotton problem is in a fair way to easy solution.

Let the good work go on!

FOR BETTER SCHOOLS.

As a result of the recent adoption of a constitutional amendment, giving authority accordingly, all Georgia counties are now under legal necessity of annually levying a special tax of from one to five mills on the dollar of assessable property valuation, the money to be used specifically for school purposes.

The amendment also empowers any city, town or school district in any county to levy additional taxation, if deemed advisable and desirable, at the option of the voters of such political division of the county.

Thus the schools of Georgia now have three distinct sources of revenue, two—state and county taxation—being certain and dependable; and the other—local city, town or school district special taxation—being optional with the voters of the community affected.

This measure was characterized by State Superintendent Brittain as "the most important educational law that has been before the people of Georgia since the constitutional convention in 1877."

It is a law that breathes new life into the schools of this state; it means additional, year-round substance for them, and its ratification by the people of Georgia by such a substantial majority is a demonstration of progress and public spirit on the part of the Georgia masses that is truly encouraging.

With this law in operation, the starvation of the public schools of Georgia—especially the rural schools, which are most in need of assistance and principally in whose behalf the law was promulgated—should soon be a dreary memory of the past, and Georgia should immediately begin to climb upward on the national scale of education.

FOR A WORTHY CAUSE.

A few days ago one of the boys' dormitories of the Berry school for mountain boys and girls, near Rome, was totally destroyed by fire.

Its loss was a heavy blow to the school.

This famous school is maintained largely by private subscriptions from philanthropic and high-minded Americans, who, in contributing to its support, are actuated by motives of generosity and a desire to help in the promotion of a most worthy movement.

Its patrons for the most part are young boys and girls who have limited, or no, financial means. And one of the most commendable features about the institution is that poverty is in no sense a barrier against the full enjoyment of the splendid educational and character-building opportunities whose door is open to poor but deserving boys of the mountain section of the state.

Its working capital is limited practically to the needs of the day, with no surplus endowment for the construction of new buildings or for the replacement of old, all of such expenditures of necessity being met by donations.

The burning of this dormitory has brought about what may be termed a crisis in the activities of the school, and the construction of a new building that will house 100 boys is a matter of imperative necessity.

The public is appealed to to help to this end; and it is to be hoped the response will be general and generous.

There is not a more worthy institution in the country than this. It is doing a wonderful work, and doing it in a way that makes the institution invaluable to the state and to Georgia citizenship.

DANGER IN OVERDOING.

In the movement to force a drastic observance of Sunday by law, now being seriously considered by the Methodist conference now in session in this city, there is grave danger of an anti-climax—of overdoing in the effort to do good, and of losing, rather than gaining, ground in the direction sought.

Right-thinking citizens generally will admit that church attendance should be more nearly universal than it is; that everybody ought to go to church on Sunday; that the churches should be more generously supported than they are.

But the day has passed when free-minded and free-living people can be forced into church, either by compulsory law or by law that forbids any form of activity on Sunday other than that of church-going.

The enactment of laws that, for instance, would forbid the running of interstate trains, or motoring, or indulgence in the usual forms of recreational activity, on Sunday, would have the effect of courting popular and of turning the sentiment of many people—even people who are devout church goers—against, rather than toward, the church; and the ultimate result would do more harm than good.

The American people resent infringement upon their liberty and, beyond the point of reason, they would rebel against drastic legislation of the kind suggested.

The world is living according to a vastly higher standard of morals today than ever in the past, and it is getting better all the time.

But the people of this country are not ready to revert to Puritanism.

People can not be driven into the church.

The good Methodist brethren who are proposing this drastic departure are unquestionably actuated only by the best of motives, but it is to be hoped that the conference will not be misled by their over-zeal into committing itself to the approval of a reactionary policy that might hurt the church.

CHURCHES LACK SUPPORT.

Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis delivered an address before the Congregational Ministers' union, in Chicago, the other day, in which he made the assertion that "the church is a failure, and thousands of preachers are leaving the ministry because they cannot pay their bills."

Such a statement coming from a man of Dr. Hillis' eminence and authentic knowledge of church affairs—knowledge gained from personal contact with inside conditions—would be startling, indeed, if it were meant to be taken as a literal statement of fact. But the famous Brooklyn pastor evidently meant that the church is a "failure" only from the standpoint of finance, for, he went on to say—

"The church itself has not broken down, but the people are not supporting it as they should. The churches are run by men who are not equal to the task and who refuse to support the ministry."

There is no doubt vastly more truth than rhetoric in what the good doctor says both as to the popular use that is being made of the church, and as to the inadequacy of the support accorded the average minister by board members who "are not equal to the task" of running the church's affairs.

Too many of us lose sight of the fact that the preacher is human, regardless of the fact that he may be inspired to serve as the agent of the Father; that he loves his wife and babies as other mortals love theirs, and that his first duty as a finite man and good citizen is to provide to the best of his capabilities for their physical, mental and cultural welfare.

To do that the preacher not only needs money, but he must have it. He is entitled to it, just as his loved ones are entitled to the benefit of the things that money alone can provide.

He is one of the most valuable public servants of his community; and a more considerate and liberal attitude toward him, demonstrated in a practical way, would be materially and spiritually helpful, not only to him and his, but to the community and society in general.

A SHAM "IMMORTAL."

The Constitution recently carried an Associated Press dispatch containing a list of names that had just been selected by vote of the senate of the University of New York for places in the university's Hall of Fame.

Among the five names chosen for assignment among the "immortals" was that of Dr. William Thomas Green Morton, of Massachusetts, the selection being made on the ground that Dr. Morton was the discoverer of anaesthesia by the use of sulphuric ether.

In a communication appearing elsewhere in this issue of The Constitution, Dr. Joseph Jacobs, prominent southern pharmacist, cites records that afford absolute proof that the distinction of being the discoverer of anaesthesia belongs, not to Dr. Morton, but to Dr. Crawford W. Long, of Georgia, and that Dr. Long performed an operation with the aid of ether anaesthesia, in his office at Jefferson, Ga., four years prior to the alleged discovery by Dr. Morton.

Dr. Jacobs, in his young manhood a student of pharmacy under Dr. Long, an associate with him in the drug business, and a lifelong friend and admirer of his, recently published a booklet in memory of this distinguished Georgian, entitled "Dr. Crawford W. Long, the Distinguished Physician-Pharmacist," in which is reproduced voluminous documentary proofs of Dr. Long's discovery and original application of this agent which is admittedly the greatest boon to suffering humanity that was ever evolved by human brain.

In designating Dr. Morton as an "American immortal," as the discoverer of anaesthesia, the senate of the University of New York has done a gross injustice to the name of a great American who is entitled to the honor.

The public has at least the right to know by what authority and by what manner of justification this misplaced award was made.

Years ago, as Dr. Jacobs points out in his communication and in his booklet, the general assembly of Georgia chose Dr. Long as one of two—the other being Alexander H. Stephens—to represent Georgia among the American immortals in the Hall of Statuary in the capitol building at Washington.

Nothing has as yet been done to materialize that action of the state legislature, in the way of placing either of those statues in the positions to which they have been voted.

The action of the senate of the New York university is a challenge to the Medical Association of Georgia to complete the work it has undertaken to raise the necessary fund for an enduring statue to this great Georgian boy, beyond all doubt, is entitled to a distinction which is about to be snatched away from his name and memory.

The best way to circumvent the doing of this injustice and to so eminently deserved is to put Dr. Long in the Statuary Hall of the capitol, and let that stand against the designation that has been made of the name of Dr. Morton in the other "hall of fame"—which is discredited by an action that reflects on the name of every person represented in it, for if all these "immortals" were selected with as little consideration of justice and fair play as in the instance of Dr. Morton, the aggregation will not stand the test of either truth or history.

Life in Decatur this fall seems to be just one durned election after another.

Whatever became of that widely heralded "strong drift to Cox?"

"Hark! From the tomb, a doleful sound!"—the tomb where Bryan's heart is.

No, Madame Housewife, that sugar has been freed from federal control doesn't mean that sugar is free—not by a jugful!

One thousand dollars a story is the building gratters' rake-off in New York; which, to the average impetuous writer of short fiction, would look like a Midas dream come true.

Victor Berger says the "woman vote" defeated him; thus does vindication for "the cause" continue to mount higher and higher.

The Troubled Dreamer

By FRANK L. STANTON.

When you're all stove up—when you're all home-bound,
 What's in the Darkness that's a-throwing things 'round?
 That jerks the pillars from the sleeper's head
 An' whisks the kiver from his dream-scared bed?
 O that's what a feller is wantin' for to know—
 Though he don't say nothin' when the Dark acts so!

"How long till Day?"

He's a-wantin' for to say,

"For the Dark warn't sent us

For to do that way?"

They's no more witches makin' of a flight,
 Ridin' on a broomstick through the screechy Night;
 An' the ole-time Haunts don't ha't no more,
 Rattlin' of the winders an' cryin' at the door;
 So, what's up, people; he's wantin' for to know?
 Strange dispensation when the Dark acts so!

"How long till Day?"

Is the word he'd say:

"The Dark warn't sent us

For to act that way?"

Come on, Mornin', with your blessed light!
 God make the Sun up, an' devil take the Night;
 When you seek for rest, an' no rest is found,
 Who tells the Darkness to be throwin' things 'round?
 Come on, Mornin'! for the Night's too long!
 Dark Wind, tune up for a mornin' song!

"How long till Day?"

O it's all to say!

"No Dark was sent us

For to act that way?"

Morton First Used Ether, Years After Discovery by Dr. Long

BY DR. JOSEPH JACOBS

Editor Constitution: Regarding the action of the senate of the University of New York in placing William Thomas Green Morton, D. D., of Massachusetts, among the "immortals," on the ground that he was the discoverer of anaesthesia, by the use of sulphuric ether, I am writing you to state that the discovery prior to 1846, when original affidavits now in existence, show that Dr. Crawford W. Long, of Georgia, actually used ether in a surgical operation in March, 1842.

Moreover, it is quite strange that a body of men could vote so conclusively for the honor of a man who was not the discoverer of anaesthesia, but who was a student of pharmacy under Dr. Long, an associate with him in the drug business, and a lifelong friend and admirer of his, recently published a booklet in memory of this distinguished Georgian, entitled "Dr. Crawford W. ## DEFENDING LAWLESSNESS

BY DR. M. ASHBY JONES

Gilbert K. Chesterton said during the war, "The world might some day be able to forgive the Germans for what they have done, but it will be impossible to forgive them for defending what they have done." We all instinctively recognize that there may be some extenuation for the wrongdoing of a man possessed by passion, or for the moment dominated by some over-mastering purpose. In such cases one often fails to see the full significance of his actions. But when a man calmly considers his conduct, if he shall still defend it, he not only assumes the full responsibility of his fault, but he practically declares that under the same circumstances he will repeat it.

Almost every man you meet to-day, even in a casual conversation, will express his condemnation of the epidemic of lawlessness which has spread throughout the land. The war with its inevitable reaction upon the human nervous system, is generally given as a reason. Certainly we are learning in many ways other than the tabulation of our national debt, the terrible cost of war. Perhaps after a while we may even rid ourselves of the popular fallacy that military discipline is a good school for the training of law-abiding citizens and see that it only teaches them to repress their emotions and to obey the force of government, robbing them of the habit of self-government.

THE SAFETY OF SOCIETY.

The necessity then for absolute and unyielding obedience to all laws does not lie in the fact that all laws are either wise or righteous. It is in the fact that the law is the basis of our safety and our freedom depends upon each man conforming to the law. It is in the agreement of us all to abide by the law, that we have the power of each to enforce the law, and to punish the lawbreaker.

Harding Must Fight for British in New League, Says Simonds

Great Britain Will Try To Salvage All Items Advantageous to Her

Simonds Declares Wilson League Was Greatly Influenced by English Brains, and That Harding Must Guard Against This Influence in Forming World Court.

BY FRANK H. SIMONDS

New York, November 13.—At the outset of any discussion of the European reactions to the presidential election in the United States it is essential to note the various positions of the several European powers toward the league of nations, itself. For obvious reasons the effect upon the various publics abroad is conditioned, first, upon their original attitude toward the project of the league, and secondly, upon their eventual attitude, determined by their necessities and resulting policy during the Paris conference.

Thus one must recognize in the beginning that the chief disappointment over what must be recognized in President-elect Harding's anti and post-election remarks upon the league and his decision to "scrap" the covenant will be British. Two reasons explain this, first, the covenant, the whole league of nations scheme, was in the main a British creation, which derived no more than its vaguest inspiration from President Wilson's views; second, that in the nature of things the league thus constructed in accordance with British notions and mainly by Britons, themselves, best answered British ideas of world association.

FRENCH DISAPPOINTMENT NOT SO KEEN.

By contrast, French disappointment does not in the least arise from any pride of authorship or enthusiasm for principles expressed in the league of nations. France had nothing to do with the framing of the covenant and never had the smallest enthusiasm for the idea of a league of nations as conceived by Mr. Wilson and as created by Lord Robert Cecil, General Smuts and the only less industrious British representative at Paris. The French submitted to the league, solely because they saw in it the only way to enlist the necessary support of the United States and retain the only less valuable aid of the British, who frankly indicated that for France to reject President Wilson's purposes would mean to destroy the Anglo-French alliance.

As for Italy, there never was even lip service by the Italian representatives at Paris to the league of nations covenant. Italy entered the world war only after she had made a definite contract with the nations in arms against Germany. That contract, the treaty of London of 1915, assured to her certain specific territorial rewards for participation; namely, the frontier of the Alps, to include southern Tyrol as well as the Adriatic district, Venetia Julia, that is Trieste and the Istrian shore, northern Dalmatia without Plume, but with many of the islands of the Adriatic littoral, a protectorate over Albania and the Aegean in Asia-Minor, including Smyrna.

At Paris Italy presented her contract, the note which had come due and on which she had given to her allies an enormous contribution in the shape of four great campaigns, which had brought instead of swift victory a long struggle, incidental defeat and disastrous invasion. The sole business of Orlando and Sonnino at Paris was to secure the fulfillment of the treaty. Italy proved favorable to Italian purposes, Italian demands were quite prepared to give equal favor to his. When, instead, Mr. Wilson disclosed unalterable hostility to almost all of Italian claims, Italy quit the conference and subsequently signed the treaty only under British pressure.

REAL ENTHUSIASM AT FIRST EVIDENCED.

Outside of the great powers there was at the outset real enthusiasm for the league of nations, not because of its altruistic and idealistic provisions, but because all the little states, many of them represented by very great men, saw in the league a guarantee and a physical, military guarantee of their integrity. On this point Mr. Wilson spoke often, but never more emphatically than in his speech of May 31, concerning the dispute between President Wilson and Senator Spencer, the enthusiasm of the former for the Missouri electorate and decided by that electorate in favor of Spencer.

But when President Wilson, in the Paris debates, joined with Lloyd-George in restricting Polish aspirations and manufacturing the hideous Danzig compromise, decided to Rumania her Bessarabian claims, which were warranted even under his own principles, insisted upon the right of the great powers to intervene on behalf of the minorities in the domestic affairs of the small, the enthusiasm of the land of Greece (denied western France), of Rumania, of Serbia, even of Czechoslovakia, began to cool. Rumania and Serbia followed Italy and quit the conference.

of the various continental nations were ruthlessly examined with reference to their record of lack of accord with the four great powers. More and more the British and American delegates came to work in complete accord. Every day the resentment of the continental nations mounted, but they stood at the side of the British in the presence of the combined financial, military and naval resources of the United States, which had emerged from the war with unshaken strength.

Now, once for all, it is essential for the American public to recognize that the British statesmanship will not, without having first exhausted the resources which it possesses, the resources which it has acquired in the past, and which it is now acquiring in the future, to turn away from its partnership with the United States and themselves, which rests upon a document framed by themselves, in the main, which already, at Paris, assured them of American recognition substantially all that they desire to obtain. The peace settlement and usefully interposed American vote, to all of the aspirations of the European neighbors which for moral or material reasons aroused their disapprobation.

PARTNERSHIP DESIRABLE, ENGLISHMEN THOUGHT.

I am not undertaking to assert that the British policy was totally dictated by selfish and material considerations. On the contrary, there was and there remains a very wide-spread feeling among the Englishmen that the partnership of the United States and Great Britain represents the best and most desirable benefit, a thing which is desirable in itself and best calculated to preserve the peace of the world. But this sentiment, this British liking for the United States, which it colored the whole surface of the waters at Paris, did not control, could not and cannot control, British policy as contrasted with the sentiment is cool, calculating. If Lloyd-George is mercenary, an opportunist, the ablest diplomat of the passing currents of public opinion in his own country, superior to any other statesman of his time, any other state whom he has encountered during the war or since, behind Lloyd-George lies the tradition and the fact of the ablest diplomacy in the world.

We may be certain then, that just as, at the moment when it was announced that President Wilson was coming to Europe and that his main purpose was to establish a league of nations, Lord Robert Cecil, General Smuts, Lord Eustace Percy and a score of other statesmen met out to frame the dictation of the league of nations which would satisfy the president and accord with British interests, an equally determined association of Britons are already at work seeking to perform the same service for President-elect Harding. And the main idea, after all, will be to save in the new document what was gained in the old. But what, beyond all else, did that document assure? In practice even more than in phrase it consolidated American relations with Great Britain in such a manner as to eliminate all chance of Anglo-American disputes. This was negative but not unimportant; in addition it guaranteed the United States with the British in almost every dispute between the British and continental nations, a proper peace settlement; it brought us, with British support, to the aid of Poland, a real outlet upon the sea, it encouraged Poland to stand against Italy on the Adriatic.

MORAL ARBITER, WILSON'S IDEA.

Insensibly Mr. Wilson was led to feel that he had become the moral arbiter of the world, and he flung himself with ever-growing enthusiasm against the statements of the various continental nations, great and small whose legitimate or illegitimate aspirations conflicted with his abstract principles. I wish to be quite fair in the statement of the case in perhaps a majority of instances Mr. Wilson's stand conformed with the facts in the case, I still believe, after all the Parisian debates in this country that his presence in Paris contributed materially to making the several settlements more moderate than they would otherwise have been.

But the difficulty always lay in the fact that in each specific instance the United States was hurled against a friendly state. We undertook to regulate the frontier of Poland and of Rumania, we tried to regulate the Italian claims, which they should not have and which we denied the Greeks Eastern Thracians, which they were entitled. Finally, we were compelled in the end through the president to undertake to establish our right to rule, by giving guarantees of the frontiers of the several states, whose aspirations or so-called rights for security or integrity we disappointed. Thus we gave France the treaty of alliance, which has not been ratified and we gave Rumania and Serbia the assurances of May 31, which, although denied, cannot be disproved.

We were thus involved, entangled in the whole welter of European disputes and the more we became entangled the closer became the association between Britain and the United States, both because Britain approved of our undertakings to regulate the frontiers of the several states, and because we in no instance undertook to exercise the British straining influence upon British desires which were no more nor less reasonable than those of Poland or France, Italy or Greece, but merely conflicted less obviously with Mr. Wilson's conception of the world, and more we became isolated from all other nations in Paris, who openly resented our interference in their hopes and, as we became isolated, Anglo-American solidarity quite naturally increased.

ENGLAND EMERGED ONLY GAINER.

From the Paris conference Great Britain emerges the only actual gainer, since speaking comparatively, what she desired she obtained unconditionally, while the profits of all her allies were contingent upon a variety of circumstances. This was in part due to the fact that the things the British desired were obtained by the war, namely, the destruction of the German rivalry on the sea, both in the case of the war and commercial rivalry, and the acquisition of most of the German colonies. Security was thus absolutely attained, whereas security of other states could in the nature of things be only problematical, while compensation for destructions suffered by continental states which had been invaded, was bound to be a matter of years.

But the second department of British policy, disclosed when the Paris conference had at last adjourned, the purpose to get Germany and Russia back on their feet, lacking the assistance of the United States, since President Wilson failed before congress and the country has so far made no progress. It has made no progress because inevitably interwoven with this British purpose was the necessity to reduce the demands made by France upon Germany, to force Poland to surrender to bolshevism, and, in general, while in no particular modifying British gains resulting from the common victory, to compel all the other victorious nations to make substantial sacrifices, or what seemed to them substantial sacrifices. I am aware that the main British contention with respect to the French claims against Germany is that only by reduction to reasonable limits can these claims result in any payments. But the French did not accept this view and may be entitled to their own view, at the least.

None the chief purpose of all continental diplomacy at the present moment, is and must remain for a long time, to enlist American support for their own views of what is a proper settlement in Europe and particularly with respect to Russia. Germany had been dependent upon to sway Mr. Wilson as he did in the matter of Danzig. But we quite shopped and the whole British policy shipwrecked against the solid resistance of France. There has been a deadlock ever since and the deadlock subsists, can only be broken, perhaps, by an American declaration in support of French or British policy. To prevent the former, to obtain the latter, this is the British policy heretofore. To this and British statesmen will seek to lead President-elect Harding and shape his conceptions of world association as contrasted with the league of nations. In other words the British effort must be to preserve of the league of nations, the fact, while making every concession to Mr. Harding's ideas as to the name of the substitute which he is to offer for President Wilson's league.

HARDING MAN TO BREAK DEADLOCK.

After all, the real question raised by the election results has but two aspects, the British and the French. At Paris we backed the British against the French and the British prevailed. When we came home a deadlock resulted. Both nations look eagerly to Mr. Harding in the hope he will break the deadlock in their favor. Mr. Harding chooses to intervene on behalf of either his intervention will be decisive. But, as a last word, it must be transparent that neither Great Britain nor France are primarily interested in an association of nations to preserve world peace, but to preserve an Anglo-American association which at Paris dominated world affairs to British satisfaction, while France seeks to obtain a Franco-American understanding which shall preserve the French the slender rewards of her sacrifices in the world war, now imperiled by the French policy.

Mr. Harding's policy discloses a desire to preserve the Anglo-American association which at Paris dominated world affairs to British satisfaction, while France seeks to obtain a Franco-American understanding which shall preserve the French the slender rewards of her sacrifices in the world war, now imperiled by the French policy. Mr. Harding's policy discloses a desire to preserve the Anglo-American association which at Paris dominated world affairs to British satisfaction, while France seeks to obtain a Franco-American understanding which shall preserve the French the slender rewards of her sacrifices in the world war, now imperiled by the French policy.

Thus far President-elect Harding in 1921 as for President Wilson in 1919-1920 the nominal, perhaps the actual dictatorship of Europe and for that matter of the world, is to be attained, provided only he is prepared to pay his way by American guarantee military, naval and financial and on these terms his association of nations will be quite as much European support if something less than the same amount of enthusiasm now in the die league of nations, now in Mr. Harding's phrase, "deceased."

But the course of the United States senate destroyed the guarantee, while as the United States withdrew from Europe, British policy more and more took the form of a demand for the revision of the treaty of Versailles downward, which amounted to a demand that veto French claims should be scaled down. Or, to put the thing more exactly, in French eyes it represented the demand that the French claims should be scaled down. Or, to put the thing more exactly, in French eyes it represented the demand that the French claims should be scaled down.

Now, the fall of President Wilson, in the recent election, as a mere matter of sentiment, excites general French satisfaction for the simple reason that Mr. Wilson was never sympathetic with France. He did not understand French sentiment, French history, French tradition. His refusal to go to the Versailles peace conference, as was explained for him, he desired to preserve a calm mind in dealing with the questions coming up at Paris, produced a profound impression, actually destroyed his prestige, in the main, Mr. Wilson disclosed all through the Paris conference standing with the British against France. Before he left France Mr. Wilson had lost all French confidence and established only a certain measure of French gratitude for the promptness with which he had demurred to French troops in 1918, after the British defeat of March and April and his league of nations promise, which had been approved only in so far as its fate would decide that of the Anglo-French-American treaty of guarantee.

Now, after election, French policy, French purpose is quite as apparent as British. France does not care one red cent about the league of nations qua league. France hoped, however, that the result of the election would lead to the preservation of the treaty of insurance, France hopes, and takes comfort in President-elect Harding's friendly words, and even more in his association with Mr. Herrick, forever loved in France because of his association with Mr. Harding, who had not only not significantly, extend to France that guarantee which Mr. Wilson offered but the senate failed to honor.

From the French point of view that guarantee was paid for in advance by France. French sacrifices on the Rhine, in the Sarre agreement, represent to the French mind the sacrifice of French security against new German attack and never would have been made, had not President-elect Harding changed that Anglo-French-American agreement, which has now shared the fate of the covenant of the league of nations, itself. French public opinion, the whole French people look to Mr. Harding hopefully, but their hope is comprehended in the statement that France desired the French support against new attacks, for which France paid President Wilson in advance.

FRANCE HOPING FOR SUPPORT.

One thing more France hopes passionately; namely, that in any new association of nations, such as Mr. Harding may seek to establish and for which France in advance offers her heartiest support, American policy, so far from joining with Britain in championing unpunished Germany and bolshevism, Russia, will stand with France in insisting upon the integrity of the treaty of Versailles, so far as the German terms are concerned and equally with France against recognition of the red regime of Russia, which means for France the definitive loss of the millions lent to Russia in past decades, the money of the peasants.

As for Germany, for patent reasons she welcomes the Wilson defeat, because it helps out the promise of ultimate American support against France, even against Britain. Germany at least hopes that we shall now proceed to lend our support to reducing the sums she has to pay for devastating France.

$100,000 LIBEL SUIT AGAINST NEW SENATOR

Chicago, November 13.—Dr. E. F. Ladd, newly elected United States senator from South Dakota, was served with the papers in a $100,000 libel suit on his arrival in Chicago last week.

He is charged with having libeled food manufacturers in calling products impure.

Dr. Ladd, the first Non-Partisan league senator, laughed.

"I have not gone to bed a single night for nearly twenty-five years without a libel suit hanging over my head," he said. He explained that, when he went to the North Dakota Agricultural college nearly twenty-five years ago as a chemistry instructor he made it a practice to analyze food products sold in the state and to publish his findings. Since that time, he said, he has been sued chronically and unsuccessfully.

"I bought three cans of strawberry jam in a country store one day and found it was artificially colored apple pulp, through which timothy seeds had been scattered to give a lifelike strawberry appearance. I planted those seeds and they grew into healthy hay in my laboratory." Senator-elect Ladd described himself as a "progressive republican" and said he would help the republicans in the senate to the best of his power, "if I am permitted."

He is president of the North Dakota Agricultural college.

JAPANESE CONSUL'S POLITICAL EFFORTS MAY BRING PROBE

Washington, November 13.—Alleged interference in the taking of the California anti-Japanese land law referendum, voted on Tuesday, on the part of Consul Oshima, of Japan, will be investigated by the state department, it is said by responsible officials.

Several citizens of Los Angeles, where Oshima is stationed, have already wired to the state department asking that his activities in combating the legislation be looked into. The department chiefs say that they have replied to these petitions asking that all the facts in the case be presented to them for review, in order that appropriate action may be decided on.

More Than Twenty Thousand People Carry Their Savings Account at The Atlanta National Bank

In the Heart of Atlanta—the Heart of the South.

On November 11, 1919 the Atlanta National Bank carried in its SAVINGS DEPARTMENT alone accounts to the number of 16,051.

On November 11, 1920 in this one department there were 20,052 accounts, or a gain in twelve months of 3,930 accounts.

A year ago the Atlanta National Savings Deposit amounted to $4,747,078.43. They now aggregate $5,885,319.43, a gain of $1,138,141.25.

This remarkable showing very clearly demonstrates two things:

One is that the people of Atlanta have the SAVINGS HABIT and that they have not spent their entire earnings while money was easy to get. They have not only received interest on their money, but have to spend or invest now, while the PURCHASING POWER of a dollar is much greater than it was a year ago.

The other is that during its FIFTY YEARS OF SERVICE the Atlanta National Bank has earned the complete confidence of the general public.

If you are not a depositor in the Savings Department of the Atlanta National Bank, we cordially invite you to open an account. We assure you EVERY CONVENIENCE, PLUS THE SECURITY offered by the entire resources of the bank, amounting to MORE THAN THIRTY MILLION DOLLARS.

HEART OF A BOY IS AN OPEN BOOK

Serious Counsel, Patience and Heart Interest in Boys' Ambitions Pay
Actual Dividends.

"Here boy!" took on a new significance to many business men after Miss Dorothea de Schweinitz, employment director of the White-William Foundation, spoke at the Rotary club weekly luncheon Wednesday. The Philadelphia Ledger, Miss de Schweinitz made it plain that a little more interest on the part of the employer toward the minor help would pay big dividends in the end.

"The size of the problem," said Miss de Schweinitz, "can be visualized when I say that 8,560 children left school in Philadelphia to go to work during the year from June, 1918, to June, 1919. They are all frisky young animals and most of them look on business or work as the thing you do after you leave school." As they have found that most schools are alike, they naturally think that all business is, too. They have no particular plans for the future, and those who have not been driven into business by home conditions have usually got a job because they didn't like school.

"They have nowhere to go for advice and it is a wonderful chance for you employers to do a great good by talking ambitions over with the youngsters that enter your employ. The average school teacher is pretty remote from business, and while they tell them a great deal about the 'office boy' legend, the average school teacher changes positions about five times in one year. Their reasons are all very much alike.

"One says, 'I got in a fight, another, 'I didn't like the boss,' and many similar stories, but the real truth is 50 per cent of the cases is that nobody paid any attention to the boy.

"It is not good for a boy to leave a business angry. These youngsters that have left a certain occupation because the boss did not take an interest in them form an incipient cause of labor unrest. It may be a fancied grievance, but the boy goes on in the world feeling that business did not keep its promise to him.

"All of the trouble, or at least a great deal of it, could be adjusted if some one in the business would only have an interview with their boys now and then, have patience with the uncertain temperament of youth, put a little responsibility on them that would all pay dividends in dollars and cents, and you would have a part in the making of future big business men.

INVENTORIES NOW ON 'MARKET' BASIS

Question Finally Decided by Government in Favor of Taxpayer — Permits
'Retail' System.

Modification of the present system of taking inventories, which will result in saving thousands of business houses, from partial or complete financial disaster, was announced last week by the treasury department.

The announcement, which came in the form of a memorandum from the committee on appeals and review, was as follows:

"The committee is in receipt of a request from the income tax unit that committee memorandum 38, of March 6, 1920, (ruling 13-20-84), be reconsidered. It is stated that as the memorandum now stands it is necessary in practically every case to refuse the taxpayer's request for permission to change the basis of valuation inventories from cost to cost or market, whichever is lower. Again, however, in many lines of industry market was above cost and inventories were consequently priced at cost.

"Cost or Market Permitted.

"The committee has given careful consideration to the question, and has reached the conclusion that in so many instances the taxpayer has had no real election, but has been forced to take his inventory on either basis at cost, and cost was lower than market, the taxpayer who for this reason has prior to this year had no real election, but who now desires to change to the basis of cost or market, whichever is lower, should be permitted to do so.

"The committee therefore recommends that memorandum No. 38 be modified to the extent that where it can be shown that market at the close of 1919 was above cost, the taxpayer may now elect to take his inventory upon a cost or market basis, whichever is lower, provided that such practice is consistently adhered to in the future.

"The memorandum in question stand so far as it applies to those cases where there was an opportunity to take inventories at a figure lower than cost, because market was lower than cost at the close of 1919, and consequently there was a real election to continue upon a cost basis."

Regulations 45 have been amended by insertion of article 1588 and 1589, under which formal permission to change the method of taking inventories by retail dry goods dealers is given. The treasury department is hereby amended by inserting article 1588, reading as follows:

"Article 1588. Inventories of Retail Dry Goods Dealers.

"(1) Retail dry goods dealers, who employ the retail method, which is essentially a 'cost' method of valuing inventories, will be permitted to make their returns upon that basis, provided (a), that the use of such method is designated upon the return; (b), that accurate accounts are kept; and (c), that such method be adhered to in subsequent years, unless a change is authorized by the commissioner. The 'retail method' consists in computing the 'cost' of goods on hand from the percentage or purchase mark-up and the 'retail' value of goods on hand.

"(2) A taxpayer employing the 'retail method' of valuing inventories shall maintain and present in proper form for the inspection of internal revenue officers, the accounts and records of each year, together with a schedule of all mark-downs in each department, and such mark-downs shall not be included in the computation of the retail value of goods on hand, unless the goods so marked down have been actually sold.

"(3) The following general plan of taking an inventory by the 'retail method' will, it is believed, be found readily adaptable to the requirements of most retail dry goods dealers:

"(a) The percentage of a purchase mark-up is computed as follows: The value of all merchandise, as received, is recorded by departments at two prices, (a) invoice cost plus transportation, and (b), original retail sale price. These cost and retail values are accumulated as recorded during the year. The total retail value minus the total cost value equals the total purchase mark-up, which, divided by the total retail value, gives the percentage of purchase mark-up.

"(b) The retail value of goods on hand is computed as follows: A record is kept of (a) the accounts of all sales at retail, (b), any variations from the inventory prices of the preceding year of goods carried over from that year, and (c), any variations from the original sale prices, such as subsequent mark-ups or mark-downs (note paragraph 2). The retail value of the opening inventory plus the retail value of the purchases (plus or minus the algebraic sum of all subsequent mark-ups, and mark-downs in the case of goods actually sold), minus the retail value of the sales, equals the retail value of goods carried over to the close of the taxable year and the retail value of the book inventory of goods on hand is adjusted accordingly.

"(c) The cost of goods on hand is computed by subtracting from 100 per cent the percentage of purchase mark-up, which gives the percentage of cost, and multiplying the retail value of goods on hand by such percentage of cost."

JEWELERS FAVOR TRADE ACCEPTANCE

Preference for This Paper in Dealings Expressed by Numerous Merchants.
Questionnaire Shows
One-Third of Industry
Using Acceptances.

Use of the trade acceptance has secured a substantial foothold in the jewelry industry, according to an analysis of a questionnaire sent to the members of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade by the American Acceptance Council. A full third of 300 and more concerns with whom the council has established correspondence report that they require trade acceptances from their customers, exclusive of 7 per cent who make only occasional use of the instrument in their sales, and half a dozen more who assert they are about to begin its use. Five others voluntarily state they are favorably considering its adoption.

An average based on eighty-six concerns reporting use of trade acceptances is approximately one and one-half months.

The results of the inquiry are further fortified by the fact that, according to F. C. Backus, secretary of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade, the files of that organization show names of members who use trade acceptance users not included in those replying to the council's inquiry.

Fifteen per cent of those reporting to the council as non-users take occasion to indicate that the trade acceptance will not apply in their cases because their terms are cash in general, and the retail trade in particular, be educated as rapidly as possible to the meaning and use of trade acceptances.

If to the users of trade acceptances be added those who have indicated their intention of using the method, more than half of the total number reporting to the council in general, and the retail trade in particular, be educated as rapidly as possible to the meaning and use of trade acceptances.

Proportionately to the number of responses to any given department of the jewelry industry concerned, of the largest number of givers of trade acceptances are jewelers. However, there are four times as many givers of trade acceptances as receivers. The latter are in lines reporting to the council among importers.

About 90 per cent of the responses were from manufacturers, 30 per cent from wholesalers, 15 per cent from importers, and 5 per cent from purveyors of materials and supplies used in the jewelry trades and the remainder unidentified as to department. Among these several classifications are a number of concerns engaged in the retail trade of the jewelry industry, such as silversmiths, optical goods and pens and pencils. As active members of the National Jewelers' Board of Trade they were included in the inquiry, also by reason of their actual relationship to the industry itself.

THE RETAILER AND LOWER PRICES

Among wholesale drygoods dealers there is considerable speculation as to how largely the recent reductions in standard merchandise will be passed on to the consumer by retailers.

Among wholesale drygoods dealers there is considerable speculation as to how largely the recent reductions in standard merchandise will be passed on to the consumer by retailers.

It is no secret that, in spite of the mark down sales, retailers still succeed in obtaining a good margin of profit. All of which points to an inflated condition of business that has grown up as a result of the abnormal demand. In other words, the public has had the matter largely in its own hands, for as long as it was willing to pay the prices, retailers have been willing to charge them. It has only been when the public has revolted that prices have fallen.

The reaction in prices is distinctly traceable to what was called the "overalls movement" of the early summer. To be sure, it did

TYPEWRITER COMPANY IN ARCADE QUARTERS

The American Writing Machine Company has moved from 45 North Pryor street to the Peachtree Arcade, and in making this change W. D. Fricks, local manager, is making for the first time in twenty years. When Mr. Fricks first went to the typewriter business in 1899 at the old location on Pryor street, the typewriter consumption in Atlanta was about one machine a month; now it is over 400 per month. This increase is due, according to Mr. Fricks, to the rapid growing of Atlanta, but to the rapidly increasing number of homes that now use typewriters. He says that means eventually a typewriter in every home, just the same as the kitchen range or the refrigerator.

Since 1917, when Mr. Fricks merged his business with that of the American Writing Machine Company and became local manager, he has brought the Atlanta office from the Peachtree Arcade to its present location in a list of seventeen branch offices outside of New York and three in New York City.

The typewriter business is indicative of the rapid growth of Atlanta as the great distributing point of the southeast.

ITCH!

A WARTIME ILL THAT'S SPREADING. HUNT'S SALVE CURES IT!

ITCH is the most common skin disease of the country. It is spreading over the country. This skin disease, history shows, has always preceded, followed wars and the concentration of armies. It was rampant during the Civil War and following that conflict. There was an epidemic of the Itch after the Spanish-American War. Now history is repeating itself after the great European struggle.

Returned soldiers and those with whom they come in contact will find a recognized remedy for the Itch in Hunt's Salve, commonly known as "Hunt's Itch Cure." Many a veteran of the late '90's will testify to its merits.

If directions are followed, HUNT'S SALVE will prove a never failing cure for all forms of the Itch, and your druggist will tell you so. He sells HUNT'S SALVE under a strict guarantee to refund the purchase price if it does not cure your Itch.

Madford, Oklahoma, man, among thousands who praise HUNT'S SALVE, says:

"Some people dislike to admit it, but I cured me after many other remedies had totally failed. One box completed the cure—the first application afforded wonderful relief. My advice to those who have a scratch, is to use Hunt's Salve."

Hunt's Salve is especially compounded for the treatment of Itch, Eczema, Ringworm, Tetter and other itching skin diseases, and is sold on our guarantee locally only.

PELLAGRA MISSISSIPPI BOY CURED

Doctors of Laurel and Hattiesburg, who waited on the son of J. T. Childers, gave him up to die. He had open sores on his hands and legs. His throat was inflamed and full of scabs. He suffered terrible pain in his stomach. But the boy's parents heard of Baughn's Pellagra Treatment and decided to try it. Soon after the treatment was started an improvement was noticed. The pain was relieved and the sores began to heal. In a few months the patient was completely cured.

If you suffer from pellagra as this boy did, by all means investigate Baughn's Pellagra Treatment. It was discovered by a big-hearted man living in Jasper, Ala., who devoted his life to the relief of pellagra among his neighbors. He is glad to help you. He has written a booklet on "Pellagra and How to Treat it," which we would like to send you. It will help you to get a cure in your case. ## GUARD AGAINST APPENDICITIS

Appendicitis is caused by poisons from decaying food in the bowels. Many people have a bowel movement every day, but the poisons are not moved and much old, stale matter stays in the system to ferment and cause trouble. There is a constant small passage in the center of the bowels which is covered with old, hard matter which sticks to the wall of the bowels and poisons the system for months. It is not enough to have a bowel movement every day. You must get it out and keep it out. Even if your bowels move slightly each day, it is not enough. You must have an occasional THOROUGH, complete cleansing to rid your system of all accumulated decaying matter.

COMPLETE SYSTEM CLEANSER.

The most COMPLETE system cleanser now is a mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine and ten other ingredients, put up in ready prepared form under the name of Adier-I-ka. This mixture is so thorough a bowel cleanser that it removes foul and poisonous matter which other cathartics or laxatives are unable to dislodge. It loosens and dissolves every matter sticking to the sides of the intestines, working without the least discomfort or trouble. It has only been when the public has revolted that prices have fallen.

The reaction in prices is distinctly traceable to what was called the "overalls movement" of the early summer. To be sure, it did

Around the World for Husbands

Startling Emigrations of Europe's Surplus Women Who Are Moving to Regions Where Surplus
Men Give New Chances for Romance.

WHERE are you going, my pretty maid?" "To find a husband, sir, she said." The startling fact is that, all of a sudden, as it were, it seems to be necessary for even the pretty maid sometimes to go 'round the world. She is doing it today. From the beginning of time one of the most important things in life has been the bringing of the Right Two together. "A big job!" exclaims civilization, raising its hands in despair. And the world goes on trying to solve the eternal problem.

There was trouble had enough when humanity took it up in small groups. The problem of the just right two was difficult enough then. But by and by it was discovered that groups couldn't be successfully paired off because the numbers of men and women were not equal. Men got themselves killed off in war. By and by, industry began to kill men rather recklessly. Moreover, more girls than boys were born. In China and other countries girl babies were killed off to preserve the balance, or because they were not so badly wanted—a horrible notion now fortunately disappearing. Anyway, the complexity of pairing became exceedingly complicated by uneven distribution. In primitive times when a tribe found itself with more men than women polyandry was invented—women had several husbands. When a tribe found itself with more women than men polygamy was invented. A preponderance of women over men being the most frequent situation, polygamy has been more frequent than its opposite.

In this very day polygamy is openly advocated in many countries of Europe. Even highly civilized France has found many advocates for it—with the birthrate as a main consideration.

It is quite safe to say, however, that the world will never again sanction a plurality of wives, and social philosophers have turned to other expedients. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle wants greater freedom of divorce laws, so that pairing that has failed may give the failed partners a freer chance to new unions. Getting down to practical considerations, Sir Conan says:

"There are 300,000 persons in Britain who are not allowed to marry. They are separated and not permitted to form new alliances. The result is that for two generations we shall lose in population about the same number as would cover all our losses in the great war. If we first allowed all the people to be divorced, and then allowed them to remarry, we could fill up the enormous gap in our population, besides making their lives happy and normal instead of miserable and morbid. We want also to deal with those who are separated not by law but by private agreement, because they are very often the most delicate-minded people, who shrink from publicity. None the less they may have good reasons for separation. These are the fathers and mothers of the future generation."

This will suggest the desperation of social observers who are concerned in preserving the balance of the world. And yet here is Lucile Pugh, an American lawyer, asking that marriage be made more difficult. "I approve," she says, "of publication of the bans a prescribed number of days in advance of the ceremony. And I believe that a bureau assuming the attitude of guardianship to investigate the character, moral, physical and mental, of the persons about to enter into marriage would be a great aid. I do not mean that I would restrict freedom of choice or action. I would have this simply as a protection for young people against their own impulsive desires. It would enable them to bring into use the quality of judgment rarely used in marriages among the very young."

Miss Pugh, of course, is thinking of communities where the balance of the sexes is normal, as in so many American communities, and she is thinking particularly of making better marriages rather than more of them.

Meanwhile, English girls have taken matters into their own hands. Instead of asking changed marriage laws they have looked squarely at the fact that there of American Soldiers.

are too many of them in England just now—hundreds of thousands too many—and they are undertaking to readjust the groupings on their own account. They are going away to places where future husbands are. The ship Tainui, flying the British flag, is now on its way to New Zealand carrying 200 British girls who will marry if they can find the right sort of husbands. It is "up to" New Zealand to prove that its surplus men are the right sort. Miss Ruth Mace, one of the passenger emigrants said, when the ship stopped at Norfolk, Va., in September: "There are few marriageable men in England." Miss Mace doesn't think very much of the attitude of mind observable in the few marriageable men that are left. "Their minds have undergone such a change," she says, "that a girl has to be very careful with whom she goes."

South Africa, too, is bidding for Europe's surplus of marriageable young women. From Cape Colony comes the announcement that homes and good husbands await the first thirty thousand whose migrations lead them to that part of the globe.

The war brought many of Europe's surplus women to America as brides of American soldiers. How much room there is for more of them is an interesting question. One thing is certain: Europe's surplus women are going forth to meet the surplus men of other parts of the globe. The most spectacular emigration history ever has seen is a result not only of a condition of distribution but a new sense of privilege on the part of the world's women. Though women are more cautious in making alliances than ever they were, they still wish to play their part in life and to play it amid fair conditions of choice—under conditions which do not force them to take a "second best."

Good Form, Health and Beauty

D.S.'S NEW AND OLD

By Mrs. Henry Symes

PERHAPS you have conjectured that a D. S. is in some vague way connected with a D. S. C. If you have, guess again! It is concerned with an institution whose origin is not quite so recent as that of the D. S. C. But in its day it enjoyed as much favor as a topic for popular conversation as did the D. S. C., which came along later. Both are now in evidence. But there the similarity between a D. S. C. and a debutante slouch must end.

What unthinkable crimes have been committed in this name, on debutante slouch!

It all started when some one, probably not a deb at all, conceived the idea of having in at the waistline instead of adhering to the good old erect posture and carriage. Old fashion drawings bear witness to the fact that gowns of a few seasons ago were designed upon grotesque figures (really human figures, only they were doing the deb slouch). And many of the peacock ally watchmen will have vivid memories of the D. S. as employed by a number of otherwise perfectly normal-looking young women.

But then the D. S., with its caved-in waistline and its pushed-out "tummy," had to give way to something new in D. S.'s. (Oh, of course, you may not have recognized it as such, for it crept into vogue so very naturally. But in retrospect it succeeds the first D. S. very naturally and logically.)

This new variation consisted in wearing one's chest out and carrying one's arms stretched out rather rigidly behind one. A slight improvement, perhaps, but rather ludicrous in its suggestion of a mechanical toy. And now opens another debutante season. Gracious, one cannot help wondering what will be the vogue in postures this year!

Perhaps shoulder blades and knees will be worn out. Paris seems to favor knees out. As for shoulder blades, they have been coming into prominence more and more. When chests are allowed to sink in, then shoulder blades will make their debut, you know.

It would be a rather fine thing to hark back a number of centuries and study the Greeks. This is the logical time to do just that, for we have come to the time when even fashion designers are preferring the uncorseted figure. Moderns are beginning to appreciate the beauty of the natural figure as the ancient Greeks did long centuries before them.

But the natural figure cannot be beautiful if it is not kept in good shape. The human figure approaches beauty only when it is held erect. It is much the same as a piece of paper, folded along definite creases, which every time it has been used has been folded along different lines. By and by it will be crumpled, and upon it will be the marks of all previous careless foldings. Don't depend on your corsets for beauty of figure! Depend on your memory. Then use it to remind you always to hold your figure erect, remembering only to hold up the chest and to keep the chin out, and the rest will take care of itself.

And, above all, use your common sense in order to keep you from indulging in such destructive influences upon a good figure as D. S.'s, whether new or old!

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

Beauty and health helps are free to every one. If you want a prompt reply, be sure to include a stamped, addressed envelope. Otherwise your query will have to wait its turn to be answered from the columns. All letters are absolutely confidential.

To Develop the Legs

Kindly print in your column exercises to develop the hips and the legs. Will you tell me also how to make the arms plump and firm? What will put flesh on the neck and expand the chest? I am 5 feet 9 inches tall and am 21 years old. What should I weigh?—Hendy.

A. I am printing exercises to fatten the hips, legs and neck. Rub your arms

once a day with cocoa butter. Deep breathing will make your chest expand. Practice it regularly. I am printing also some general suggestions to gain flesh which should help materially. You should weigh 125 pounds.

To Develop the Hips

Stand alternately on each foot, swing the free limb around in a circle from the hips, each time allowing it to go as far forward and backward as possible.

To Fatten the Legs

Exercise is the best possible method of fattening the legs. Long walks will soon develop results. A gymnastic rest, which is said to be a certain enabler for the lower limbs is to stand on one foot, and with the other leg held out as far as a right angle to the body as possible, try to touch the knee to the floor.

To Fatten the Neck

Blend the head slowly forward until the chin touches the sternum. Then slowly raise the head to its normal position. Repeat these movements until you feel tired. Then bend the head as far backward as possible. Then bend the head as far forward as possible. Another good position is to let the arms hang loosely at the side. Raise the shoulders as high as possible, then forward, down and backward, until a circle is formed. Continue this for a time and then reverse the motion. Do one every day for five or ten minutes.

Again, stand perfectly erect with the arms at the sides. Then, critically, imitating the lungs as the arms ascend. At the same time rise up on the tips of your toes and draw your head back, at the same time touching the backs of the hands overhead. As the arms slowly descend exhale from the lungs.

It is also well to massage the neck and shoulders well with cocoa butter.

Suggestions for Gaining Flesh

To gain flesh take plenty of sleep, eat eggs, butter, cream and fatty broths, potatoes, peas, beans, corn, carrots, parsnips, fish, dates, nuts and bananas. Under food that will not digest easily, and be careful to make sure everything you eat. Give up pickles, vinegar and all acids. Exercise daily in the open air and take plenty of sleep. Don't fret or worry, as this will keep one thin more than anything else. Cultivate an easy-going disposition if you possibly can.

Blackheads

Q. I have a rather fat face and am troubled with blackheads. Will you please tell me how to reduce my face and how to get rid of the blackheads?—Blue Eyes.

A. There is really nothing that will reduce a fat face other than a general reducing diet. If you are not too fat in other ways, I should not consider reducing. You should remember that a plump face is youthful and not at all undesirable.

Green Soap Treatment for Blackheads

Tincture of green soap..... 1 ounce
Distilled water..... 1 pint
Let the mixture stand on only a few moments, then wash off with hot water. If the green soap irritates the skin, as it sometimes will, use it every other day. Apply a cold cream.

Green soap may be purchased at any drug store. It is not a regular "cake soap," but is of about the consistency of custard.

Open each seed case with the point of a fine cambric needle. The hardest material must be pressed out. The empty shell of the plant should then be bathed with a little toilet vinegar and water, or with a very weak solution of carbolic acid and water. Sterilize the needle before using it by dipping into boiling water, as the use of any instrument, unless the skin as well as the needle is thoroughly cleaned, is always dangerous.

To Reduce the Legs

Q. Kindly tell me if there is any way to reduce my legs. I do a considerable amount of walking.—L. O. V.

A. Walking and exercises have a tendency to enlarge the calves of the legs, since they develop the muscles. If your legs are large because of fat, then the pomade printed below will help to reduce them.

Pomade to Reduce Fat

Boric acid..... 30 grains
Vaseline..... 15 ounces
Lanolin..... 15 ounces
Tincture of benzoin..... 15 drops

Make into a pomade and rub over the legs. You should abstain from food that is especially fattening—cereals, potatoes, corn, beans, etc. You should avoid sweets of all kinds.

Perspiring Hands

Q. Will you please print a remedy for perspiring hands? My hands perspire so badly that I am not able to wear kid gloves more than two or three times before they are ruined.—D. O. M.

A. Use the following lotion as directed.

Lotion for Profusely Perspiring Hands

Boric acid..... 30 grains
Salicylic acid..... 15 grains
Vaseline..... 15 ounces
Tincture of benzoin..... 15 drops

Put on the hands four or five times a day. Wipe the hands in warm water before using. If the lotion is heated, it will increase the acidity of the perspiration.

For Dandruff

Q. I shall appreciate it very much if you will print a good remedy for dandruff. Mine is a very bad case, and the remedy will have to be rather drastic.—T. O. M.

A. I am printing below a remedy for dandruff. Do not be discouraged if the dandruff does not all disappear in the course of a week or two. It will take more applications than that to show results.

To Remove Dandruff

Tincture of cantharides..... 1 ounce
Liquid ammonia..... 1 dram
Glycerine..... 1 ounce
Oil of thyme..... 15 drops
Rosemary oil..... 15 drops

Mix all together with 6 ounces of rose-water. Rub the scalp thoroughly with the preparation every day until the dandruff entirely disappears.

Cosmetic Gloves

Q. My hands are very rough and discolored from housework and I have come to the conclusion that the only thing for me to do is to use cosmetic gloves. Can you tell me just how to make them?—Lise.

To Make Cosmetic Gloves

Use soft, large leather gloves, three or four sizes too large. Turn them open and spread the inside with the following preparation, then sew the flapped seam up.

Cosmetic Glove Paste

Ground barley, the white of an egg, a teaspoonful of glycerine and 1 ounce of honey.

Correct Weight

Q. I am 22 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall and weigh 150 pounds. What is the correct weight for my age and height?

A. The correct weight for your age and height is 132 pounds. The following diet will help you to get rid of those extra eighteen pounds:

DIET TO REDUCE OBESITY

MAY EAT
Oysters, lobsters, frogs' legs, clams, soups of any kind without flour or fat thickening.

May not eat
Fish-fresh, salt or smoked of any kind cooked without fat or butter.
Lean meats: no ham, liver or pork.
Eggs—Any style, poached, shirred, one-let or dropped.

Vegetables—Potatoes, turnips, squash, carrots, string beans, onions, cabbage, peas, cauliflower, asparagus, salads, celery, watercress, pickles of any sort.
Bread made of gluten.
Coffee and tea. Water in any quantity should be taken except with meals.
Milk sparingly and liquor very moderately.

MAY NOT EAT
Sugar and all substances containing sugar (sweet cakes, ice cream, jellies, preserved fruits, etc.)
All fatty substances, oils, sardines, butter, cream, gravies, etc.
White bread, oatmeal and rice, potatoes, and all foods containing starch.
Sweet wines, ales and beer.

Chest in, sharp shoulder blades out—And that's the Deb Slouch in its latest guise!

To Fatten the Legs

Q. Please tell me what to do to fatten my legs. I have tried several treatments without results. Please tell me also the cause of the little white lumps which come on the face and what to do for them.—Vivian.

A. Carry out the following exercises regularly. In two or three months you should be able to notice results.

To Fatten the Legs

Exercise is the best possible method of fattening the legs. Long walks will soon develop results. A gymnastic rest, which is said to be a certain enabler for the lower limbs is to stand on one foot, and with the other leg held out as far as a right angle to the body as possible, try to touch the knee to the floor.

The small white concretions under the skin are really milia and come from the same causes as blackheads. They may be removed by pricking the cover with a sterile needle and pressing out the contents. They do not tend to recur so persistently as blackheads. Be careful of your diet. Do not eat too heavy or rich food and not too many sweets. Drink at least eight glasses of water a day, but none with meals. Exercise every day in the open air. Before going to bed at night, bathe your face with warm water and a good soap and then wash it with very cold water.

For Scant Eyebrows

Q. My eyebrows and eyelashes, altho dark enough, are very thin. Will you please tell me if there is any cream or lotion which will make them grow thicker?—Brigitte.

A. Apply the following ointment once a day. Do not be discouraged if there are no apparent results within a week or two, but give the remedy a fair chance to do its work. Regular application and patience will accomplish wonders.

Ointment for Scant Eyebrows
Mix the ointment. Apply to the eyebrows with a tiny toothbrush once a day until the growth is sufficiently stimulated. Then less often.

This ointment may be used for the eyelashes also. In this case it should be very carefully applied. It will irritate the eyes as any oil will, if it gets into them.

Oil of lavender..... 15 drops
Oil of rosemary..... 15 drops
Tincture of cantharides..... 5 drops

Cold Cream

Q. Will you please print the formula for a cold cream which can be made at home?—Mrs. O. B.

A. I am printing below a formula for a cold cream which is easily made.

Witch Hazel Cold Cream
White wax..... 1 ounce
Spermaceti..... 1 ounce
Oil of almonds..... 1 pint

Melt; pour into a mortar which has been heated by being immersed some time in boiling water. Very gradually add 2 ounces of rosewater and 1 ounce of witch hazel, and gradually stir the mixture until the emulsion is nearly cold.

This cream is particularly useful to heal sore or stretched skin.

Abdomen out and one hip high—Thus the original D. S. was done.

By Mrs. Chester Adams

Abdomen out and one hip high—Thus the original D. S. was done.

A complete debutante's "What's What" would contain just as many pages as many pages and be just as important as her "Who's Who." Of course, it is out of the question to touch upon all the important items which would appear in such a book because of the limited space at our command, so we will have to be content to cover just a few of the more important points.

First of all, there would be ten or a dozen pages about snobbery. Now, snobbery is of a very ancient origin. It was first practiced away back in the dim and distant past, when some fortunate woman by chance hit upon a little more graceful line for her dress of skins.

Perhaps her lord and master was a more skillful hunter and she could have a larger wardrobe than could the women whose husbands were not quite so skillful. You will observe that there was no greater merit in herself. That did not prevent her from considering herself just a trifle better than the others, however.

In spite of its ancient origin and the backing it has acquired through constant practice down the ages, snobbery is no longer considered good form in the most select and cultured society. The best people take pride in acquiring a broad-minded tolerance and a proper understanding of the other person's opinions.

You know you may be a snob in many ways. There are people who are even snobs about democracy. They think that the people who do not belong to the proletariat are no good and not to be tolerated. There is not much danger of your being that sort of a snob, of course; but beware of all sorts of snobbery.

I am sure this new book would contain a chapter about cattishness, that most annoying of female tendencies. Debutantes, as a rule, know nothing about the art of being a cat, but they are often precocious kittens, who soon grow up if they do not watch out. It is so easy to say that one wouldn't have dreamed that a fine young man like Hugh could have married HER, coming from the family he does! And then there are so many "refined ways" of showing HER that she is a rank outsider.

Do you think that seems like a harmless habit? Well, those cat scratches frequently hurt the person scratched, and the men and women whose opinions are really worth-while are apt to laugh and pity you.

Society has a "School for Scandal" which the debutante should be very careful not to attend. I say "careful" deliberately, for it is not so easy to keep out of this school, even when one tries one's very best to stay away. Almost every man and woman you meet will be a truant officer who makes it his or her business to take you back to the school. About the only way you will be able to keep away from it is always to have a chaperon with you when you are likely to meet any of the truant officers.

Your "What's What" will tell you to cultivate the faculty of decision. Learn to know your own mind and to rely upon your own judgment. If you have been guided heretofore by the other members of your family in your choice of clothes, in the use of your working and playing hours and in the choice of your friends, it is high time that you are beginning to decide some of those things for yourself. One young girl whose family made all her decisions grew up with absolutely no power of deciding for herself. She married a young man, divorced him, married him again, and now wants a second divorce, all because she never did know her own mind.

These are but a few of the more important points in the book which has not yet been written. Paste them in the front of your "Social Register," so that they may help you to become the social success you were meant to be.

SOLUTIONS TO SOCIAL PROBLEMS

Mrs. Adams welcomes the opportunity to give you a complete solution to your social problems. If you desire an immediate reply, or any hints concerning etiquette, be sure to include a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Queries with no stamped, addressed envelope enclosed will be answered thru the columns, but they must await their turn.

Invitations for a Second Marriage

Q. Is it ever correct for the invitations for a second marriage to be issued in the name of the bride's parents?—G. L. D.

A. The invitations for the second wedding may be issued correctly in the name of the bride's parents. In this case they should read:

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dash request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Mary, to Mr. John Smith.

on Wednesday, the twenty-seventh of October, at four o'clock, in St. James Church, New York.

Traveling Expenses of Attendants

Q. Is it customary for the bride or bridegroom to pay the expenses of attendants who are coming from another city?—D. T.

A. When attendants come from a distance for the wedding it is not expected that the expenses of the trip should be paid by the bride or bridegroom. They arrange for their own traveling accommodations. The bride and bridegroom, however, provide for their respective guests after they have arrived.

His Attentions Unwelcome

Q. I am 15 years old. Do you think I am too young to have love friends? There is a boy 22 years of age who comes to see me very often. My mother likes him, but I do not. My mother wants me to go out with him and makes dates for me. I do not like that. I think that he is too old and I hate him. All he thinks of is getting married, and when I tell him that I am too young he says that he knows girls who were married when they were 14. I have told him often that I hate him and never will like him, but still he comes to see me. Will you tell me whether I should go out with him or not? He almost kissed me one night and I slapped him.—A. Brunette.

A. You are quite right in thinking that you are too young to be married. Have you tried explaining to your mother just how much you dislike this young man? If she still insists that you see him, do as she wishes, but let the man see plainly that his attentions are annoying to you and that you are determined only for your mother's sake. Perhaps he will then see that there is no hope of your learning to like him, and will cease trying to see you. You are quite right in not allowing him to kiss you.

Wants More Than Friendship

I met a very nice young man this last summer. He is very nice to me sometimes and at other times treats me very indifferently. I am very fond of him and would like him to consider me more than a friend. Can you tell me how I can win his love? I have asked him to attend a party with me and he has accepted the invitation. Do you think I have done right in inviting him? Would it be better to treat him with indifference and stay away from him? He is six or seven years my senior and has been in France. Sometimes he seems so quiet that I am afraid of him. I am 19 years old and I think I understand what I am trying to do.—Blue.

A. I should certainly not be overnice to the man when he is pleased to treat you indifferently. You must not give him the impression that you are throwing yourself at his head, you know. Be friendly with him, but dignified and reserved. If he invites you to go to the theater or takes you out to dinner, then you may entertain him in turn, but do not take the initiative in too many cases. Go out with other young men, and this particular young man may find you more interesting. You know, men never appreciate a friendship which is too easy to obtain.

Acknowledging an Anniversary Gift

I expect to celebrate my twelfth wedding anniversary soon and know that I will receive many gifts, which will require a note of thanks in acknowledgment. I do not want the "thank you" notes to sound stilted, but I do want them to be correct. So I am asking you for a form so that I may know about what such a note should contain.—Mrs. W. L. L.

A. The contents of such a note depends, of course, upon the degree of intimacy between the parties and the nature of the gift. You will not go far wrong, however, if you will model your notes after the following:

Dear Mrs. Blank:
It was very good of you to remember me on our twelfth anniversary. The day was a very happy one. But now that it is past we are beginning to feel that we are indeed an old couple! Thank you, my dear, for your sweet gift and the kind thought that accompanied it. The leather table cover is exquisite.
Mr. Dash joins me in expressing his deep appreciation of your kindness. With all good wishes believe me,
JANET DASH.

HIS FRIEND AND HIS WIFE :

By

CHAPTER I.

Demobilized but not demoralized, Gilbert Carlton was taking a short holiday before going back into the maelstrom of Wall street. His year and a half in the army had done for him what all his schooling and all his memorable years at Harvard had failed to accomplish. Lean and fine, he had returned from six months in the trenches with the sense of responsibility that is achieved only by having been in command of men and the sense of discipline that is won only by the ability to take orders. How pleasant to be in the slackness of a sport shirt and white flannels once more! How delightful to put in two and a half rounds of golf a day and find that he had not lost his length and direction! How very enjoyable, being human, to be made something of a hero in the homes of his friends in the Quaker Hill colony, to be able to dilate upon the grit and pluck of the men of his regiment, and to have the intense satisfaction of knowing that he had done something to add to its honor and gallantry!

It was with an inarticulate gratitude for being alive and whole, and with an appreciation for the quiet charm and beauty of Quaker Hill never recognized before, that young Gilbert left the country club at four o'clock and swung down the road which led to his sister's pretty house. He would have preferred to play until it was too dark to see the ball, but something in Marjorie's eyes when she had mentioned the fact that Doris Clayton, Susan Kester and Nina Hopper were coming to tea had stuck in his memory. It was good to have a sister and good indeed to be able to hand around her teacups without the aid of a crutch or the strange inconvenience of a cork leg.

There was no laughter among the girls who were on the veranda grouped about the slim, white-clad figure of Mrs. Holbrook. Instead there was an undercurrent of excitement in their conversation and a sudden and intriguing silence as he came up. The pretty Mrs. Hopper, with her wide brown eyes and tip-tilted nose, and teeth that flashed like an electric advertisement, looked like the heroine of a play, with her hands clasped together and rather more than a charming ankle showing beneath a skirt of many stripes. Susan Kester, the two-years wife of a man who had dropped money-making to go into the Canadian expeditionary force at the outbreak of war, and whose everlasting place in the pocketmarked fields round Ypres was unidentified among all those small white crosses, had thrown herself also into a theatrical attitude; and Doris Clayton, with her black hair and eyes as blue as a violet, was leaning against one of the white pillars with a totally unusual expression of gravity.

Gilbert's little sister, whose contribution to the colony now consisted of two chubby children, stopped in the middle of a sentence and waved her hand. "How perfectly sweet of you!" she said. "But we're not having tea here, after all. We're all going around to try and cheer poor old Bob Meredith. We feel we must stand by him in the awful crisis he is going through. Will you come with us, Gilbert?"

The ex-lieutenant brought his hand up to the salute. "What you say goes," he replied. "But what's the row with Bob Meredith?"

Nina Hopper sprang to her feet. "What haven't you heard? My dear, it's too ghastly for any words."

Gilbert was mystified. He had not been home long enough to acquire all the gossip of the colony yet. He had, it is true, heard several underdone remarks on the golf course which led him to suppose that all was not going well in the Meredith home, but he had not endeavored to delve into the subject, having only a slight acquaintance with Bob and his beautiful wife. But here he was among women, and he knew that it would be unnecessary to ask any further questions. All he had to do was to prepare to receive the inevitable feminine barrage of details and explanations.

Simply because her voice was more penetrating than those of the other young women, and her indignation even greater, Marjorie Holbrook captured his ear. "Gilbert, listen," she said. "At this very moment Margaret Meredith is standing before the referee in New York as correspondent in the divorce suit brought by Daisy Osborn against Julian. It is the first scandal we've ever had in what the papers call the exclusive Quaker Hill colony. We've all known that Julian was pretty wild, and that Daisy has had a lot to put up with, but none of us ever dreamed or suspected that Maggie was capable of throwing her bonnet over the mill, especially as she had the luck to be married to such a splendid man as Bob Meredith. The whole thing has disrupted us all. We've just heard over the 'phone that the case is before the referee today, and that Bob—you can imagine with what agony and suspense—is waiting up by his house for the verdict; so that's why we're all going around to hold his hand."

"As he has only got two," said Gilbert, a little dryly, "perhaps I shall be in the way."

There was a volley of exclamations, protests and urgings, capped by the definite refusal of them all to go without him. "You are the only man in the place this afternoon," said Mrs. Kester, "and you must come. How would you feel under similar circumstances if Bob refused to give you his moral support?"

Gilbert showed a line of very perfect teeth. "I rather fancy," he said, "that I should be completely off the map if any woman who had married me were in such a mess as this. However, orders are orders. Lead the way, sis."

"Shall we have the car?" "It's only half a mile." "Yes, we may as well walk." Gilbert burst out laughing. "Why this mirth?" asked Nina Hopper.

Gilbert looked at pretty little Nina Hopper, her pearls gleaming on her fair skin, with a sudden touch of gravity. "I was thinking of a girl from San Francisco whose father wallows in millions, who walked 14 miles every day to the field hospital behind Chateau-Thierry, and who hadn't seen any other car except an ambulance for six solid months."

"We'll walk," said Nina, and that settled the point.

The little procession made its way down to the gates and out into a road patterned with the spots of sunlight which percolated through the overhanging branches of the trees on each side. In the pompous and elaborate language of the real estate agent, the Quaker Hill colony of Connecticut was not only the most exclusive of its kind but the most beautiful. The well-to-do younger set had built houses there designed by the best-known architects on sites which caught the silver gleam of the sound. Its roads were as smooth as a billiard table; its bridle-paths, winding along the edges of thick woods, were unique; its stone walls were neat and symmetrical, and its very rocks had about them a docility and a look of well-being which had not been achieved even by such a well-cultivated place as Greenwich, the millionaire village. Even the chickens, which sometimes wandered away from their coops, looked fatter and smarter than the domestic birds of other places; and the high hedges of privet, of which every garden boasted, seemed as though they had been trimmed and cut by barbers. As for the garages dotted down at respectful distances from the houses to which they belonged, they might very easily have been the summer homes of artists and literary men and such like people of erratic means but excellent taste. In fact, the flowery language of real estate pamphlets was fully justified in describing the charm and the beauty of Quaker Hill, where everybody knew everybody else, where the commuting husbands went into and came back from the city in a luxurious club car, where the children were driven to school in limousines and the servants taken to church in Fords utterly devoid of temperament.

While these typical nice people of this delightful colony made their way to the Meredith house, the discussion as to the dreadful crisis in the lives of two of its most popular members continued without interruption. Even Quaker Hill was got to their surprise, exempt from pain and tragedy, albeit as they considered it to be from all that was sordid and unhappy. At the bend of the road a car passed, and several hands were waved.

"There go the Petersons."

"And Eliza Mahan."

"And Frankie Mundy. I saw her white hair, young face and sympathetic smile. I bet anything we shall meet them at Bob's."

"Poor devil!" said Gilbert.

Nina Hopper, who had not forgotten his gentle snub, turned her brown eyes upon him.

"You've evidently lost the colony spirit," she said. "Don't you know that we all support each other, walk in and out of each other's houses freely, and that every door is open?"

Gilbert fell in step with her a little in advance of the others. "I never had it," he said. "Ever since I've been out of Harvard I have lived in New York. One can be alone in West Forty-fourth street more completely than on the desert of Sahara and can hide one's feelings more thoroughly in the swarm of Fifth Avenue than out on the golf stream."

Tell me something, why are we all now. Look, there's Bob waving to us. Come along. We must face it. I never imagined that Daisy Osborn must be going through a similar sort of hell and lives only a stone's throw away!"

Nina Hopper slanted her little head. "Yes," she said, "I suppose that does need a little explanation, but this is how we look at it: 'We all like Daisy; she's a perfect dear, thoroughly one of us and all that; but we don't think that she need have taken her troubles into the open market, so to speak. Julian is a naughty boy—that goes without saying. He's only been married three years, and for all his susceptibility, he couldn't find a prettier girl in the whole country than the one who married him. But just think of pulling herself together and hiding her excitement beneath a well-simulated expression of nonchalance, Gilbert's sister led the way, her colony spirit dominating her. The others, like geese on a village green, followed. It was a moment which put a distinct thrill in the lives of them all—except that of Gilbert, who had been surfeited with the sort of thrills which are accompanied with the roar of whist-bangs and the screech of Big Berthas."

CHAPTER II.

The Meredith house had been designed by a young and unknown architect. It was, therefore, something in the nature of an experiment, and unconventional in its lines. Long and low and white, with green jealousies, huge chimney-stacks and a roof line broken by many peaks, it wore a most comfortable and homely appearance, standing high up, bathed in sunlight. Rock gardens surrounded it, and everywhere as you approached it from the road there were groups of silver birches, slim and virginal, poplars straight and pointed, and willows weeping alone. Fat bushes of rhododendrons were jotted here and there on lawns as smooth-shaven as an actor's face after 3 o'clock. No one with a healthy mind would have imagined that under the roof of such a house there could be anything but peace and love, laughter and happiness, the merry voices of young children and the music of contentment.

Built as a present to his bride, every shingle had been placed upon it under the inspection of the man who had looked confidently forward to a life of blessedness within its walls and who had determined to make it the epitome of all that was best in him. There were no frowning doorways and shadowy places. Like its owner, the house was bold and clean and forthright and very cheerful. The trees all about it gave it an appearance of youth and newness—of a beginning begun well, to go on well. What a pity that already the shadow of disillusion hung over it. How sad to think that very soon it might fall into the hands of strangers.

"Bad luck," thought Gilbert, as all these things came to him on his way up the very perfect drive.

Bob Meredith came to meet them. His broadness was obviously false, and his affectation of high spirits as transparent as tissue paper. He turned to Gilbert, after a light welcome to each of the girls. "Hello, Carlton!" he sang out. "Thought you were playing golf. Come and try one of my cocktails—almost the last you will get before Chadbalays his hands on my cellars." He took Marjorie Holbrook's arm with an even greater effort of cheerfulness. "Come on in," he said, "and play hostess for me. There's quite a crowd here."

There was. The veranda gleamed with white frocks and was alive with the clatter of tongues.

Anna Hicks was there in a new hat which had been inspected, criticised and passed upon by every one. Keprice had met with general approval. Olive Rumsay, still self-conscious after the recent plucking of her eyebrows which made them permanently surprised, was sitting on the top step. Almost ruined by the movies, which had become a habit, she was quite certain that her attitude was Plectfordian and her expression that of Marguerite Clark. There also was Mrs. John Putnam Mundy, universally known as Frankie because her name was Frances and her remarks astoundingly honest and straight to the point. Every one knew that her hair which puts men in communication with the outer world, however isolated they may be, might now come the verdict of the case of Osborn vs. Osborn and Meredith. It was Frankie who restarted the conversation and kept it going until Meredith came back with his eyes flickering and a curious touch of color on his high cheekbones.

"Margaret is coming down with Julian," he said. "I don't know what's what's happened."

He went across to Daisy Osborn and laid his hand very gently on her shoulder. His silence was eloquent of sympathy and fellow-suffering, and the glance that she gave him stabbed the hearts of all the other women. It was an extraordinary moment, electrical in its drama—one which younger unmarried girls played up in order to divert the minds of Meredith and Daisy Osborn from the tragedy in which they were in a sort of way partners, he regretted his sarcasm.

Exactly to the moment Frankie rose, her mental calculation amazingly accurate. The car in which sat Julian and Margaret was at the foot of the hill two miles away. "Well," she said, "I must be going, or my cook will be playing 'Tiger, Tiger' with the gentleman from Cork who does the honor to look after my vegetables and cast a friendly eye over my rose garden."

There was a general and irresistible movement, a burst of cheer "So long!" the disappearance of the various automobiles, and the fading gleams of white frocks among the silver birches.

CHAPTER III.

Daisy Osborn alone stood to her guns, and there was a strange silence. "Bob," she said presently, no longer with any attempt to hide her feelings. "What do you think has happened?"

There was a deep sigh and a momentary shrug of the shoulders. "God knows," said Meredith. "They were found at that Baltimore hotel by your detectives. We can't get over that."

She got up and stood in front of him. "Do you blame me for what I did?"

"No, my dear."

"If there had been children, if there had been a little boy like Bob—"

Meredith shook his head. "Even then you would have been justified, I'm afraid. I wish, oh, how I wish I had been good enough to hold Margaret's love! It's all my fault. I must have been too anxious to make money for her. I forgot that she needed more of me than my business did. Coming home dog-tired every night made me a pretty rotten sort of companion. I see that now. Less money and more love—why don't they tell us that, these people who marry us when we're young?"

Daisy put her hand up to her heart, and a little string of tears made a rocession down her cheeks. "But Julian!" she said. "Julian! I loved him and did my best. It's very hard luck. Bob, I swear to you on my soul that if I had dreamt for a moment that Margaret was the woman, I would have done nothing. I would have let him off. Do you believe me?"

"Yes, my dear," he said. "Life's a very curious business, and I suppose we're given those shocks just to find out how much grit we've got. The thing isn't over yet. What are we going to do, you and I? You divorce Julian and begin again somehow or other; but Margaret is still my wife. Am I to set her free for Julian? Is that the thing to do?"

Daisy nodded. "What else?" she said. "Let them be happy, at any rate. There's no reason why all four of us should go crippled."

"Look!" said Daisy Osborn. "They're here."

Meredith looked, and what he saw gave him some comfort. With his hat well down over his eyes and his usually laughing mouth set tight, Julian was driving; and Margaret, strangely pale, was seated upright in the back of the car with her hands clasped together. There was no triumph in this return.

Bob tried to steady his voice. "Shall we meet them?" he asked.

"No," said Daisy, "I can't."

And so those two, who, according to evidence, had wandered together from the straight path, were ungreeted and received in silence.

With a quick, surprised glance at the woman whom he had not seen for several weeks, Julian Osborn got out, gave his hand to Margaret, and followed her up the steps of the veranda. Under his small mustache his lips wore an odd smile. He waited for Margaret to speak and stood, immaculate as usual, with the evening sun on his bare head.

Looking tired and curiously unmotional, and rather as though she had come from a shopping expedition, Margaret nodded to Daisy and turned to her husband. "How nice the place looks this evening!" she said. "I hope Bob has had his glass of milk."

She looked down at the small, joyous boy away in the distance wistfully, through a mist of sudden tears.

Meredith pushed a chair forward. "Will you have tea, or something?" he asked. "Cocktail, Julian?"

But the question remained unanswered.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

"God knows," said Meredith, "they were found at that Baltimore hotel by your detectives. We can't get over that."

sent every imagination flying off at a tangent. Margaret was coming down with Julian! Did that mean that the case had been dismissed, or had Margaret been proved guilty, and was Julian bringing her home to discuss a rearrangement which would mean the breaking up of two homes? Who could say? One fact stood out quite clearly. The call had come from New York, which meant that an hour and a half must be filled somehow before the car made its appearance. A long time with every nerve on edge.

Whatever the others intended to do made little difference to Frankie. Glancing at her wrist watch, she made up her mind to sit on the Meredith veranda just precisely until she could metaphorically see the car round the hill two miles away. She then intended to rise and go forth, followed by the procession of charming girls who would not dare remain behind, however urgent their curiosity.

A born leader, Frankie—with the white hair and the young face and the empty heart. No one would have imagined that a single cloud hung over that very cheerful house. Even Meredith joined in the general vivacity and badinage, and Daisy Osborn said more witty things to the square inch than ever before in her life. Away below in the garden, Bob Junior, a splendid little fellow in a white duck sailor suit, was playing at Indians with several other children, and his laughter floated up the air like rose petals. Poor little lad! Little he knew of the anguish that the sound of his voice brought to the man sitting on the sunny side of his house among those white-clad, laughing women who were perched on the veranda like fan-tailed pigeons.

To Gilbert Carlton, who watched all this with a sympathy which was made all the more keen and human from recent experiences, that hour was one he would never forget. Before the war he had been in the habit of making somewhat ribald jokes about the colony spirit, which seemed to him to stand for an utter lack of privacy and the impossibility of maintaining the necessary fourth wall which he considered to be the whole point in the running of a home. But as he watched the manner in which these young wives and still filled Gilbert with quiet amusement to see the way in which his sister and her friends greeted the woman whose nerve had filled them with a desire to coin new words. Nina kissed her, and Susan, not quite such a whole-hogger, gave her a very cordial "Hello, Daisy—how nice to see you!" And it was while the first round of tea and cocktails was being discussed that Bob Meredith, with his heart in an agony of pain and his life trembling on the verge of chaos, went across to the woman whose action had plunged him into trouble. "It's good of you to come, Daisy," he said.

"I knew you'd understand," she answered.

And they smiled bravely into each other's eyes—the one who was to lose a wife and the other a husband; and then, each recognizing the horror of the situation, they drifted among the little crowd which was doing its utmost to be merry and bright and to put as much eye-wash as they could manufacture over the crisis which affected them all. The colony spirit has much in its favor. It makes even women charitable toward each other—and what greater thing can be achieved than that?

Marjorie Holbrook was in the middle of a most amusing criticism of "Tiger, Tiger," to which she hung a pathetic dissertation in regard to cooks, when a maid, whose eyes were red with weeping, came out and said that Meredith was wanted on the 'phone. For a moment silence fell, and all eyes watched Meredith as he turned and went into the house with a kind of lurch. Over the wire

HER LIFE FOR A SECRET

"LADY, young, good-looking, required for delicate mission; perfectly legitimate; no experience necessary; extremely lucrative to right person. Reply Box 352X."

THIS provocative advertisement appeared in the Cairo newspapers a little over ten months ago.

Cairo is a city of mystery. There meet the Orient and the Occident. Lords, thieves, Bedouins, Pashas, Turks, salesmen, lung patients, Arabs, Generals, privates, tourists rich and Cook's tourists, desert sheikhs, famous beauties, decrepit Egyptian slaves, huge negroes, honeymooning couples, sightseeing American millionaires, eunuchs, black and white, veiled earthly hours, secret agents, Chinamen, all rub elbows unthinkingly in this most cosmopolitan of cities. From a wide street filled with cars, horses, thronged with fashionably dressed people you can in one minute find your way into a dirty, disreputable alleyway, littered with refuse, the overhanging houses nearly closing in overhead, where at one moment you may be responding to the lure of smiling, red-painted, perfect lips, and the next moment find a dagger in your back. There is found the most palatial hotel in the world, the most charming mosque, and there is that strangest of atmospheres, the acme of white civilization compounded with the unrestrained passions, the subtlety, the cunning of the East.

In this city Mrs. King found herself stranded. Rumor had it that her right to the Mrs. was slight, but she never took the trouble to deny it. Perhaps she was too busy seeking some means of replenishing her rapidly diminishing store of money.

Mrs. King was a beautiful woman. Or rather no. She was one of those women of dangerous seduction, in whom a certain quality of voluptuousness takes the place of beauty. She was probably a Frenchwoman from the South, but she might have been Italian. She was olive complexioned, of that color that only a Mediterranean sun can give, and sinuous as a snake. She was of a bizarre type, giving a strange appearance of Mongolian caste. Her eyes were dark and almost almond. Her mouth, fleshy and turned up at the corners, revealed beautiful white teeth, long and sharp like those of a young panther. At first sight instinct caused you to recoil, but almost immediately it was forgotten in the natural fascination of the woman.

When she read the strange advertisement in the Cairo newspaper Mrs. King's economic situation was at its lowest ebb. To her, therefore, it seemed a godsend. Here was a chance where her physical charms, her only asset in the world, might be of use to her. She answered immediately and next day received a request to ask for Mr. Martin at the lobby of Shepherd's Hotel that afternoon at 3 o'clock.

It was a sign of how straightened her circumstances were that she was there punctually. A small, dapper man, dark, of Jewish features, met her and after mutual introductions suggested that they take a walk.

They were in the square of Mehmet Ali before he spoke.

"Where do you come from?" he asked abruptly.

"It does not matter," she answered.

"What were you doing before you came here?"

"I was on the stage."

"How did you happen here?"

"I thought I was making a fool of a rich Englishman. Instead he made a fool of me."

"Hm! You seem to be just exactly what I want."

Once more after his terse dialogue there was silence. The man was considering her intently, apparently weighing her in the balance. Seemingly from pure habit he was taking her to the native quarter. In no time they found themselves in the/Sok Attarin, the bazaar of perfumes, a narrow alley, covered, hardly more than a tunnel. It was full of little shops, some not more than four feet by seven or eight each, with an old man sitting in the midst of jars. Yet every one of these closets, as they might almost be called, contained fortunes of incredible amounts.

"Mahomet the Prophet acknowledged that there were two things he loved on this earth—Women and Perfume. So since wine is forbidden by religious law, and the sale of human flesh by natural law, these dirty holes are the most aristocratic places in the East," suddenly burst forth Mr. Martin without warning.

His companion looked at him in astonishment. What did this have to do with the advertisement? But she kept silent. They had halted and were watching an old merchant making a nosegay for a huge, ugly negro slave. First he took a little piece of sponge. Round this he bound some tuberose buds, then round these a circle of jasmine. Round this he bound some petals of a red rose and once again a circle of jasmine. Then he took a green and gold phial, and from this he took one drop of a thick amber fluid with a glass rod and placed it on the sponge. The slave paying sufficient for a huge bouquet, tied the nosegay in his tarboosh so that it hung beside his nose, and marched off sniffing frenziedly and perfuming the whole street as he passed.

"Think of the paradox of this huge slave spending a week's wages on perfume," once more exclaimed Martin. "A strange country where perfume represent the acme of riches."

They resumed their walk back to civilization. After a while he began to explain. He belonged to one of the greatest perfumery companies in France. He was here in Cairo in an attempt to earn a reward of 100,000 francs which they had offered to any one who would give them the formulae of a famous perfume. The secret of this wonderful perfume was in the possession of an old Persian noble, Mirzad Shir, who had a large establishment in Cairo. From time to time when the perfume gave out he replenished his store, having different mixtures prepared by different perfumers, but going through the last and most important preparation in the secrecy of his own harem.

"Well?" asked the woman as he paused.

This harem was carefully guarded by eunuchs, explained Martin, and it was impossible for a man to enter it. So he was seeking a woman who might fulfil that part for him.

How could it be done, she questioned.

This was the proposition he set forth: The old Persian had one great desire, a common one in the East. He wanted a European woman in his harem. Martin's suggestion was this: That Mrs. King meet Mirzad Shir, vamp him, marry him (this carries no obligations worth mentioning), and being thus in a position that would place all the secrets of the harem at her disposal, find the formulae and escape from the harem and hand them to him. Upon this he would hand her 50,000 francs and see her safe as far as Marseilles.

At first the idea did not please Mrs. King very much. Marriage with a Persian and a stay of at least several weeks in his harem! Then came the thought of landing in France with 50,000 francs while at present she had barely sufficient money to reach Alexandria. It did not take her long to make up her mind. It was settled that Martin was to arrange the details that would land her into Mirzad Shir's harem. Then she was to be allowed one month to worm out his secret. After that, every night at midnight he would wait outside ready to aid her to escape.

Everything being settled so far, Martin set about his task. He went to the Persian and told him that he had a ward who, having caught sight of Mirzad Shir, had fallen in love with him and desired to enter his harem. Of course the old man was highly flattered, photographs were exchanged and on his expressing his willingness things began to move with satisfactory speed. Mirzad Shir insisted on everything being carried out on strict Mohammedan lines. He went to Martin's house and through a heavy curtain asked his future bride if she was willing to marry him and if so to fix the day of the Nika, the official betrothal. (Eastern women are never forced to marry against their will, perhaps because they are too fearful to refuse.) The months usually required to get the trousseau together were cut down to three short weeks. At the end of that time she was taken to Mirzad Shir's house, dressed after the Oriental fashion and heavily veiled. There was a great feast and then at last the old man approached her and begged her to raise her veil. This was a crucial moment. Her modesty would be judged by the resistance she put up against this, and when finally he saw her, if he was not satisfied, all that the Persian had to do was to say: "I divorce thee," and the whole thing was off. Everything went well, however, and after eventually overcoming her coyness with a beautiful pearl necklace, Mirzad Shir allowed himself to be completely fascinated when at last he gazed at her.

Life in the harem soon tired the worthy Mrs. Mirzad Shir. Her only companions were bathers, hairdressers, singers, perfume venders and eunuchs. Soon she came to realize the truth of the proverb: "Ti'n Nahar dabba, fi'l lell Chabba" (beast of burden by day, woman by night). The courtyards, the baths, the beautiful gardens, the luxurious divans, rugs, cushions, the huge mirrors palled on her, and within a week she found herself sitting at a latticed window from which she could see without being seen, changed into a perfect Oriental woman in the short time of seven days.

But she steeled herself to this and kept her object in mind. Of evenings, Mirzad Shir would come to watch his daughters dance, to hear them play soft stringed instruments and sing languorous and vague melodies that seemed borne in on the wind no one knew whence. Here our friend's stage training stood her in good stead, for she was able to perform dances entirely new to the old man.

One day when she had danced particularly well he asked her if she desired anything, for he wished to reward her for the pleasure she had given him. So, not without hesitations lest it be too soon, she broached the matter of the perfume, saying she had heard that he had the secret of a perfume the possession of which made him the equal of kings, and that she desired the gift of some made specially for herself.

To her joy the old man assented without difficulty. From that moment she spied on him every second, risking everything at times by passing into the selamluk or men's quarters. Finally one night she was rewarded by coming upon him and his chief eunuch in the act of completing the preparation of the perfume, and seeing him at the end hide the formulae in a secret drawer.

When presented with the perfume she feigned extreme joy and lavished caresses upon the old man. But she was merely biding her time. The month was not quite up. At last on the thirtieth day, just before midnight, she stole once more into the selamluk. Every fibre taut she crept into the room of her lord and master. Outwitting the black eunuchs had been hard enough, now she had to cheat Mirzad Shir. Cautiously she made her way toward the secret drawer. In her hand she had a diminutive derringer that she had smuggled in on her wedding day. On it she relied for the ultimate success of her undertaking. A few moments silence. Ah! there she was. Quickly her fingers flew seeking the button to open it. Suddenly she touched it, and the drawer flew open with a sharp sound that sent her heart in her mouth. Mirzad Shir turned in his sleep and her hand closed convulsively about her weapon.

Nothing! For a minute she stood motionless. Then once more she began to move. Quickly she gathered the papers in the drawer and thrust them in her bosom. Once more she began to move silently. She was just on a level with Mirzad Shir's couch when suddenly he sprang up and closed with her. For a second their two shadows strained convulsively, then there was a low report barely audible, and the man fell. Thinking no more of silence the woman rushed forth and more by good luck than anything else found herself quickly in the courtyard. At the gate she found two white eunuchs. One she shot to show she meant business, at which the other very speedily let her out. Then she shot him also and with almost superhuman strength pulled the heavy gate to.

She stood helplessly gazing about her, looking for Martin. Suddenly he appeared out of the shadows like a ghost.

Quickly he almost carried her to a large limousine. The motor was running and two seconds later they rolled away rapidly.

"We are safe," he said. "We are on our way to the canal and there we can catch a boat almost any hour. Why all the shooting?"

"Mirzad Shir caught me in his room opening his secret drawer and attacked me and . . . ah-h-h . . ."

Thinking she had just fainted he drove on. But as she had not recovered when they were out of the town he turned on the lights. The first thing he saw was the handle of a dagger projecting from her breast. Quickly he examined her. She was dead. He searched her. First he came across a parcel of jewels. There were pearls, diamonds, rubies, emeralds. Evidently Mrs. King-Mirzad Shir had intended to make more out of the affair than the 50,000 francs promised her.

"What would you have me do?" concluded Mr. Martin, who at the time he related this story to me was one of the most important officials in his company. "In a way I was responsible for her death, and yet what could I do. I took her out and laid her on the side of the road. She was found next day, buried, and her death remains to this day one of Cairo's mysteries."

They felt quite martial and looked over the tank with the air of colonels of the engineers. Korth, as the driver, had the pleasant duty of explaining matters to them. He drove them about in the noisy little land torpedo boat. He demonstrated the mechanism. He taught them the use of the machine guns. The girls were all greatly impressed with the demonstration. One was greatly impressed with the demonstrator. She was Frances Phelps. She talked a good deal with the young driver. Julia French any month of the year will show a batch of additions to the list.

One of the most recently famous is that of the beautiful daughter of the aristocratic French family who married Jack Geraghty, chauffeur. They eloped and lived happily for a while and talked far and wide of the honest, humble happiness that would be theirs. Recently the former Julia French returned to her mother's home, her romance blighted. She is thoroughly disillusioned. Even the child that she brought back with her could not make life with her chauffeur husband bearable.

There is the tale going around of a certain wealthy man, a man at the top of the commercial world, whose wife is a leader of society and who has carried on a highly sensational affair with the family chauffeur until a separation is inevitable.

Abroad, the Princess Alexandra Victoria of Germany, wife of Prince Au-the person who injured me. I take a vague dislike to that person instinctively. I don't know why. I carry no conscious memory of the cause. It is merely one of those unaccountable likes or dislikes which we all experience.

Or suppose a child learns greatly to like a certain individual. Then that child, although keeping no recollection of that person, may show a lifelong disposition to like people who resemble that person. In intense cases of this sort of thing we may find that strange and unaccountable phenomenon, love at first sight.

Now, take the case of a girl child among wealthy families. Who does she come in constant contact with? The maid, the butler, the cook, her parents, visitors—and the chauffeur. Of all these the chauffeur cuts the most conspicuous figure. He is uniformed, which most other people about are not. Uniformed attractively or not, he is strong,

Princess Alexandra Victoria of Germany, wife of Prince August William, fourth son of the ex-Kaiser, divorced her husband and eloped with Fritz Meyer, her chauffeur

Frances Phelps, daughter of an old and prominent New Jersey family scorned the suitors of her own station and married Arthur Korth a chauffeur, risking a $500,000 legacy

No more characteristic romance of the type can be brought forward than this latest instance which is the burden of our story.

They are of old stock and for generations have held large New Jersey estates.

The Phelps are of the élite. The most celebrated member of the family was the late wealthy William Walter Phelps, who was American Ambassador to Germany. His wife was the daughter of Joseph Sheffield, a magnate of New Haven. Their daughter married Franz von Rottenburg, a member of a noble German family. Following the entrance of the United States into the war, she returned to the name of Phelps, which name her children adopted. One of these children is Miss Frances Phelps, our eloping heiress.

The chauffeur of the romance is Arthur A. Korth, of Yonkers. That is all there is to be said about him, save that he is a good chauffeur and a good mechanic, which, assuredly, are excellent qualities, but are scarcely recognized in the Blue Book.

Frances Phelps is the athletic type of girl. She plays golf and tennis and has driven cars all her life. When the war came to the United States she enlisted in the Women's Motor Corps and drove so efficiently in the service that she was made a lieutenant. In the course of her war work she met Korth.

He had been a chauffeur and had enlisted. He had been put in the tank service. During one of the loan drives he was given charge of one of the small tanks, one of the "whippets," and he drove his ferocious little machine through cupation with the strong-bodied young driver of the tank. They gave her significant glances, and after they had gone they rallied her a bit.

It was no mere temporary war romance. With the return of both to civilian life their acquaintance continued. Miss Phelps visited the Korth home at regular intervals. The Korth family could not help seeing the drift of the wind. How did they regard the love of the heiress and their chauffeur son?

One day Frances Phelps announced to the mother, Mrs. Korth, that there was an engagement between young Korth and herself. The mother took the girl aside and talked to her seriously. The marriage should not take place, she said. It was not advisable. It would not end happily. The son was poor. The girl was rich. A long succession of failures told that the chauffeur-heiress type of romance held nothing in prospect but disappointment, disillusion and disaster. The girl should keep her head and catch hold of herself. She should suppress her love, forget the young mechanic and marry in her own moneyed class.

The girl replied that nothing would bend her from marrying young Korth. She knew that her family would disapprove the match. They knew nothing of her relations with the chauffeur. If she married him they would be furious. She probably would be disinherited. She knew all about the bad result usual to romances of the kind. But she did not care. She was determined on the marriage, and she would have it.

That was all. The couple continued to see each other. The girl's determination grew stronger than ever. A few days ago they said nothing to anybody, drove to a minister's and were married. They immediately took a train for Stockton, Cal., where Korth had secured a position. Before leaving the young bride telegraphed her mother.

The Phelps family did not take the affair kindly. A family council was called. The mother announced that she held no ill will toward her daughter, though she thought that she had made a disastrous mistake. Such marriages always turned out badly. This one would be no different. The family would wait for Frances to come home disillusioned. She would always be welcome in the old home if she came alone. The chauffeur husband was distinctly not wanted.

Meanwhile, the young couple are out in California, living as humble folk. How long will the heiress bear it? How long will their happiness last? The records of the innumerable chauffeur-heiress marriages do not promise much.

Here the question repeats itself: What is the explanation of the chauffeur-heiress marriage? The tendency of highly placed people to marry out of their class is a common and much remarked phenomenon. There is, to begin with, the wealthy man who marries a poor girl. In this stenographers, nurses and actresses share fortune about evenly, with actresses a little in the lead perhaps. The well known millionaire-chorus girl combination figures prominently here. In England it is even more a striking phenomenon than in America. The British upper class is distinguished not merely by wealth, but also by feudal titles. That accentuates one end of the contrasting union. And in England the rage of gilded lords to marry Gaiety girls has reached burlesque proportions.

Now, what the blond creature of the footlights is to the paterfamilias and his callow heir, the chauffeur is to madam, his wife, and his daughters. No other class of men elope with heiresses in any proportion approaching that to be boasted of by chauffeurs. They are the captors of heiresses par excellence. As has been said, there is a long line of instances to demonstrate this, and gust William Hohenzollern, the fourth son of the ex-Kaiser, and daughter of Prince Frederick, Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, has divorced her royal husband and married Fritz Meyer, a chauffeur. While she was one of the greatest princesses of Europe, she lost her head to the driver of her royal car and now rejoices that disaster and revolution have enabled her to renounce her titles and become Frau Meyer.

There are scores of cases each year which cry again and again of the strange fascination that the chauffeur holds over the daughters of wealthy aristocratic families. How to account for this?

There is a phase of the far-flung psychological speculations of the great new wizard of the mind, Dr. Sigmund Freud, which exerts singular meaning here. Freud is the creator of the much discussed science and art of psychoanalysis. He is a Viennese physician, whose treatment of hysterics and the study of hysteria has led him to the most startling beliefs in the realm of psychology. He stands as the great mind revealer of the day.

One of the things that Freud stresses is the immense influence of infantile impressions. He holds that the impressions that affect us in the earliest childhood, impressions of which we retain no conscious memory, exert the profoundest unconscious influence throughout our lives. Suppose that a scarcely more than an infant, in days which I cannot remember, some person does something to anger me or cause me to be afraid. I forget the incident. I forget the person. But unconsciously I retain some vague sort of memory. Later I meet a person who looks like and gives a great impression of strength. He is active. He drives the car, which makes a great impression on a child. He is the master of that swift, lunging, shining machine that dashes along the road and pulls up in front of the house with such an air. The mysteries of the driving mechanism are calculated to inspire the profoundest awe in a small child. He is the priest of these mysteries. To a little girl the chauffeur is a great man. He is one of the great impressions of her earlier days. He is the bravest masculine figure that she sees.

The girl grows up. She does not remember her impression of those early chauffeur worshiping times. They fade from her consciousness. But, if Freud's theory of infantile impressions be true, they linger deep in the unconscious. She carries from early childhood a deep, hidden hero ideal. In her conscious mind the chauffeur is no heroic figure. Her reasoning faculties would react violently against such a notion. But there subtly rises from the unconscious, when the moment arrives, the feelings and moods retained in the depths of the psychic—the chauffeur as the hero. When is the moment for this? It is a well known thing in psychology that the buried things in the mind arise in times of great emotional uprising, when the instincts rise up, when life rushes in a flood. This is falling-in-love time. The girl is caught by the primordial instinct to mate. A love ideal forms in her. It is the hero-chauffeur of her early childhood. She is unconscious of it, and it only manifests itself when one day she falls in love with a chauffeur.

Is this the explanation of the chauffeur Lochinvar?

Being the Tragical Tale of a Proper Beauty Who Had One Too Many Admirers.

JOANNA TOMS came of very respectable parents and was the top flower of the bunch, her mother always said. She had five sisters and four brothers, so it was a tidy sized bunch; but when Jack Toms fell off his horse and died of it, his children, that were not already out to work, had quickly to get about it. Because, with such a family, Jack never had much chance to put by a penny, though he made good money as huntsman to the Dart Vale Harriers for twenty seasons. But there it was: the pitcher went once too often to the well and in his middle age—a bit over 40—he came a bad purser, and two of his ribs pierced the poor man's lungs, and he languished from January till April and then went home.

Most of his children were earning their living by then, save the younger ones; and Joanna by rights did ought to have been out to work, for she was 18; but she was ever Jack's pet, and he contrived to have his will and kept her to home. I think it was because she was so pretty and favored him. For a handsome man than her father never crossed a horse. Clean cut, clean shaven, clean limbed, and clean every way, with dark curly hair, gray quick eyes, and a gracious way with him that won all hearts, high and low. In fact, the folk at his funeral surprised even his wife, and it was no small consolation to Mary Toms to see who was there, and the proper flower show of beautiful hot house stuff the quality sent. But a man who showed good spot for twenty years deserved such a funeral, and also the brave tombstone the Hunt put up over his grave.

Joanna favored her father—a bowerly maid with a gentle temper like him; and much in his pattern—modest and quiet and seemingly not alive to her good looks. She faced her first great sorrow pretty brave; but the world was a mighty different place for her when Jack died, and she weren't sorry to leave home and get away from a place haunted by her father.

There was one bright thing in her life, however, for she was tokened to a sailor boy and loved him very dear; but that was a secret, and Joanna had promised him faithfully not to tell about it till he came back home again and could make a home for her.

The Toms family lived at the lodge gates of Hope Chase, and when Farmer Turtle's lady offered to take Joanna, to be maid of all work at Four Ways, near Buckland, Mary Toms was glad, because the Turtles were goodly, prosperous people and well thought on; and it also meant that Joanna would always get home for a bit on her day out.

So she went—both glad and sorry—and about five months after fell out this very tragical tale. The Turtles were a small family—just Thomas Turtle and Alice his wife; and one daughter, tokened to the Rev. Blades, a Baptist minister at Ashburton; and one son, young Tom Turtle. His father being called Thomas, he was always called Tom—a very sharp young fellow and thought a bit stiff necked by his own generation, though held to be an example for it by his mother, who loved him better than anything in the world.

Young Tom helped his father, and Four Ways being a freehold, he meant to follow in his parent's footsteps. He was held a bit self-righteous for such a young man; but nobody ever found a fault against him, and then as admired his father and mother doubted not that, with years and experience, he'd grow so large minded as them. He was a fair, freckled man, very obstinate in opinion and a terror to the evil doer; but his sister, Susan, had a gentler sort of mind and more charity. They was all Primitive Baptists and the only thing as ever made them doubt about Joanna was that she belonged to the Church of England.

However, they hoped that with time and example she'd join their persuasion, and very like she might have, for the sake of pleasing them, for she took to them from the first, and praised the kindness of Mrs. Turtle and was proud of the friendship of Susan. For the girls were near of an age and the farmer's daughter found Joanna just such a one as she could care about. Joanna was quick minded and clever than Susan, and in a month the girls were grown to be great friends; and though, in a manner of speaking Mrs. Turtle felt her daughter was taking more to Joanna than might be seemly between the future wife of a Baptist minister and a maid of all work, yet she couldn't say anything, for she liked Joanna a lot herself and admired her good sense and her steady work and the way she looked at life. Mrs. Turtle was put about a little, however, because when she found the girl such a proper beauty, she had fears. In her experience then right down amazing pretty girls be troublesome, because the men won't leave 'em alone, and spoil 'em and turn their heads and give 'em wrong ideas. But Farmer Turtle didn't worry, because he said it weren't fair to doom a young creature for a beautiful face, and he'd known a properly lovely creature turn out very well more'n once.

"She's no giglet wench," he said. "She's self-respecting, so far as I can see, and though she's got a bit up her sleeve and hid from the elder generation, as all young things have, I wouldn't call her sly or up to no games. And as for Tom, if you're thinking of him, he haven't got no use for the females yet. He's too busy. In fact, he's a bit down on women so far as I can see, and I've never known him to say much in favor of 'em."

"Tis them that think they stand, be surest to fall, however," argued Mrs. Turtle. "and if she was the glad eye sort I'd send her going for future peace; but she ain't; I grant that. And Susan likes her and tells me that she don't seem particular interested in the males. She's had an offer or two, but turned 'em down."

"I be going to spare you, Joanna. Go now. Be out of my house in five minutes."

"Then you've no call to fret," he answered; and Mrs. Turtle, who thought well of her husband's judgment, ceased to trouble about Joanna's good looks. For she worked as well as the plainest.

Things went on very easy for a good bit and Joanna was content and happy, as her mother soon found. She liked the place and the people, and her spirits rose presently, for the most loving young creature can't mourn a good father forever. But then Mary Toms marked a gradual change and felt that a cloud came over Joanna now and then. She asked if anything was amiss and her girl declared there was not.

"They're all kindness alive," she said, "and I'd do anything in my power for any of 'em. All the same life's life, and it can be a bit difficult seemingly. Miss Susan has asked me to be bridesmaid when she's married next October, and she'll pay for the dress, she says; but I won't have that. 'Tis a great honor for me, and if her mother agrees, I must have a flame new hat and dress for certain."

"They'll miss her," he said. "Yes, they will—especially her father. She's to him same as I was to dear father myself. He puts her first. He's a thought afraid of his son; and not the only one. A terrible strong will Master Tom have got."

"I should have thought he'd be proud of such a son."

"So he is; but you can be proud of a thing and a thought feared of it, too. Look at horses."

"You ban't feared of him I should hope? No child of your father's was ever feared of anything on two legs, or four either."

"No—I ban't feared of him. I'm sorry for him."

"Why then? I'm sure he ain't sorry for himself."

"You never know. He's a curious young man and keeps himself out of sight of everybody but himself. He's got his secrets."

Her mother regarded Joanna very keenly. "D'you like him, or don't you?" she asked.

"Yes, I like him. He likes me, too."

"You be terrible careful, Joanna."

"I shall be."

"I'd be glad, in a way, if you was engaged to a good man. You'm wife old and very near so handsome for a woman as your father was for a man."

"Don't you feel no fear about me, mother. I want to be married to the right one some day."

When Joanna went back to Four Ways that night, Mrs. Turtle was in tribulation. "I've lost my brooch," she said. "The gold one with a lock of my mother's hair let in behind it. Look around sharp tomorrow, Joanna. 'Tis a very great treasure."

"So I will then. Where was you today—in the garden or in the village?"

"Neither. I've been making jam and scarce out of the house."

But a great hunt failed to find the brooch and Mrs. Turtle grew melancholy. Then, not a week later, if she didn't miss another trinket—a little silver chain that she wore Sundays and a little locket as hung on it, with a tiny photograph of her children when they was babies. She made a great outcry, and slowly but surely, began to fasten on Joanna—not to her face, but behind her back. Because there wasn't another soul indoors at Four Ways barring an old woman, up home near seventy, who'd been in the family for more than half a century and was like one of themselves. Farmer Turtle wouldn't hear it at first, and more would Susan, and more would young Tom Turtle. But then a thing happened to the young man himself, and he had to confess that he'd lost a very fine breast pin made of gold with a carbuncle set in it—a gift under his grandfather's will and an heirloom in the family. It was gone out of his room and, along with it, he'd also lost a silver cigarette case—a prize he'd took in a vegetable show for the best early potatoes two years back.

Joanna fretted as much as anybody under these disasters, and presently she began to see that with all the will to do otherwise, the family was beginning to feel uncomfortable about her. Nobody can say how she felt about it; but Susan warned her before the crash came that her parents were terrible uneasy in their minds; and when she did warn her, Susan said after, Joanna didn't flare up or nothing like that, but kept very quiet and only said that afore God she knew nothing about the lost treasures. And Susan most steadfastly believed her.

The sequel came all in a hurry on a September evening when the family was together and Mr. Turtle axed his son what was amiss; because that was another trouble and the young man had been glum and queer and unlike himself for a day or two. For the minute they'd put by their losses and, as Susan was going to be married next month, her wedding filled the air. But now young Tom told 'em bluntly that he'd missed two pounds in gold and two half crowns.

"If you must know that's what I'm fretting for—not for the money, but what it means. 'Twas on my table along of my watch three morning ago, I will swear," he said; "but I was in a hurry and a thought late for breakfast. So I pitched on my clothes, and came down, and left my watch and chain and money on my table. And when I went up later, my watch was there and the money was not; and the mischief be that nobody but Joanna Toms went in the room between the time I left it and the time I went back. She always does my room when I'm to breakfast."

"Then that brings things to a crisis," declared farmer. "We can't have no more of this, and I'll face her so soon as she comes in the house tonight. Nobody wants to find her guilty, God He knows; but 'tis time she saw the position that we've been too soft hearted to put before her. She must clear herself, because things can't go without hands, and what hands are there but hers?"

They didn't make no suggestions and presently Mr. Turtle said he knew what he'd do. But before he had time to tell them, Joanna came back from her afternoon out. Then Thomas Turtle called her into the kitchen before the family and spoke straight as to what had happened.

"Things have been getting a long sight too hot in this house, Joanna," he said, "and as a clever creature with plenty of wits, you know that as well as I do. Now there's only six souls in this house, and people's don't steal from themselves, so you can leave out Mrs. Turtle and me and Tom and Susan. And that leaves Jane Slocombe and you. Well, Jane's one of us—worked for my parents before me—and her good's ours and our good hers. She wouldn't take nothing. So we be all clear but you, my dear, and you've got to clear yourself, if you please, because nobody else can do it for you. We've all marked you was a good bit troubled of late, with something on your mind, and we've wondered why."

Then he mentioned his son's money. Joanna changed color and gave a bit of a gasp fronted like that afore 'em all. But she soon came to herself.

"I see 'tis terrible difficult, master," she said. "I've feared more'n once you was looking at me doubtful; so I'd best to go, I reckon. In fact me and mother talked it over today, and she thinks the same. And if Master Tom have lost money—but there 'tis. I'd best to go. In fact I was going to say the word to missus tomorrow."

"That's for you to decide," answered the farmer. "You swear afore God you've not took nothing, Joanna?"

"I do."

"Very well then. We want to believe you. But if you're innocent, then you'll be wifful to prove it."

"I can't prove it. I can only take my oath. I didn't touch anything. I'm my father's daughter, and that ought to be enough."

"So it ought. All the world know him. But the little you can do, Joanna, you did ought to do."

"And thankfully. But what can I do, Mr. Turtle?" she asked.

"You can do this," he answered. "You can let Mrs. Turtle search your pockets this minute; and then you can do one more thing."

Joanna flushed so red as a rose. Her lips shook and her eye flashed.

For reply she went to her missus, put her little handbag into her hands, and spoke.

"Search me, ma'am," she said.

And Alice Turtle done so.

There was nothing in her bag but a handkerchief, a key, and a small bottle of lavender water she'd just brought home from her mother; and there was nothing in her pockets but a bit from a newspaper—a bit of a rhyme she'd cut out, because she liked it. It was a hunting rhyme and minded her of her father.

"All very good so far as it goes, Joanna," said Mr. Turtle. "And now what might that key be?"

"The key of my box, master."

"Then you'll let my wife look in your box, if you please. You can trust her."

Again Joanna grew pretty hot.

"O my God! My father's daughter, to be thought—"

Her knees quivered under her; but whether 'twas shame of being suspected, or fear of being found out, none watching her could say. Susan stood up for her and protested against such a harsh deed, but Thomas Turtle told her to shut her mouth, for he was getting angered now. He said what was true enough, that if Joanna was innocent she needn't mind the search, and it would be no dishonor to her father's memory.

"I don't mind the search, master," she answered very quiet; "but there's a packet of letters in my box and they be private letters and I don't think you ought to look at 'em."

"That depends, Joanna," replied Mr. Turtle. "Be very sure I shan't read nothing. Your letters are your own; but, at a fearful time like this, you didn't ought to make no difficulties, in my opinion. If there's letters, a third party shall read 'em—not us. We'll take 'em to parson, or anybody you like to name above suspicion."

"They letters be from my lover," said Joanna quietly. "Take the key, ma'am, I'll hide here."

She sat crunched up. She'd gone pale as a dog's tooth by now; and farmer said afterwards that guilt was on her face if ever he seed it.

Young Tom went away then and out of doors. He'd got restless about it, and he confessed to Susan later that he feared for Joanna and couldn't stand and see her worsted. But Susan sat by her and took her hand and spoke kind words and told her not to cry. Though she was feared, too, because for all their confidences, Joanna had never said nothing to her about a lover.

Mrs. Turtle wasn't away ten minutes. Then she came down, blew out her candle, with never a word, went to the table, and set upon it her golden brooch, her silver chain and locket, young Tom's breast pin, and his money.

"Good God!" cried out Mr. Turtle, and he glared at the things as if they was a live serpent.

"Altogether at the bottom of her box under her shifts," said his wife. She was deadly pale, too, and breathing so deep as a cow. Susan gave a gasp and jumped up. Joanna screamed once and then went off in a faint and fell off her chair on the ground. If thunder could have brought her to, it would have done so, for Farmer Turtle was a fiery man, though a just one, and now, at this dreadful discovery, he let himself go and roared out what he thought about it.

Susan ministered to Joanna and fetched her round; and then young Tom came in again to hear the fatal news, and his father spoke like the trump of doom to the sinner. He thanked heaven as the poor fox hunter was took from the evil to come and hadn't lived to see his daughter a thief; and then, after a lot of fierce justice that fell like hail on the ears of the frantic woman, he inclined to mercy as his way always was.

"You're young yet, and for your sake," he said, "and for your mother's sake, and your father's memory, I be going to spare you, Joanna. I say this in the solemn words of the Savior of us all—I say, 'Go an' sin no more.' Go now—this instant minute, Joanna Toms. Be out of my house in five minutes, and I won't proceed against you. The awful wickedness you've done shall be hid in your heart and ours, and I pray God to have mercy upon you and turn your soul to righteousness before it's too late. And you can send for your box in the morning."

Then she spoke.

"I'll go," she said. "But I say here afore you all, and I'll swear to it in the name of my dead father, that I never touched one of them things, and I don't know more than you how they got in my box."

"I could wish for your peace and hope of heaven you'd take another line," replied her master, but she only shook her head. She was calm now and steadfast as a rock. Then she went up to her room, under the roof of Four Ways, took her packet of letters, and went straight away out of the farm without another word to any of 'em.

But the night work wasn't done with, for while the girl tramped home, with death in her heart, no doubt, Thomas Turtle debated on the matter.

To her parents' great astonishment, Susan stuck up for her ruined friend, and despite the glaring facts, vowed that Joanna never could have done it.

"'Tis beyond her nature," she said. "And I wouldn't believe it if an angel said she'd stole our things. She couldn't—she's not built to do it. There's a wicked plot hatched against her, for she couldn't tell a lie, or act a part. I never knew such a downright truthful girl in all my life."

"Then, if not her, what?" asked Mr. Turtle. "Who under this roof would seek to ruin her this way?"

But Susan couldn't tell.

"I'll never believe it. We've got her word," she answered. "And her word's her bond. And God will right her," she declared.

But Farmer was impatient at this, and who shall blame him? He thought he'd been uncommon Christian about it and gave it as his opinion that few would have acted so kindly as he had. They talked to no purpose and was just going to their beds, when old Nat Lucas, head man at Four Ways, came running in to 'em from his stable, where he slept over the stables. He was clad in his trousers and shirt and no more.

"God's goodness!" he said. "Us be afeel 'Tis the new ricks in the corner of Jacob's field, or else 'tis the cow byre down under." They ran to the door and there, sure enough, they see red fire blazing not half a mile off and lighting half the sky. The farm sloped down to Dart vale, and on the edge of the hill, where was Jacob's field—a five acre croft under wheat that year—rose up a great glare with flame flickering through it. The night was still and starless and the blaze arose steady out of the dark.

Farmer got into his boots so quick as he could, and Susan ran and roused her brother, who'd gone to bed, and Lucas called up another man that dwelt hard by. Then they went down to find the two brave wheat stacks, only piled a fortnight before, was both alight and burning to the heart.

They could do naught, for the fire had got a start of 'em and their buckets of water only turned to a puff of steam afore they reached the trouble. Indeed none durst go very near, for the heat was tremendous, and, even so, young Tom got his mustache very near burned off and Nat Lucas was singed, from his scant thatch to his knee, all down one side.

I don't think in the full flush of the fight, nor yet after, that anybody ever connected Joanna with their great disaster. Certainly if any heart harbored the thought, it was on no lip till other things happened; but at cocklight Farmer Turtle went down to his burned out corn ricks, and Nat Lucas with him, and it was Nat, poking about in the char, as found what threw a cruel, ugly light on the job. For he come across a piece of paper half burned with writing upon it, and he also picked up a handkercher, and he gave them to Thomas Turtle.

Farmer looked at 'em, then put 'em in his pocket and stood like a stone man staring at the rising sun. He could hardly believe his own eyes; but there weren't a shadow of doubt, and, after he'd sent Nat off to Lower Town for the police, he went in his house place and called his wife and put the handkercher in her hand.

She looked at it and answered.

"One belonging to Joanna Toms. There's 'J. T.' worked in the corner. Susan gave her six for her birthday last July."

"And read what be on this scrap of paper, mother, please."

Mrs. Turtle took the burned sheet and read so much as was left to read.

"My darling Jo: I may get home a bit after Christmas and then with luck it's—"

"Turn over," said Mr. Turtle.

His wife done so and read:

"No more sea for me then, but farming and a cottage and Mrs. Joanna Truscott. Then we'll—"

"Found alongside where the stacks was," said Farmer. "That's how I've been paid for my mercy. But now 'tis all over and she'll go where she belongs—wicked, young devil."

And that night Joanna slept in clink at Ashburton lockup.

She stood her trial at the Assizes and the case went against her from the first. Everything came out, of course, and to them skilled in such affairs, who only look at the facts and don't take no count of human character, there could be but one end to it. She said, so far as the things in her box were concerned, that she knew naught about 'em and had never put 'em there; while, as to the stacks, she could only swear that she knew naught about 'em neither. She said that when she come to look at her lover's letters one, the last, was missing from her parcel, and, as for the handkercher, she said she'd never used any of 'em, but kept 'em stored among her treasures as being too good to use, and for that matter the other five was found in her box, and they had not been used. Her mother took her oath that Joanna came home, on the night she was sent off from Four Ways, by 11 o'clock, and Nat Lucas swore he'd first caught sight of the fire through the little window in his sleeping place at a bit after 10, so the time fitted exactly right, and nobody in his senses ever doubted that she'd gone off in her rage and set fire to the ricks on her way home. It was a simple, everyday sort of arson, according to the law, with everything in its place, all very orderly and according to human nature and no mystery anywhere. But arson is a very serious business, as the culprit found, for she got three years and no sympathy from anybody on earth but her mother and Susan Turtle.

The poor girl vanished accordingly, and when Bob Truscott came home from sea after the New Year and went first thing to the lodge where Mrs. Toms still dwelt, he didn't surprise her by no means so much as she surprised him. 'Twas a very cruel shock for

An Intimate Close-Up of Soldier Recruits

After They Come to Know Their Red Cross

Word Glimpse of World's Greatest Institution For Public Welfare, Civilian Relief and Service to Humanity

By James W. Logan

Red Cross is playing a truly wonderful part in the building and molding of Uncle Sam's new army of peace. True enough, it is not even remotely associated with such first essentials as enlistment and recruit work, but once a fellow places his name on the dotted line, he becomes an integral part of Red Cross service in the army and in the homes of the men who make up the army, the recipient always of things good for him and for him to have, and ultimately becoming more often than otherwise, an active and very useful aid in spreading the gospel of real service to his fellows.

And one of the impressive things about Red Cross army work is the perfect functioning of all co-ordinate branches, no fuss, feathers or red tape, but just a smooth-working cohesive body toward which the war recruit gravitates as naturally as water flows down hill, not because he personally knows a thing in the world about Red Cross and its purposes, but on account of the fact that he's as "homesome as can be" and somebody had told him what "Red Cross would do for a fellow."

Just a little while ago it was my good fortune to spend a day and a night at Fort Oglethorpe, a guest of Red Cross headquarters at that point. There were a lot of things, more than can be recounted, that forced themselves most agreeably upon me, yet the outstanding features was contained in that highly expressive but often ambiguous and misused word, "atmosphere." You feel rather than see it, outside and inside the big headquarters building, in the bright, laughing face of every man back of them, in the sparkle of the eye, in quip and jest that is stripped of the rude and vulgar, in the deferential yet democratic esteem and affection these boys and men, then in the make of their faces, manifested for those who had brought so much that is good, so much that is better, into their lives. The atmosphere was clean, wholesome, invigorating, the very finest I ever encountered.

Army quarters were less than a stone's throw away, yet the moment these army boys, whether recruit or ex-soldier, crossed the threshold of Red Cross headquarters, it was a thousand miles off, utterly forgotten in the joy of the living now.

Arrival of Recruits.
Taking it month in and month out something like 1,200 boys come to arrive at Fort Oglethorpe each month, the daily average ranging from forty to eighty. With their reception, induction into and training in the army this story has nothing whatever to do. I am dealing solely with an army auxiliary that is not paid by government for work performed, but which army heads are not without a hearty part with and which post officers literally swear by as an institution of potential worth.

As often daily as the recruits reach the post some Red Cross representatives are at the recruit depot to bid them welcome, and to invite them to make Red Cross home their home. If there is anything more chilling or depressing to a raw, half-formed and wholly unsophisticated youth than the machine-like reception of a new recruit at an army receiving post, I am unable to imagine it. While unheralded in the curriculum of army life the rigidity of discipline is as necessary as the powder that sends the shot on its mission of destruction. But Red Cross unobtrusively and in a wholly helpful way removes much of this feeling and entirely eliminates that very natural panicky feeling. Every recruit is urged to visit the Red Cross home, and, believe me, he does. The moment a recruit receives his "olive drab" his civilian clothes are taken in hand and either dispatched to his home or sold. Formerly the "clothes shark" found rich returns in the petty larceny buying for the proverbial song these cast-off clothes. Red Cross has stopped this, and the men now receive, if not the full, at least a compensatory value for all they have to sell. If they have valuables of any sort the men are advised to either place them in the custody of Red Cross or send them home, preferably the latter.

Doing "Little" Things.
Did you ever mentally halt and think of the conspicuous part little things play in our lives? They far outnumber the really big things and actually are the creators of closer fellowship, cementing brotherly love, kindred the walls of memory with rare thrills of hungry delight every time we pull back the curtains of the past. Yes, the little things count big.

Pens, ink, paper, envelopes free, and if you haven't two pennies for a stamp, that also is free. And there are comfortable tables and easy chairs to further the labor of love in writing the "folks back home." If you have a boy at Oglethorpe or any other post, ask him what this little service and attention mean to him, and also the mailing of his letters and likewise the proper care and handling of all mail sent in the care of Red Cross to him.

In ways that are not compelling, but are gently persuasive, all men are urged to write home, not just "once in a while," but at least every week. As might be expected in so large a body of men there are some recalcitrant and rebellious spirits, men and boys who want to show "father and mother and the folks" that they can be as free and independent as anybody. But it is not long before most of these boys feel the urge and need of intimate touch with affairs that have gone before. Then they write.

Value of Motion Pictures.
Three times each week, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday, moving pictures are shown in the big assembly room at the Red Cross home. It has a seating capacity of more than 500 and large packing possibilities. And it is crowded to the limit every exhibition night. Incidentally the pictures are open to civilians and there are always a few women and children present.

While these pictures furnish necessary relaxation and amusement the screen efforts of Red Cross travel along educational lines with gratifying and surprising results. Slides are shown urging the men to write home and telling why they should write home. And they are told what constitutes the proper use of money, and likewise provided with the opportunity to do so, that Red Cross will receipt for such sums as they desire to put aside, place it in the bank and return upon demand.

The value of this service is better understood when I say that since May Red Cross has received from enlisted men more than $7,000, which otherwise would have gone in the "seven-come-eleven" game, or had whiskey or for more serious dissolute purposes. In this connection I want to say that if Red Cross had done nothing else the physical cost of their labors would have been many times offset by the line moral and built up among the soldiers, these new soldiers of the new army. In days gone the lure of Chattanooga's red lights, plus booze of high and low estate, created a condition that was appalling as it was difficult to handle, meaning for the post and for the officials. Today this sort of thing is nearly negligible and Red Cross has been largely instrumental in bringing this about.

Close Touch With Home.
While the atmosphere attending and surrounding the Fort Oglethorpe Red Cross home is restful and character building, the spiritual side of life is not forgotten. Every Sunday when the post chaplain reaches the home he is confronted with a packed house, including a moderate sprinkling of civilians. The vines are not long from a half to three-quarters of an hour, but every moment of the time is enjoyed by the young soldiers.

One of the greatest services performed by Red Cross at army posts is that of keeping parents or relatives of soldiers in close touch with each other. The very moment a recruit is assigned to the branch of arms selected by him and he begins his journey to the designated point Red Cross writes his home, giving the new address, and every time that boy makes a move of any sort in the way of a permanent or semi-permanent transfer Red Cross does the same thing.

This phase of Red Cross army service not only saves Uncle Sam a very sizable sum of hard money each year, but it likewise subtracts a lot of hard labor from his multiplicity of labors for the whole people. Dependent parents or relatives of soldiers are told exactly how to proceed in the important matter of getting proper allotment. If dependents are unable for any reason to get behind the matter for themselves Red Cross gladly performs the service.

And in this work of keeping in touch with the loved ones, indeed, a merciful and profitable endeavor, there creeps in humor and tragedy, with now and then a matter-of-factness as to view that runs the gamut of human emotions. A big majority of the people think Red Cross can do anything, and they are more or less disappointed if the thing wanted is not done instantly.

For example, one mother writes this very emphatic but none the less heart appeal: "Get my boy out of the army right away," while another writes her need most pathetically when she says "please find my boy for me; he has two little brothers and a sister and we need his support."

And there is another angle, that of a mother's grim fear when she knows her son's whereabouts and lives in constant concern about his safety. One such mother wrote: "I am glad to know my boy is in the army, for now I always know exactly where he is." Another mother gave Red Cross rather a facet when she demanded this knowledge: "Where is my son; he is in Germany; find him." Red Cross found the boy at Coblenz.

Such appeals are given immediate attention, and in a brief period of time the parent or relative is given the desired information. In one instance a father asked Red Cross to find a son he had not heard from in four years. The case afforded some trouble, but before many weeks rolled by Red Cross obtained track of the boy, finally located him and then notified the father.

It not infrequently happens that boys and men go to Fort Oglethorpe for the purpose of enlisting. In the rigid inquiry that follows it develops that the applicant cannot be taken into the army. When the boy is informed of this there is considerably more of tragedy than anything else in the way he receives the news. To some it seems like a death blow; to others likewise a blow, but also a spur and stimulant to go out and do something "in spite of this."

Recently a bright, handsome, rather well educated young fellow sought to enlist, which he started out as a former convict. It was not long before he was found out, but he was not sent back to the penitentiary. He was given a good job there. The fare was only 17 cents, but Mason gave him a dollar with the injunction to return it when he could afford to spare the money.

"That was only a short time ago," said Mr. Mason. "He went to Chattanooga, secured a good position right away, and almost immediately he sent me an order for a dollar and a quarter-of-a-cent letter of thanks. I am convinced that young fellow told the exact truth about his conviction."

Larger Service to Men.
Red Cross army work finds a fruitful field for service in obtaining for enlisted men money that is due them. One case will illustrate hundreds of the same type. In November, 1917, the allotment of a sergeant became due. The sergeant's pay was $10.00. He had been in the army for some time, but he had never obtained any larger results from the government. He wrote to the Washington authorities, he employed lawyers to go into the matter and he interested congressmen in his behalf. Not a tangible thing was accomplished.

On February 6 of the current year he gave the case to Red Cross, and before the month ended the sergeant's family got the money so long due them. There are scores of similar cases for information, concerning function in the same efficient manner.

During the month of September Red Cross at Fort Oglethorpe handled 15 new home service cases, 105 information cases and had 49 requests from parents for information. Red Cross men supposed to be at Fort Oglethorpe. In addition to this 105 families living near the post received aid and the sort of comfort that counts heavily with life's unfortunates.

There is one instance of this service that is particularly noteworthy. It was reported at headquarters one morning in September that a father had died in a house near the post, and that the family needed help. When Mr. Mason reached the place he found an unthinkable and almost unbelievable condition. The father dead as reported, the mother ill and nine children in rags and a state of unpeakable filth. And the eleven were in one room, the living and the dead.

By a stroke of the same day the dead man had been given his last earthly care, the wretched little children bathed and properly clothed and their mother, who had been removed to a comfortable home in Chattanooga. The Red Cross chapter in Chattanooga has the family in charge.

This was purely civilian service and nearly every day at the post Red Cross is called upon to perform a similar duty for men and women not associated with army life. If an expectant mother needs a physician she is removed to the hospital and given every attention entirely without cost except such little medicine as might be required. It strikes me that this is very practical and worth while, not nearly so much because it saves many dollars to families not able to spare them, but because of the human equation of fellow service.

Constant Hospital Service.
In a pronounced sense it is rather staggering to learn that an appreciable number of enlisted men actually require aid in letter writing, but in many instances the letters actually have to be written for them. This service is gladly performed and in a manner that removes the least embarrassment on the part of the recruit. The courtesy because of his educational shortcomings. When the men first seek this service they come with a ready excuse and a blush. They leave with a smile and the consciousness that they have done nothing unusual.

Red Cross hospital service has always been a pronounced feature with the organization and it is so all the time. Aside from the nurses consistently in attendance, Miss Boykin, affectionately known as "Mother," makes one or more visits to the various wards each day, and in the afternoon she is on duty. She is the sunshine of the day and the chief hope of the hour of the day when she might reasonably be expected to appear. Glad to see her? Well, rather! She talks to the boys with impartial love and favor, and she brings them news of things to make them happy and contented. And her work at the home is just as charming and just as effective.

Incidentally, it may not be generally known that parents or relatives visiting the home at Fort Oglethorpe are "roomed" and otherwise cared for by Red Cross.

Red Cross Chapter.
So great has been the demand upon Red Cross from the neighborhood surrounding Fort Oglethorpe that division headquarters recently decided to organize a chapter to be known as Fort Oglethorpe Red Cross chapter. I am told the organization is well under way and instant approval among civilians, as it very properly should.

It would be wrong, then, to say that the new peace army of Uncle Sam could not dispense with Red Cross as an auxiliary, but I am within the facts when I state that both officers and men have vigorously and successfully protected every time such a thing has been suggested. Only a short time back American Red Cross presented its Fort Oglethorpe chapter to the army. It was very vigorously turned back with the request that Red Cross continue the service as it has been doing.

As to whether possible to expand it, no organization has ever received so much praise and sympathy as Red Cross. It is not possible for me to speak of the Red Cross work at other army posts, but I do know of one almost invaluable service that constantly is performed at Fort Oglethorpe, and that is the work of the Red Cross in the hospital and in the home.

They know what to do with the 60 per cent of recruits who seek army life for the adventure and education. They might offer, they understand the per cent of former service men who are back of the mental and temperamental shortcomings of that other per cent of new recruits hankering for glory, not what—humanity's constant offering of flotsam and jetsam, fitted for army life and nothing else.

Yes, Mr. Mason, Miss Motley and Miss Boykin are doing a great work at Fort Oglethorpe for the army boys and immediate civilian life. And they are doing so because they will.

THE THIEF

the poor chap when he listened to the girl's downfall and heard she was put away for three mortal years. He was a good sort of man and wouldn't believe a word. In truth, he properly raved about it and didn't rest, hand or foot, till he'd got permission to see Joanna. And he did see her, with two policemen in the room, and found her calm and steadfast, but thin and longways less beautiful than when last he'd said good-by.

She told him she was innocent, and no doubt 'twas a great light in her darkness that he believed it, and swore he'd wait for her and leave no stone unturned meantime to right her against the world.

So he left her and took work on the land not far from Ashburton; but as for righting her, or doing anything to clear up the business at Four Ways, of course he soon found that no power of man could work that.

"'Tis a case for God Almighty," said Mrs. Toms, "and you know she's innocent, Bob, and so do I, and so do Mrs. Blades—her that was Susan Turtle. She was a very faithful friend to Joanna and never believed a word against her to the last. And, trusting in Providence, same as I do and same as my husband always did, I believe a time must come when Joanna will be cleared."

Mrs. Toms, you see, had great faith, and she was so well thought upon that, despite Joanna's disgrace, none turned away from her mother, though none but felt only too sure that things were as they seemed to be. For if Joanna had looked to be married before long, what more terrible likely than that she wanted a little bit of money against her young man's return and had took this wicked way to come by it?

But then wonders were done in the land and the widow of old huntsman Jack Toms was proved to be in the right; for she'd trusted to Providence through thick and thin and believed that in the long run Providence never let down nobody that really trusted.

It came about, of all places, at the little tabernacle of the Primitive Baptists at Ashburton, and them most concerned in the business heard with their own ears and saw with their own eyes. And a very great lesson 'em and all of us unbelieving people and such as say the Lord of Hosts be tired of mankind in general and weary of their goings on.

There was a revival meeting, and Mr. Blades had got down a very fine gospeller with a wonderful flow of speech and a way of searching to the heart. He was a big success from the first evening, for he had the blessed gift of throwing light into the dark places and waking the sleeping soul with the trumpet of righteousness. A big hearted, hard bitten man, but genial and not puffed up; because he'd been a bad 'un himself in his time, and only saved from the burning by the voice of God in the month of his fellow man. And now it was his pride and privilege to do to others as he'd been done by and bring old and young to the penitent bench and help the good work of gathering souls to the harvest. 'Twas his third evening and, of course, Farmer Turtle and his wife supported the chapel, because their daughter

Their son went also, and being turned a good bit more serious of late, had took to showing an interest in the business of the soul, which ain't common among young men with their way to make in the world.

Anyway he attended the revival meetings with his parents, and Susan always sat beside 'em when they came. But much to the amazement of his family after the discourse on the third evening, when the people who had caught the holy fire rose to go to the bench, or testify, if young Tom didn't rise up also! As he'd had the light for years, there didn't seem no reason why he should do any such thing, and I believe his father was a bit annoyed with him for the moment; but young Tom didn't go up; he went out, and so Farmer's mind was set at rest, for he doubted not the youth had business elsewhere that called him.

If he'd known, however, what that business was, Mr. Turtle might have been a good bit surprised; and indeed he was so before the night had ended.

In a word, the heart of the amazing young man was smote at last. He'd gone to the police station, as a fitter place for him in his opinion than the penitent's bench; and there he'd told his story so far as the details was concerned, though all the fire and agony and horror behind it he never told. It was left for understanding men and women, who know where love may land a man, to see his sufferings and his madness through the veil darkly.

Young Tom had fallen into a frantic passion for Joanna from the moment she set foot in Four Ways. He'd made love to her fierce and terrible from the first, and she'd told him from the beginning that it couldn't be and she didn't love him. She'd made it clear also that her heart was not her own; but since her engagement to the sailor was a secret and she'd promised Bob Truscott never to speak of it, she didn't; and young Tom didn't believe it, or wouldn't believe, when she spoke of an understanding with another man. In secret he fought for her with all the fire and fury of first love and made her life a very difficult business no doubt; but he hid his heart from his parents' eyes, and her sense of right was such that she felt she couldn't do anything about it, or tell her trouble, but only appeal to him to spare her. He was deaf and blind, however, and didn't see that he was persecuting a woman who'd got no use for him and never would have. He kept on hoping against hope, as lovers will, and at last the time came for Joanna to go, for she couldn't stand no more. She never for a moment thought that love would drive the man into crime, nor did she guess that after he'd made her mad one evening and she had spoke bitter words to him and called him a mean coward and bid him leave her alone, that his baffled passions would turn into bitter hatred. But so they had done, and all the flood of love in him turned to bitter gall and he set out to ruin her.

Which he had done.

His unsleeping fires drove him to this wickedness and he made his plot according, stole the things one by one, and then planted 'em upon her. He knewed, when dallying with her in the past, that she kept the key of her box in her little handbag, and when she was in the dairy and the house empty he'd gone to her room and got an impression of the key in a bit of dough and had one made far ways off, where he wasn't known. Then, the day she was out, he put all the things in her box, and having already planned the fire, took a handkerchief and a letter. The devil never put an easier job into the mind of a mad man. And when she'd gone, everything was ripe for the wheat stacks. He set a light to them himself and went to bed; and when all had gone to rest after the fire, he crept down again and put the letter he'd half burned and the handkerchief where they must be found after. And everything fell out exactly as he had ordained.

But then he had to pay the devil's wages, and after three months of tidy torment, and the thought of his ruined life and that girl in prison, he began to wish he was dead. In truth he thought to slay himself, and if he had, without confessing, the wrong would have gone hidden till the Trump; but that's where Providence took up the running, and it was mercifully put his heart to own up and take the consequences. Somebody had to pay, of course, but 'tis the way of great evils that often the innocent be called to suffer worse than the guilty. It killed his mother. She wilted away like a gathered flower, and died six months after. By then young Tom was in Canada, for he left England immediate and was away almost before the full side of the truth came to be known. He wanted to go to prison, I believe; but his father sent him to Canada instead; and Joanna and her mother never did anything against him, though they well might, 'twas thought in law.

Joanna, however, decided that she wasn't much surprised to hear the bitter truth. She knew before the end that the man hated her with a deadly hatred; and when she was asked why she never told about him persecuting her for love, or tried to make a case against him for her own good name's sake, she explained that like the simple creature she was.

"Father always told me that if a man offered marriage and I didn't take him, I must never mention the subject, or name the man's name, out of honor and fairness to him," she said, "and whatever father told me to do, I always did do."

That was Joanna; and when she came out of prison, a generous government only said she was dismissed without a stain on her character, but never offered a penny piece for all she'd been called to endure! Governments never get so spare money when 'tis only a question of their honor. That never troubles 'em. But the nation's a thought higher minded than the government, thank God, and a very tidy purse comed along after the girl took her sailor. And such a wedding she had at Ashburton as would have done credit to a royal princess.

FASHION WEAVES INTO SILK THE DREAMS OF A DEBUTANTE

bit of sapphire chiffon to

THE curtain of time has slowly rolled up until now before us on the stage of the season is the debutante.

Drab sub-deb days are over and now dreams are about to come true. Models, florists, entertainers, caterers—yes, even lovers are awaiting to serve her whim. But Fashion has done even more, for Fashion has already served the debutante! For evidence, witness the debut of these three little models just for the jeune fille who is "coming out."

Contrary to the "Gauls who came bearing gifts," Milady Deb comes out bearing flowers! And very appropriately, therefore, does her frock bear flowers as its trimming.

A rather crispy chiffon taffeta of orchid hue chooses puffy hips to call attention to trailing flowers of red lavender, which fall below their bouffancy. A bit of wicker tulle about the neck and some silver trimming at its very hem are the attractive extremes to which this model goes.

Or should one happen to be a bit sophisticated, even upon the eve of one's coming out, then one may choose a frock of silver cloth veiled with green chiffon, just as green as the emerald upon her finger. The green chiffon be loaded with crystal beads and trimmed with lavender flowers veiled in silver net, still that silver cloth gleams mistily thru it. And where beads and flowers are not, there it boldly twinkles as does also the silver girdle which can boast as a "silk" issue two rather long ends. As Milady Deb is, oh, so slender, she may yield to the rare charms of just a single hoop.

Tulle is sponsored by Fashion, but it must be used in a dream such as this one of the gold trimming. A veritable web of gold is the underskirt with the bodice of yellow chiffon taffeta. Yellow tulle trimmed with narrow bands of metal trimming complete the symphony in yellow and gold.

Thus in the debuts of these youthful gowns has Fashion proved her service to the debutante. She has taken Milady Deb's loveliest dreams and made them tangible things of silk, chiffon and metal cloth.

Ah, Fashion wove that into yellow tulle and golden trimming.*

That youthful dream of charm and beauty here comes true in rusty taffeta
